and daughter On sunday from 2:30 to 5:30 the Ryley School held "Open House". Mrs. Noah Wideman, who taught Junior High School with Mr. Parsons for many years attended the guest book. With her was Mrs. Denzil Solberg, a former student of Ryley School. Informally arranged in the gym were a chesterfield and chairs for Mr. Parsons and his guests and scattered tables for all who attended. The tables were attractively decorated with cejercpieces A backdrop depicting the Amisk Creek School hung on the wall and huge colorful flowers added a note of color here and there.

Chairman for the afternoon was Henry Van Berkel, principal of Ryley School. From friends in this and other communities, E. Albrecht Mayor of Ryley, presented Mr. Parsons with a purse of money and a silver plaque engraved with these words.

"Presented to Mr. Parsons on the occasion of his retirement from teaching in appreciation of his years of dedication to the profession. Of high ideals and virtue was his speech And gladly would he learn and gladly teach."

George Knudsiten of Beaver County School Committee, in his own inimitable way, humorously revelled the days he spent in grade three with Mr. Parsons as his teacher. On behalf of the County of Beaver, he presented Mr. Parsons with a chiming mantel clock W. Warren of Viking, on behalf of the Local Alberta Teachers Association, presented Mr. Parsons with an engraved gold wrist watch and on behalf of the Provincial A.T.A., extended him a life membership in the association.

Mrs. Harriett Ruddy, a teaching associate of many years, high-lighted the life history of Mr. Parsons, paying special tribute to his devotion to his students Marvin Bruce, Superintendent of Schools for the County of Beaver and a close friend of many years standing, reminisced on their association over the years revealing many deeds of kindness and many hidden qualities of a fine man. In speaking of Mr. Parsons' outstanding career, he emphasized not only his teaching expertise, but his understanding, encouragement, and skilful guidance of all the young people with whom he came in contact. In concluding his remarks, he read an excerpt from Mr. Parsons' highly moving letter of resignation, the theme of which was a thank-you to students, parents and school committee members for the "privilege" of being given the opportunity to teach the young people of Ryley School.

Mr Van Berkel spoke of the two years he had worked with Mr. Parsons in the school and presented him with an album of pictures and anecdotes of his many students. During the afternoon, the Ryley School Choir under the direction of Mrs. Beth Kope and accompanied by Mrs. Olive Zeiserchke, sang an original number composed for the occasion entitled, "Please, Mr. Parsons Play Your Piano" and one other, "I Believe in Music". Mr Parsons, in a very sincere and moving speech, thanked everyone for the tribute paid to him and for work of all those who had contributed to the afternoon.

Following the ceremonies, the ladies of the Mennonite Church under the direction of Mrs. J. Voeglin served a buffet lunch during which time the many visitors reminisced with Mr. Parsons.

Honored guests were members of Mr. Parsons' family: his sisters, Mrs. Elsie Clark and family of Ryley and Mrs. Anne Warren and family of Elk Point; his brother, Norman Parsons and family of Edmonton; a nephew, Barry Clark and his wife, both teachers in Strither; a neice, Mrs. Beverly Lupul and family of Edmonton; and a cousin, Hans Christensen and wife of Tofield.

The Tofield W.C.T.U. Meeting was held on Nov. 14th at the home of Mrs. Norma Anderson with 9 ladies present. The devotion was given by Mrs. Anne Anderson. 3 members were able to attend the rally of the W.C.T.U. in Edmonton on Oct. 20th. The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. A. Taekema in January.

Tofield Hospital gets accreditation standard

The Tofield Municipal Hospital was advised in a letter from Dr. L. O. Bradley, M.D., Executive Director, Canadian Council on Hospital Accreditation that the hospital has been awarded accreditation status for a period of two years.

The Canadian Council on Hospital Accreditation is an organization governed through a twelve member board who are appointed by four sponsoring organizations The Canadian Hospital Association, The Canadian Medical Association, The Royal College of Physicians and Surgeons of Canada and L'Association des Medecins de Langue Francaise du Canada.

The primary objective of the organization is to improve the quality of patient care in Canadian hospitals. To achieve this objective the Council has established standards for quality patient care which must be met if a hospital wishes to become accredited. The accreditation program is on a voluntary basis, and hospitals that wish to become accredited must apply to the Council for a survey. The Council then appoints a Surveyor who visits the hospital and reports to the Board of Directors of the Council. The report is reviewed by the Board of Directors and if the hospital meets the required standards accreditation status is awarded and a certificate of accreditation is issued to the hospital

The Tofield Hospital made the request for a survey in the Month of March, 1973, with the actual survey taking place on September 7, 1973. The report from the survey was then assessed by the Board of Directors of the Council, and accreditation status was awarded for a two year period At the end of the two years, the survey will be repeated to ensure that the standards as established by the Council are being maintained, and, if the Hospital can be continued.

Hockey league gets underway

On Saturday, the Beaverhill Hockey League got underway with games in Tofield and Andrew.

In Tofield, the Smoky Lake Imperials made their debut in an unsuccessful fashion as they were bombed 11-4 by the Ryley Flyers.

Smoky Lake started off fast scoring the first two goals, but after that it was all Ryley. Lorne Lehman was the big gun for Ryley picking up five goals and two assists.

In Andrew, the hometown Aces defeated Grand Forks 8-3.

On Tuesday night, in Tofield, the Aces picked up their second win in as many starts as they downed Tofield 6-4.

Plans being finalized for annual carol show

The annual Christmas Carol Festival, sponsored by the Tofield Community League, will be held in the Community Centre on Tuesday, December 18. Henry Schroeder of Sr., Tofield's "Mr. Music", is actively engaged in securing entries for the Festival and is happy to report that in addition to the Community Choir which is to be formed, there are a number of church and school entries from the surrounding people in the Tofield and Ryley areas.

The Tofield Ministerial Association is in charge of the arrangements for this popular event of the Christmas season. Anyone wishing information about the Carol Festival is advised to contact the Rev. Stanley Bosse, in Tofield

BURSARY AWARDED

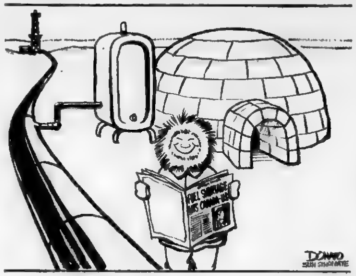
Denise Eastlick was the recipient of the bursary awarded by the Tofield Catholic Women's League for the best essay written in Grade Nine during the June exams in 1973. Mrs. Joan Colline, vice-president of the C.W.L. presented the cheque to Denise at the Christmas meeting of the C.W.L. held at the Eastlick home on December 3. Denise, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. K. R. Eastlick, has previously won a provincial first prize in the Alberta Safety Council essay contest.

COMMUNITY CHRISTMAS CARD

There is a way to avoid the mad expense of sending local Christmas cards and yet have one's greetings conveyed to friends in the Tofield area.

A donation to the Tofield Community League's Christmas Card fund will ensure the town's good wishes being on display in the window of the community Centre all during the Christmas season.

Bert Everitt at Everitt's Foodland, and John Lovgren at the Tofield Coop will accept the donations, and Hans Christensen, treasurer of the Tofield Community League, will issue receipts for income tax purposes.



Watch and wait

Albertans probably more than any other Canadians will be watching to see how skillfully Premier Lougheed has worked out his strategy in combatting the Trudeau government's imposts against Alberta oil, with his announcements on Monday of a wholely new approach to the question of royalties.

There's no question but what the strategy seems a skillful one, and there's no question but that it's ingenious. It has all the earmarks of having been carefully worked over, detail by detail, just as a master move in a chess game is carefully planned before being executed.

It's interesting to see how hard it is for Albertans to see themselves cast in the role of villains in this particular performance, but it's not surprising that in no way do we see ourselves as the villains. Basically, it seems to us, we all see ourselves as the "good guys", somewhat misunderstood and unfairly criticized, but determined to pursue a proper path to the end, if need be.

All the best information we've been able to glean says there is no energy crisis, not in Alberta or even anywhere in Canada. There may be an energy problem in some parts further east, but no crisis.

The funny thing is that Albertans can remember all those years, right up until just about two or three years ago, too, when we were pleading with other people to take up our supplies of oil. We wanted to ship more to the Western States, but they'd have none of it. We urged Eastern Canada to consider national interests just a little more than the mere dollars involved in buying cheaper offshore crude, but to very little avail. As a matter of fact, it was a major victory for the West to get the Ottawa Valley line, which divides Montreal markets from Sarnia markets, pushed as far East as we did.

The eastern reaction to the purchase of western oil was almost like that of poor Prime Minister Trudeau when he rather pathetically asked in Regina: "Why should I sell your wheat?"

Some people feel that Premier Lougheed has been running a bluff, but this we disagree with. In our opinion, he's basically fighting for the survival of Alberta, for if our oil revenues go down the drain, the province will sink a long way down the drain, too. And it will take years to recover.

On the one hand, there's the possibility of making this work to our advantage through the attracting of much new industry to energy rich areas, and maintaining the revenues of the province for years to come. On the other hand, there's the possibility of losing that revenue, losing not only chances for expansion, but much of that which we already have.

The stakes are undoubtedly high, but Alberta seems to hold some pretty good cards in the deal. And Premier Lougheed gives every indication of being a pretty good poker player.

4-H really works

Many times this column has drawn attention to the value and the contribution of 4-H training for young people, and the almost amazing improvement in breed levels that has resulted from a quarter century or so of 4-H activity right in this area.

It's rather interesting to go just a little further afield, and learn how well 4-H'ers have achieved in the Ontario region, where a total of 208 entries in the 1973 Queen's Guineas Competition at the Toronto Royal Winter Fair. Merely getting into the Royal is tough going, but for 208 young members to do it is remarkable.

But even that record is topped with the news that Fred Thompson, a Grade XII student from Orangeville showing for the first time in the Queen's Guineas, walked off with the Grand Championship, while eighteen-year-old Ross Walsh from Peterborough copped the reserve grand championship. First was a Simmental [illegible] while the reserve was purebred Hereford.

WRITER DISAGREES

Tofield, Alberta

Dec. 2 1973.

The Editor

Sir:

The editorial 'No change in Sixty Years' in last week's paper deserves some comment, and unfortunately, I can't find any complimentry comments to make.

The writer displays complete ignorance of the role of the Canadian Grain Commission. A little research on the part of the writer would have paid off handsomely. For those that did read the editorial I hope they aren't completely confused by the implications of it.

Regardless of what Mr. Pound Chief Commissioner, said, there has been some change in the maximum storage tariff. True - at the present moment, the storage tariff is the same as as it was in 1912 - but, in the intermit has changed in 1945-46 it was one forty-fifth of a cent per bus. per day, then in 1946-47 it was changed to one thirty of a cent, then from 1947-48 to 1949-50 it was one twenty-fifth of a cent, then to one thirtieth of a cent in 1950-51. It has remained at that ever since, with the exception of one year 1957-58 when it was one thirty-fifth of a cent per bus. per day.

The point to remember is that this is the maximum allowable tariff that the elevator companies can charge. They could charge less but seldom do.

On reading the last paragraph of the editorial I became completely exasperated. There ought to be a law against writing statements. To quote from the editorial - "Getting back to Mr. Pound ...maybe he'd be happier if the price were a fixed percentage of the price the farmer gets. When the farmers get a real break, for instance, the grain commission would profit handsomely, and when the price breaks, the commission might have to tighten its belt That's not the way the system works, you say?"

Exactly - that's what I say. This is completely wrong. The Canadian Grain Commission receives absolutely nothing from the storage tariffs. The above statement implies that it does. This is completely wrong. The Commission, in a sense regulates the tariff The tariff is charged by the elevator companies. They receive any income that is derived from it - the Canadian Grain Commission receives nothing from any maximum storage tariff.

If the editorial writer can't write any better informed editorials than the above he should not write editorials at all, or else, start checking the facts before it does go into print.

Ottawa Viewpoint

By Peter Ward

Energy Minister Donald Macdonald has a reputation for being a tough, competent cabinet minister, but a guy who is too often unnecessarily abrasive

Personally, I read Macdonald's desires in the field of energy policy for the country as being based on sound, rapidly acquired knowledge of a very complex field.

But he's had troubles selling his ideas in cabinet, and the result has been frustration for Macdonald, a continuation of crisis ad hockery for energy policy. Perhaps the frustrations are the cause of some of Macdonald's recent forays into abrasiveness

Those who have been around Ottawa for a few years remember vividly the troubles Macdonald had as House Leader for the government, when achieving agreement with opposition parties on procedural matters could never be obtained

That same Macdonald trait of firing off cheap verbal shots is causing him — and the country problems again

In early November former U.S Undersecretary of State George Ball spoke in Toronto and said a few things that angered Macdonald considerably. Well, Ball is an investment dealer now, not a member of the U.S. administration. A Canadian Energy Minister could afford to ignore him. Not Macdonald.

He told us that Ball had once been described as a "Mastodon" because of his tendancy to sit on things without knowing what he was doing Good shot; great news copy — but entirely unnecessary.

In the next breath Macdonald was telling the television cameras that British Columbian Premier Dave Barrett didn't really know what he was talking about.

Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield, waiting for his turn at the TV lights, watched the performance and summed it up with a sad shake of his head

"As if he hasn't got enough fights on his hands already," said Starfield

Please, Don Macdonald, curb the temper and stick to the battles that matter. Otherwise a considerable talent will go down the political drain.

Is the hockey helmet you bought a safe one?

Ottawa, November 30, 1973

— Recent tests conducted by Consumers' Association of Canada on 13 popular makes of hockey helmets indicate that only three brands offer adequate protection to the wearer: Spalding HHI, CCM Pro-Standard 504328 and Cooper SK300. These helmets all bear the seal of the Canadian Standards Association and were much superior to the non-CSA helmets tested.

Although Cooper SK300 helmets provided protection at room temperatures of 72°F, some of them cracked when subjected to blows of 20 foot pounds at 8°F and were rated "unacceptable" by CAC for wear in outdoor winter temperatures.

The other ten helmets tested by the Association proved "unacceptable" at any temperature: CCM Pro-Gard 504-314, CCM Pro-Standard 504-324, Cooper SK100, Mastercraft 83-2535 and 83-2537, Mylec 150, Patterson, Stratoflite HH72, Winnwell 420 and 421.

In October, the Federal Department of Consumer and Corporate Affairs announced that only hockey helmets which meet the CSA standard may be sold in Canada after January 1, 1974. CAC is concerned that retailers may feature pre-Christmas sales on these helmets and urges shoppers to think safety when purchasing protective hockey helmets. CAC advises parents to ensure that their child wears only a helmet that meets the new safety regulations.

CAC stresses that while a player's head may be adequately protected at the time a helmet cracks, it must be replaced once it has cracked even slightly.

The Association is releasing advance notice of its test results as a service to consumers. Results may not be used for commercial purposes.

For complete details of CAC's tests on hockey helmets, see the February issue of Canadian Consumer, on sale at most newstands in mid-January.

Consumers' Association of Canada is a voluntary non-profit association with a membership of 110,000, representing the consumer viewpoint to federal, provincial and local governments.

Big Three holds meet

by Grace Phillips

A cheque received from The Mercury was a feature of the regular meeting of the Big Three held last Friday in the drama room of the Tofield School with president Barry Jones in the chair.

Shannon Brady, speaking on behalf of the newly-organized cheerleaders, asked for help in buying suitable uniforms for the group. Her request was approved by the students.

Sports' reports were given by Melody Henriksen and Dean McLeod showing that the teams had done very well in recent events.

Janet Schocher, social convenor, announced plans for a Christmas skating party and dance to be held on December 7th.

As in previous years, the Big Three will buy gifts up to the value of $10.00 to be given to children in the area. Mrs. Boyles Welfare Officer for Tofield, will supply a list of required gifts.

Program convenor had arranged for some entertainment and this was much enjoyed.

NECESSITY DICTATES POLICY

There's an old saying that goes 'politics make strange bedfellows'; the British remind us occasionally that bedfellows make strange politics; but the United States and Russia currently demonstrate that economics are the realities of life - not ideologies.

The United States is short of petroleum energy - the Soviet is short of fertilizer. So a deal is reported in the making - one that would see U.S. capital build fertilizer plants in Russia with partial payment in the form of liquified natural gas. Some of the fertiliser might also be returned to the U.S. and other countries for sale, to enable Russia to earn hard currency to help pay for the fertilizer plants.

Such a project would be big - requiring close cooperation between the highest levels of U.S. Soviet government. It's interesting how nature and necessity combine to make partners of opposing world powers.

Police join forces in combatting drugs

During the past five months a Joint Police Forces' operation has been conducted in the Province of Alberta aimed at the trafficking of narcotic drugs.

Six Alberta policemen have worked undercover in drug operations in several cities and towns in Alberta, principally Edmonton and Calgary. The six policemen were members of three Police Forces. They consisted of two members of the Edmonton City Police, one member of the Calgary City Police and three members of the RCMP. The six policemen were assisted throughout the operation by numerous plain-clothes personnel from the three Police Forces.

As a result of this Joint Police Forces effort, a total of 180 charges have been laid and 117 Warrants to Arrest have been issued. The arrests of accused persons commenced in September by the three Police Forces.

In Edmonton, 75 charges were laid, involving 43 persons. Of these charges, 71 were for the alleged trafficking of heroin. The remaining charges were for the alleged trafficking of chemicals and soft drugs.

In Calgary, a total of 60 charges were laid involving 36 persons. Of these charges, 56 were for the alleged trafficking of heroin. The remainder were for the alleged trafficking of chemicals and soft drugs.

Investigations were conducted also in nine locations in the Province. They are Banff, Canmore, Fort McLeod, Hinton, Fort McMurray, Grande Prairie, Jasper, Lethbridge and Red Deer. A total of 44 charges have been laid at these centres which involves 37 persons.

'Studs' could pose travelling problem

"To use, or not to use". That question should be given careful consideration by motorists planning a winter vacation in Canada and the United States with studded tires.

Investigation by the Alberta Motor Association indicates that in Canada, the Yukon, Northwest Territories, Alberta, Saskatchewan, and New Brunswick, there are no regulations governing the use of studded tires.

The Provinces of Nova Scotia and Quebec permit the use of studded tires between October 15th and April 15th. British Columbia and Manitoba allow the use of studs between October 1st and November 30th. Newfoundland, November 1st and April 30th, and Prince Edward Island between November 1st and May 31st.

BEFORE YOU SIGN!!

'Tis the season for making major purchases and signing contracts. Television, radio and magazines are constantly telling us NOW is the time to buy that new car or automatic washer or chesterfield suite. For most of us, purchases in this realm can not be paid for in cash so we sign a contract and pay for it by credit installments.

When buying on credit, it is extremely important to know the terms of the contract. Many province have legislation requiring that contracts disclose certain information to you, the consumer. If you are buying on credit you should be aware of the disclosure requirements and ensure that they are fulfilled before signing any agreement.

The following information should be clearly stated in the credit agreement

1. A clear description of the goods being purchased, or in a loan agreement, the security pledged for the loan.

2. The actual cash price of the goods; or in case of a loan, the principal amount of the loan. Installation or delivery charges should be a separate notation.

3. The amount of the down payment or value of a trade-in, if any.

4. The difference between the cash price of the goods and down payment plus the trade-in value.

5. The total amount of credit finance charges on the balance to be paid expressed both in dollars and cents and as an annual percentage rate.

6. The total amount of the debt to be paid

7 The amount, due date and frequency of installment payments.

8. The basis on which additional charges can be made in event of default in payments.

With Winter upon us and the holiday around the corner many consumers will be making large purchases on their credit cards and store accounts. Do you know how much you are paying for credit? Has the company met all the terms of the contract? Can you realistically meet all the terms of the agreement? What happens if you can't meet the payments one month? Please Read Before You Sign!

What have you got to lose?

if nobody has all the answers, maybe there's really no question.

AFTER so many years of listening to the extremists argue the pros and cons of government versus open marketing, most Western Canadian grain producers have decided that neither side has all the answers

On one hand we demand economic justice brought about through such measures as a quota system and fair allocation of the handling facilities

On the other hand we know that too much control in the hands of government civil servants can eventually result in a loss of the farmer's freedom to decide what to grow and how to sell his product, all in the name of the greatest common good.

The forthcoming rapeseed poll presents another opportunity for more government control over the activities of farmers, many of whom are the descendants of men who in the first place came to Western Canada to get away from controls of some form or another

The government has promised that if the rapeseed poll does not result in all rapeseed going through the CWB, each producer may choose the system under which he sells his own crop each year.

Of course this choice can be made only if there is an open market remaining for Canadian agricultural commodities.

So voting "undecided" could be your way of telling the government you want a choice.

Before you cast your ballot in the rapeseed poll, we suggest you give the matter plenty of thought.

After all, once you surrender freedom of choice, you never get it back.

Water drops, so does use, as Cooking Lake remedy sought

A two-year study of the Cooking Lake watershed to conserve and enhance its resources has been undertaken by the environment department.

The study is aimed at making the region an "environment management area" and is the result of concern over declining water levels in district lakes.

Environment minister Bill Yurko who announced the study said it would examine the social, economic and environmental aspects of the district and recommend improvements.

The principal lakes involved are Cooking, Hastings, Miquelon, Ministik and Beaverhill, all in the 1,300-mile watershed that borders on Edmonton's eastern outskirts.

These lakes are used for recreational purposes by the people of the region and Edmonton. Cooking and Hastings are two of the most developed and Miquelon has a provincial park. The area also includes Elk Island National Park.

Water levels in the various lakes have dropped between two and 18 feet during the last 30 years. Cooking Lake dropped three feet from May, 1968, to May, 1971.

The decline has been correlated with slightly rising temperatures and dropping precipitation in the area.

Similar correlations have been made for other Alberta lakes, such as Gull and Sylvan, where water levels have declined although the correlations are not the same in each case.

Land use is another factor which could be involved in the water loss but the influence of activities such as tree cutting and road building has not been determined.

Residents of the region have expressed anxiety over the water levels for several years and in 1970 a petition from more than 600 citizens near Cooking and Hastings Lakes was presented to the government seeking action to save the lakes.

Various studies have been undertaken and one by EPEC Consulting Ltd. of Edmonton found it was feasible to pump water from the North Saskatchewan River to restore Cooking and Hastings Lake at a cost of $4.4 million. At a higher cost, water could be pumped through a chain of connected lakes to Miquelon and eventually into Cooking and Hastings.

In 1970 the Environment Conservation Authority (ECA) held public hearings into the immediate area of Cooking and Hastings Lakes, but the hearings were expanded to include the whole watershed because of concerns expressed at the hearing.

However, the remedy may not be so simple as to raise the levels of all lakes. Residents around Hastings were concerned that raising the level at Cooking Lake, which flows into Hastings would cause flooding at the second lake, which has dropped less.

The situation is different further downstream at Beaverhill Lake. The low water level has exposed large areas of land which have been put to productive agriculture use; increased levels would make the lands inaccessible.

The lake is also recognized as an important waterfowl production area.

The formation of the Cooking Lake Moraine Management Committee was a result of recommendations by the ECA that extensive studies be started as soon as possible. The need for fast action in restoring levels was emphasized at the hearings.

The management committee includes representatives of local governments, the City of Edmonton, wildlife and agricultural groups, several provincial government department and boards, the national and historic parks branch and the Electric Utility Planning Council.

A technical task force appointed by the committee is to first study ways of augmenting water supplies, which is basic to any other considerations.

At least two years of study by some experts, such as biologists, is needed to get an accurate picture of plant and animal activity in the region.

Airlift clothes to help Indian pupils

A truck load of used clothing gathered from a variety of sources left Camrose early Tuesday morning, bound for Trout Lake, where it is expected it will be used to help relieve some of the problems of a number of Indian children living in poverty ridden circumstances.

Carrying Alderman Sparling, Mrs. Rita Nyback and Mrs. Grace Lemay, the truck was headed for Lesser Slave Lake, which is as far as the road goes towards Trout Lake. Practically all other contact with the outside world is by plane.

The need for clothing came through to Mrs. Sparling when she was in touch with a Mrs. Hodgson, an Indian woman who lived in Camrose for a couple of years while she attended Camrose Lutheran College. Later she moved to Edmonton, completed her degree in education, then accepted a post teaching 66 Indian children at Trout Lake. Hardship is no stranger to Mrs. Hodgson . . . she struggled to raise six children of her own while attending college and university.

Mrs. Hodgson related to Mrs. Sparling the problems the children face with inadequate clothing, yet having to be transported to school in open vehicles.

Mrs. Sparling was inspired by the thought there might be a good deal of clothing in the lost and found bins at the swimming pool and skating arena, then went from there to the lost and found departments of local schools. When her project became known, many of the children also brought material from home, and many articles were dropped off at the Sparling home to be included in the "parcel" she was going to build up. Almost a truck load of material came from the Composite High School, said Mrs. Sparling.

Mrs. Sparling called on the Rotary Club for help in finding the money to fly in her parcel, but as the load grew larger and larger, the decision was made to drive to Trout Lake, and try to load it aboard the regular cargo plane flying the route into Trout Lake, rather than having it flown from Edmonton.

Mrs. Sparling said the story of abject poverty in the region was fully substantiated by a government worker she knows, who has had contact. The residents of the area have nothing, she said, adding that Mrs. Hodgson had stated any kind of clothing is acceptable.

Tymchak is Holden queen

Bernice Tymchak was the lucky contestant to be crowned queen of the "Holden Sportex Carnival."

The two-day carnival, which was sponsored by the Holden and District Agricultural Society, got under way with a delicious turkey supper, bingo and numerous games of chance, followed with a dance and crowning of the Carnival Queen during the final evening.

Allen Zwierschke, president of the Agricultural Society, crowned Miss Tymchak as queen. She was the young lady who sold the most tickets, which entitled her to that special honor.

The princesses were: Debbie Semotiuk, Cheryl Grosland, Darlene Helfrich, Anita Erickson, Debbie Koetke and Susan Cooper.

Mayor Sam Black presented the queen with a large trophy for her efforts, and each princess received a miniature replica as a momento of the occasion. William Ogradnick, representing the Agricultural Society, presented each contestant with an envelope containing a cheque

Agricultural Society will meet this Monday

The annual meeting of the Tofield Agricultural Society will be held on Monday, December 17th commencing at 8:00 p.m. in the Library, Tofield Community Hall.

The meeting will review the operation of the Tofield Agriculture Society and the Tofield Arena during the period December 1st, 1972 to November 30th, 1973. A financial report will be given, the budget for 1973-74 will be reviewed, and the election of officers will be held.

In addition, the Tofield Agricultural Society is sending a special invitation to all other clubs, organizations, associations and churches in the area to attend the meeting.

It was in the spring of 1971 that a meeting was held at which all such groups attended to consider the feasibility of building an arena. The decision of that meeting in the Tofield Community Hall was that an arena be built if adequate funding could be obtained.

In November and December 1971, planning began following the approval of a $50,000 grant from the Department of Agriculture. The arena was completed in August, 1972 and began operations in November, 1972.

The original debt on the arena was $70,000. Interest payments amounted to approximately $145 per month. Subsequently the loan was reduced to $61,000 but interest payments are now in the neighbourhood of $175 per month.

The original plans were that canvasses would be held in 1972, 1973 and 1974, to raise funds to reduce the debt. The 1972 canvass netted $35,176. The 1973 canvass, only partially completed last spring, raised $1,800. The directors feel that this canvass must be completed. It is also felt that a 1974 canvass should be held.

We are now in the second year of operations. The directors believe that this is the opportune time to meet as a community of interested citizens and organizations to give consideration to all aspects of the operation of the arena. We know that there are concerns about ice time, financing and other features of its operation. We need your assistance, your advice and your participation.

Please, then, consider this as a special invitation to all members of the community, to all members of the organization, club, association or church to which this letter is addressed to attend the meeting on December 17th

Lamont is undefeated in senior hockey loop

On Thursday night in Tofield, the Grand Forks Gulls surprised a lot of people, especially the Ryley Flyers as they came from behind to tie the defending changes.

The Flyers jumped off to a 3-0 lead in the first period and it appeared as though they had the game in hand and were off to an easy victory. The big surprise came in the second period when the Gulls fought back to tie the score 3-3. Two of the three Gull goals were scored in the last minute of play in the second period.

There was no scoring in the third period. Dennis Wideman led the Grand Forks attack with two goals, while Gord Boettger added a single. Ken Boettger, Lorne Lehman and Wade Magneson scored for Ryley.

Gull goaltender Don Ozubko was brillant as he robbed Ryleys big shooters numerous times. Ryley did not play one of its stronger games, but full marks have to given to Grand Forks for their aggressive play. If they continue this style, they will certainly improve on last years performance.

In Smoky Lake meanwhile Lamont out scored the home town Imperials 10-7.

On Saturday night in Tofield, the Flyers and Satellites had a real close contest until the third period when Ryley scored 7 unanswered goals. Don Shantz picked up 4 goals for the winners, Rod Marten added 3, Ken Boettger and Elston Salbelg each added a pair while Lorne Lehmen added a single

Ted Whyte scored 3 times for the losers while Ken Stauffer, Leo Rucha and Keen added singles

On Tuesday in Tofield, Smoky Lake won their first game of the season as they won over Grand Forks 7-3.

In Lamont, the Nuggets stretched their undefeated string to three games as they edged Tofield 7-6.

The league resumes on Thursday night with games in Tofield and Andrew

Buck wants a committee to be formed

Clover Bar M.L.A., Dr. Walter Buck, introduced a motion in the Legislature calling for the Assembly to establish a select committee to "study and make recommendations upon all aspects of ambulance service in rural Alberta."

The Private Members' Resolution was initiated as a result of feed-back Buck received from his constituency and other parts of the province expressing concern about the costs and accessibility of ambulance service to rural Albertans

Buck noted "it is vital and essential that an immediate start be made at assessing the costs, and problems facing rural ambulance service, so that government may take decisive action at the earliest possible time."

That last check

We were interested this week in surveying a list of some sixty orders in council passed last week at a meeting of the provincial cabinet, to find that one dealt with only $[illegible] to cover the cost of some shoes ruined during the spring [illegible] in Camrose in the basement of [illegible]. We're glad to know that [illegible] will get his shoes [illegible] but we're also fascinated that even this amount [illegible] without approval from the Cabinet. [illegible] other items ranging into the millions of dollars [illegible] total gas royalty regulations, it probably didn't even draw more than a [illegible] checked and rechecked [illegible] [illegible] the last minute [illegible]

Enough of this [illegible] talk about Northwestern Utilities cutting off my furnace. They were within their rights. It was leaking gas in the building, and very rusty.

Those that are condemning the Company would be the first to complain if they weren't at their door by the time the phone is hung up.

Dear Sir,

Did you know there have been interesting things going on at the Tofield Historical Museum lately? With the help of a winter works grant received through the Provincial Museum and Archives Branch of the Culture, Youth and Recreation Department and the advice and instruction from one of their staff, Mr. [illegible], the local museum is being updated.

Members of the Tofield Historical Society have been busy in their spare time. Harold Schultz made the necessary arrangements for getting the grant and setting up the meeting with Mr. [illegible] and helping here and there like the good [illegible] [illegible] has been wielding his [illegible] paint brush giving a face lift to the interior of the museum. Eddie Lancaster is very busy with pen and typewriter cataloging all the antiques and artifacts in the correct way so that a record will be there of every article and if possible the name of the donor will be recorded. Nola Ferguson, armed with cloths and cleaners, has started cleaning the furniture and many of the smaller pieces in storage. Arrangements have been made to have some display cases built so that articles can be arranged to better advantage after they have been cleaned and numbered.

Tofield museum has an excellent collection of pioneer household furniture, cooking utensils, pictures, all manner of antiques, some of which might have been donated by your parents or grandparents, and when the [illegible] [illegible] is completed will make a display well worth viewing.

The museum is located on the school grounds and the members of the Historical Society hope it will be possible to open the building for the public at such times that would be convenient, for example, on parent-teacher days.

Urea — A cheap source of protein

Urea is by far the most widely used source of non-protein nitrogen (NPN) that is used anywhere in the world for ruminants.

According to Jerome Martin, the Alberta Department of Agriculture's animal nutritionist, it is also the simplest of the NPN compounds; the most readily available; and the cheapest to buy on a nitrogen basis. Its cost per unit of protein is considerably lower than that of conventional protein supplements like soybean and rapeseed meal.

One pound of urea is equivalent to 2.81 pounds of pure nitrogen. This is the maximum amount of protein which rumen micro-organisms can synthesize from a pound of urea. Because urea is an industrial product that is manufactured in large quantities, it costs about $100 per ton, which works out to about 2 cents per pound of protein. Forty four percent protein soybean meal, on the other hand, costs about $200 a ton or about 23 cents per pound of protein.

Although urea appears to be a good source of non-protein nitrogen, its use requires careful management. For example, significant amounts should not be used in rations which do not contain grain or another source of energy such as molasses. Because a source of readily available carbohydrate seems to be necessary for the efficient use of nitrogen, the use of urea has been mainly restricted to feedlot rations and dairy rations where a high level of grain is fed.

Mr. Martin stresses that since urea is five to six times more concentrated than soybean meal it is essential that it be mixed properly so that it does not settle or sift out of the feed. A poorly mixed ration could be toxic. Since it is not possible to mix urea and grain properly with a shovel, anyone who uses it will need a good mechanical mixer.

Urea can be used to provide up to one-third of the total protein in a ruminant ration, providing that the ration is well balanced and contains enough energy. Unlike conventional protein supplements which contain energy and minerals, urea contains only nitrogen. It may be used to provide all the supplemental protein in most feedlot and dairy rations, Mr. Martin says.

Cattle, says Mr. Martin, should be adapted slowly to a diet containing urea or any other non-protein nitrogen. The adaptation time for urea is two or three weeks. For best results from urea, the cattle should be fed frequently, or better still, they should be fed free choice.

Although there is some palatability problem with urea, it can be partially offset by the use of molasses. Mr. Martin recommends using feed grade urea rather than the fertilizer urea because it has a smaller prill and has an anti-caking material which makes it easier to mix.

He also says that when urea is fed at recommended levels, it does not affect the reproductive cycle of ruminents. Experiments have shown no effect on services per conception, length of gestation, calf birth weights or days from calving to first heat.

In most cases where cattle were fed the high urea supplements in feeding trials, they have eaten slightly less feed and gained at a slightly lower rate than cattle fed conventional supplements. However, these differences have usually been very small and have not usually been statistically significant.

Mr. Martin cautions against adding urea or any other source of protein to ruminant rations until they have been analyzed to make sure they are deficient in protein. Apart from wasting money, there will be no advantage to adding NPN to a diet that contains an adequate level of protein, and there could possibly be detrimental effects if very high levels were added.

Remember, urea is only recommended for cattle and sheep, not for swine or poultry. They need a high quality protein.

If you plan to feed urea, consult a nutritionist for help in formulating a ration in which urea will be used efficiently and safely, advises Mr. Martin.

5 nations to protect polar bears

Adoption of an agreement for the conservation of polar bears, at a conference of arctic nations in Oslo, Norway, last week, is an important step in gaining recognition for the polar bear as an important step in gaining recognition for the polar bear as a valuable arctic resource requiring careful management, Environment Minister Jack Davis said today.

Four of the five nations, including Canada, signed the agreement and signature by the fifth, the U.S.S.R. is expected later. Ratification by Parliament is anticipated after consultation with other administrators responsible for polar management in Canada.

"This agreement - the first concerning a common northern resource to be made by arctic nations - should help reassure people worried about the survival of the species that the nations with polar bear populations are acting responsibly and vigorously with sound management programs, "Mr. Davis said.

The need for this agreement arose from the fact that polar bears cross international boundaries in their wanderings and inhabit pack ice far out to sea. The agreement provides for closer collaboration among arctic nations in the management and scientific study of polar bears. It also prohibits the hunting of this species in areas [illegible] the management authority of any of the participating countries.

Besides encouraging and protecting the management rights of each nation the agreement also protects the traditional hunting rights of native people. The Canadian delegation was instrumental in securing protection of those rights in the agreement. In Canada, the hunting of polar bears is carefully controlled and in no way represents a danger to the species, Mr Davis emphasized.

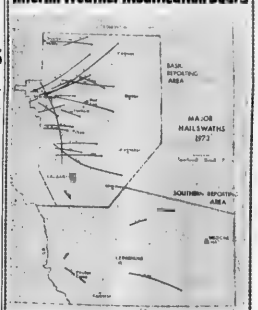
Interim Weather Modification Board



During the past summer the Interim Weather Modification Board and the Alberta Research Council jointly operated a hail suppression program and a research program from the Red Deer Industrial Airport at Penhold. Both organizations are very dependent upon farmer co-operators for information and also records regarding hail and rain occurrences, amounts, times, locations, size of hail and much other information. Many farmers also pick up hail samples, hold them in their deep freezers until they are picked up with a mobile unit which carries a deep freeze. A numbr of ladies operate a telephone survey out of Penhold. The radar equipment shows approximately the location of the hail storm. The ladies then start a telephone survey to farmers (mainly farm women) and through this survey are able to locate the actual edge of the storm, time of the hail or rain, size of hail and other information. The accompanying map diagramatically shows the 1973 major hailstorms, with walnut size or larger hail.

THESE VOLUNTEER SERVICES ON THE PART OF THE FARMERS AND THEIR WIVES ARE INDEED VERY BENEFICIAL TO THE PROGRAM.

The Board and ALHAS jointly prepared press releases every week during the operational season. We plan similar press releases next year to again keep the public informed of our operations and storm activities.

The Directors of the Interim Weather Modification Board, staff and members of the Alberta Hail Studies Group would like to take this opportunity to thank all those people who have so wholeheartedly participated and contributed to the [illegible]

Another profession too expensive to enter

Starting a farm now costs an average $76,500 and it's going to become even more expensive, Prof. G.R. Winter, head of the department of agricultural economics at the University of British Columbia, told the recent Canadian Bankers' Association conference in Winnipeg that capital requirements for the average Canadian farm rose to that figure from $27,300 in 1961 and $44,200 in 1966. To that he added two more statistics.

Debt, as a proportion of total farm assets, rose from 9.5 per cent in 1960 to 20.8 per cent 10 years later. The number of operating farms has been dropping at a rate of 2 per cent a year since 1961 - one reason why there's a shortage of beef. He predicted an increasing proportion of part-time farmers. Some would be attracted by high commodity prices, others would be more interested in a rural environment and a different life-style. Russell Harrison, president of the CBA, had already forecast at an agricultural to be more than $100,000 by 1980. He said this will force farmers to rely more heavily on credit for both fixed capital needs and operating costs. As farmers gain a good return on produce, the farm will become more of a viable enterprise with greater borrowing potential. One result is that bank lending is now more closely based on ability to repay than it used to be and less on security." Governments at both levels have contributed to the farm credit system, he said. But often programs overlap and he sees farm credit as mainly a federal responsibility.

If provincial governments each had their own credit system, the result would be absolute chaos," he warned.

See what memnonics can do

"Mike's four aces" and the other memnonics of our new postal code are helping to support a new $7 million industry to develop computerized letter-sorting machines (LSMs) over a four-year period to 1976. The city of Ottawa's main post office is the first in the country to have one of these LSMs in operation. It was delivered early in June by the manufacturer, ITT Canada Ltd., Toronto. The 40-foot-long, nine-foot-high behemoth can spew out 28,000 letters an hour, neatly sorted into bins by destination. By 1976, 15 post offices in Canada's cities, from Halifax to Vancouver, will be equipped with LSMs. Though automated, the sorter still requires people to operate it. Coding operators read the postal code on the envelope and depress appropriate keys on a typewriter-like keyboard. The information is fed to a computer which identifies the code and activates a printer, which stamps the envelope with a computer-readable number visible only by fluorescent light. Using this identification, a series of optical scanners and switches, helped by the computer, speed the letter on its way to the right bin. ITT's expenditures in Canada for the contract will total $6.3 million this year, says K.C. Cameron, manager of the company's communications division. ITT hired on an additional 101 people in manufacturing, plus the 104 employees of an existing Toronto machine shop acquired by the company largely to assist the postal mechanization program. About 80 more jobs at head office have been created, as well as about 150 new jobs among Canadian subcontractors to the program. Canadian content of the completed LSMs is about 75 per cent.

Will lawsuits scare off strikers?

The $43 million dollar damage suit launched recently in the elevator installers' strike has far reaching legal implications. The suit, along with an application for an injunction to stop the five-month-long strike, was entered in the Supreme Court of Ontario. It was initiated by a group of builders and developers whose high rises cannot be occupied due to lack of elevators. Targets of the suit: the five Ontario manufacturers of elevators and the 2,500-member International Union of Elevator Constructors. The legal novelty is that the injured but innocent third party to a strike is suing the chief antagonists. It is entirely possible that legal precedents which may be set in this suit - if it is pursued through the courts - would open avenues for future damage suits by unwilling victims of strikes. "I don't know offhand of any case where a third party has either brought a suit or succeeded in one," says one trade union lawyer. "It's pretty dramatic way of drawing attention to the fact that the people who are suffering the worst are the third parties," adds a management lawyer.

Dear Sirs:

Re Tofield Mercury - December 6 1973 - Article - Tofield Municipal Hospital Gets Accreditation Standard.

I wish to point out that in the article issued in the Tofield Mercury on December 6, 1973 the last line states "At the end of the two years, the survey will be repeated to ensure that the standards as established by the Council are being maintained, and, if the Hospital can be continued".

This sentence has a tendency to mislead people into the belief that if the standards of the Accreditation Council are not met, the Hospital will be closed. I wish to inform you that this is not the case.

The last line of the article should read "At the end of the two years, the survey will be repeated to ensure that the standards as established by the Council are being maintained, and, if the accreditation status of the Hospital can be continued".

Would you please make a correction in one of your future issues of the Tofield Mercury?

Thanking you,

D. L. Roth, Administrator

The Homemaker

Mrs. Elizabeth A. Durie
Dist. Home Economist
Box 519, Vegreville, Alberta

Do you have any idea how much it costs your family to live? As a homemaker you manage many family resources. These resources include -

(a) Labor, your time and energy

(b) Capital, that is, money and material things

(c) Personal qualities which include ability, attitude, knowledge and skill.

The Department of Agriculture Home Management Specialists have designed a home management series. The series has eight sections set up as a case study of one rural family. The information used is based on records kept by several rural Alberta families for the year 1972. The case study is a useful and easy way to discuss various areas of financial planning in a group. By looking at another family's spending patterns we can keep our own financial business confidential. At the same time, we have an opportunity to find out more about our own spending patterns and life style by comparing it with the case study family.

The eight sections of the series include the following topics:

1. Introduction to the case study family.
2. Values and goals and their relationship to managing the family's financial resources.
3. Inventory of household equipment and clothing.
4. Decision making.
5. Developing a financial plan.
6. Making the financial plan work which includes accounts, net worth statement, wills and estates.
7. Life and household insurance.
8. Consumer Credit.

This management series could be presented in six or eight sessions or in a two-to-three day workshop.

The sessions give homemakers an opportunity to discuss alternatives in spending patterns and to share ideas on record keeping systems. Do you know how much it costs your family to live?

Any person or groups who may be interested in exploring this possibility, or want more information on this program please contact your District Home Economist. She'll be glad to assist you in any way possible.

(Mrs. Jim Roddick)

MINISTIK, December 12 — The congregation at the United Church was more than doubled in attendance as Mrs. Gene Zimmerman and her Sunday School classes of South Cooking Lake presented the story of the White Gift, it's inception in 103 and it's significance even after these many years.

BUS SAFETY LAGS

The October issue of CANADIAN CONSUMER official publication of Consumers' Association of Canada accuses the Canadian Standards Association sub-committee with making only token improvements in the bus safety standard. The Association asks all concerned consumers to write to their Provincial Ministers of Transport asking for immediate action ing Canadian standards the maufacture of school buses and in school bus operations.

Volunteers do more than 90 percent of the work carried on by the Canadian Red Cross Society. The Women's Work Committee has sewing and knitting groups from coast to coast. Teacher sponsors direct the activities of Red Cross youth in schoolrooms. Care in the Home and Water Safety courses are all taught by volunteers. And literally thousands of generous Canadians volunteer their blood each year to help people in need.

"The Unique World of Women"
Most, un-Victorian, spicy and perceptive, these sketches of "unheard-of" Bible women by Eugenia Price have one common element: they are written by a talented author, who knows women. The purpose here is not to draw moralisms but to show the greatness and the love of God, who created woman in his own image and redeemed her in Jesus Christ.

COUNTY OF BEAVER
School and School Bus Operations DURING STORMS

1. Schools in the County of Beaver will operate on all regular school days. Should school busses not operate due to hazardous road conditions, teachers, town pupils, and rural pupils who can be transported safely to school by their parents will be expected to attend.
2. Should an over-night storm cause blocked roads or the serious danger of blocked roads, school bus runs will be cancelled. Radio messages prior to 7:00 a.m. and thereafter will inform parents of the cancellation. Radio stations CFCW (Camrose) and CJCA (Edmonton) will broadcast messages.
3. Should it be necessary to send pupils home by school bus at some time during the school day because of stormy conditions, these procedures will be followed:
   A. The principal of the school has authority to send school busses home at any time during the school day.
   B. Radio stations CFCW and CJCA will broadcast messages that rural pupils are en route home.
   C. Parents, school bus drivers and others who are informed on road conditions are asked to telephone the principal, the County Councillor or the County Office at Ryley should they suspect that stormy conditions will block roads.
4. Road and weather conditions vary considerably throughout the County. For this reason, each school bus will operate independently under this procedure. It is possible that morning runs may be cancelled at some schools and not at others. Similarly, busses may be routed home during the school day at some schools and not at others.
5. Parents are reminded that it is their right to decide whether or not their children will get on the bus in the morning should conditions be stormy or hazardous.
6. Please be certain that all pupils are dressed adequately warm each day. A school bus can become stranded on any given day due to road conditions or mechanical breakdown.

Holden news briefs

Mrs. Blanche Olson, who was in Tofield hospital for a check up, is back home again and feeling much better.

Holden Lodge O.O.R.P. held their regular monthly meeting, Tuesday evening with H.R.L. Hanson chairing the meeting. Regular business was attended to and correspondence dealt with. The monthly financial report was given by Treas. Lady Mason. A report of the December Chamber of Commerce supper was given by P.H.R.L. Corliss who also gave the Sunshine report for the month. Our usual donation was made to the Christmas gifts fund for the Alberta School for Deaf children which was started and was a project of the late P.S.H.R.L. McCullough of Edmonton. The ladies were advised that there would not be a Chamber of Commerce supper in January. As is the custom of the Lodge, a brief Memorial Service was held in memory of our departed sisters with the four Chair Officers giving their tribute.

It was decided to hold the annual birthday party in January. This would be the 20th anniversary of the Lodge. The ladies also decided on their year's project. At the conclusion of the meeting a delicious lunch and social hour was enjoyed. Lunch hostesses were Ladies Jean Manowski and Kate Nichols.

Million Dollar Acre features Canada show at Seattle Fair

Canada will probably spend well over a million dollars on its exhibit in the Expo '74 World's Fair here, which runs from May 4 to Nov. 3 next year.

Canada has reserved virtually all of a one-acre island (Cannon) near the center of the grounds.

The national government in Ottawa will design and build a park on the island and the provinces - notably British Columbia and Alberta - will build a pavilion.

Cannon island was once occupied by a huge laundry. Spokane city officials are delighted that Canada is building a park on it.

It dovetails perfectly with the city's plan to turn the entire 100-acre fair site into a downtown city park when the fair ends.

Canada is one of several nations that will exhibit at Expo '74. Others include the Soviet Union, Japan, Mexico, the Republic of China and the Republic of Korea.

Holden and district news items

(Mrs. G.H. Taylor)

HOLDEN, December 20—Mr and Mrs. Earl Hardy and Mrs Beth Campbell were Saturday supper guests with Mrs. Len Sawers, a former Holdenite in Camrose.

Alex Barlow of the Poe district was taken to Tofield hospital late Wednesday afternoon, suffering from exposure due to the cold stormy weather. Alex had walked over to the Poe store but, being Wednesday afternoon, it was closed and, exhausted from the walk in deep snow and cold, he collapsed at the back door of the house. Mrs. Komarnsky, who was visiting a friend, on arriving home, found him unconscious and pulled him into the kitchen, then notified Dr. Booth in Holden. The ambulance picked him up and took him to the hospital. Luckily he was found in time and, after a check up and treatment, he was able to leave the hospital late Friday afternoon.

CANADIAN DURUM ON ITALIAN MARKET?

Agriculture Canada scientists have developed durum wheat varieties they hope will sell on European markets. Durum was not readily accepted in the past because of its color and cooking quality.

With color and cooking quality improved the scientists are now working on increasing yield and developing semi dwarf height, post harvest dormancy and resistance to ergot.

Premier's Christmas Message – 1973 –

Even though Christmas is again upon us, we have to acknowledge that we are living in troubled times. But we have many blessings too, and as we remember them I believe we can enjoy a considerable amount of optimism and good cheer.

To me, Christmas time is a family time, a time of loved ones and home. Here in Alberta we can enjoy this blessing as much or more than any other place in the world.

The holiday season is also traditionally a season of light and warmth — surely we are particularly fortunate in this regard.

And when we list our blessings as Canadians, let us not forget to count the freedoms we continue to enjoy. We can celebrate at our own time, in our own way, no matter what our distant heritage may have been, and no matter where in Canada we may choose to live.

As a nation, in a world sorely set with crisis, we do have problems. But we feel confident that together we can solve them; that in this spirit of freedom and goodwill we in Alberta can help our country, and we as Canadians can be a compassionate good neighbour in the community of the world.

The majority of us, at this time of year, celebrate Christmas as festival and remembrance devoted to the Prince of Peace. And it is this prayer that is in my heart: may there be joyful peace for all of us, each in our own home, here in this richly blessed land, for now and for all the years to come.

Peter Lougheed

Airlines may open wrapped Christmas gifts

Gift-wrapped Christmas packages may be opened if taken inside the aircraft cabin, Transport Minister Jean Marchand announced last week.

The opening of carry-on baggage is mandatory all year round but with the heavy number of air travellers over the Christmas peak, the Ministry wants to ensure sufficient advance warning is given.

The alternative to taking gift-wrapped packages into the cabin is to pack them with the checked baggage

ROBINSON STORES – Tofield

"AN ENERGY CRISIS ELSEWHERE... SHOULD CERTAINLY BE A CONCERN IN ALBERTA"

"GAS SUPPLY HERE IS ADEQUATE..."

Says E.W. King, president of Alberta's major natural gas utilities.

The question which I am asked most often these days is, "Does Alberta have a natural gas energy crisis?" My frank and honest answer is "No!"

Almost all Albertans have been exposed to a wide discussion on energy matters which unfortunately has led to some confusion.

Our gas companies serve the majority of Albertans and we would like you to understand the situation. We serve some 327,000 customers who reside in 280 Alberta communities with more than 75 per cent of the province's population.

I would like to provide some facts about the supply of natural gas and offer you some ideas about the future of energy in Alberta and what I believe that you as an Albertan might do about it.

All Albertans should be reassured that there is no need to be concerned regarding supplies of natural gas for this winter and in the foreseeable future.

Our natural gas companies have made it a constant practice throughout their history, extending back to 1912, to plan and ensure that there would be adequate supplies of natural gas to meet future requirements. Each year we forecast Alberta's population and future growth and project demands for as far in the future as 30 years. We then plan and implement purchases of natural gas and development of reserves.

What are the reserves of natural gas in Alberta?

Albertans have been blessed with a plentiful natural gas supply virtually under their feet. The gas discovered and developed to date has been in excess of the province's needs and the surplus has been exported to other markets. We believe it is prudent to continue to export natural gas from the province if surpluses to provincial needs are evident, just so long as provision is made for the requirements of all Alberta consumers, including future new Albertans and new industries which will locate in the province.

The Energy Resources Conservation Board of Alberta estimates that, as of December 31, 1972, the remaining marketable reserves of natural gas in Alberta total approximately 44 trillion cubic feet. It has been estimated that the gas discoveries to date represent only about one half of the ultimate total to be found in Alberta.

It is important to recognize that Alberta's requirements are but a small portion of Alberta's annual production. For example, in 1972 Alberta used only about 15 per cent of the total marketable gas produced in the province, or about 280 billion cubic feet, and the balance was exported to other Canadian and U.S. markets.

What about the long-term future of Alberta's requirements?

Our companies have had a policy of continually contracting for and developing new reserves of Alberta natural gas for the needs of our customers. This policy has been absolutely essential as the demand has accelerated rapidly, actually doubling in the past 10 years.

In addition we have always advocated protection for Alberta consumers. More than 20 years ago we began the practice of intervening in natural gas export hearings to protect the interests of Albertans. Then, as now, we have consistently supported the principle that no export should be permitted unless there is always in sight a sufficient supply to meet the requirements of Alberta for a rolling 30-year period.

All of us should practice reasonable conservation. This doesn't mean that you should go cold in winter, but it does mean you should not be wasteful. Such practices also could result in some dollar savings in your monthly budget.

In the next few weeks, we will be offering through our companies a handy booklet of ideas which you might consider and use as a check list around your home or business on some simple ways to save some of your natural gas and at the same time save some of your hard-earned money. It's called, "The Waste-Watchers Guide to Energy."

Pleasant Memories

Back in the good ol' summertime, Bill Bowthorpe and a young buck deer on his Diamond E Ranch in the Round Hill area, were demonstrating the confidence that man can establish in animals, as the deer reached for a cigarette in Bill's lips. Just for the record, the cigarette wasn't lit.

Storm causes some problems

Because of the storm that struck Alberta on New Year's Day, The Mercury suffered some problems for this week's issue.

Rural roads were blocked while main highways were reported to be very heavy to near impassable in some areas. This prevented The Mercury's representative from making her normal rounds on Wednesday in Tofield, Holden and Ryley.

As a result, news budgets were not picked up this week and advertising was gathered on the telephone.

The Mercury regrets any inconvenience this may have caused. Hopefully, everything will be back to normal next week.

Heiberg again elected as Agricultural prexy

The 1973 annual meeting of the Tofield Agricultural Society was held on Monday, December 17th, in the Library of the Tofield Community Center with approximately 45 members in attendance.

In his report, president A. L. Heiberg expressed the appreciation of the Agricultural Society for the excellent support given to the arena by the fans, participants in activities, and the public in general. He also thanked the lecomakers, the concession operators and the many volunteers who assisted with ticket selling, supervising and organizing activities. Also mentioned were The Tofield Satellites, The Ryley Flyers, The Grand Forks Gulls of the Beaver Hill Hockey League, The Tofield Minor Hockey League, and The Tofield Skating Club for the excellent calibre of entertainment provided for spectators.

Mr. Heiberg also made special mention of the efforts of Tofield School and Leo Rurka in organizing a skate-a-thon that raised $2850.41.

He noted the improvements made to the arena during its first years of operation including the infra-red heaters, the time clock, a ice shaver and flooder, and advised that a permanent public address system was presently being installed.

Major problems facing the Tofield Agricultural Society, as seen by Mr. Heiberg, were adequate financing of the debt on the arena, scheduling ice time so that all local activities could be accommodated, the need to rent ice to raise revenue, obtaining volunteer help for the many jobs that have to be done in order to operate the arena effectively, and the likely need for employing an arena manager on a part or full time basis to look after the many details of its operation.

He concluded his remarks by saying that, "The year must have been successful for we operated the arena, paid the interest on time, and reduced the debt by nine thousand dollars."

The financial report was given by Marvin Bruce, secretary-treasurer. Total receipts for the period of December 1, 1972 to November 30th, 1973 were $8 887.48 made up of income of $8,585.27 plus the 1972 bank balance of $1,297.71. Expenditures for the same period were $81.67.80 leaving a bank balance on November 30th, 1973 of $5 224.88. A detailed audited statement is included elsewhere in the Mercury.

The meeting approved a 1973-74 budget that anticipated operating revenue of $34 000.00 and operating expenditures of $32 900.00. A capital budget of $7525.00 including purchase of a public address system and repayment of $6000.00 on the loan was also approved. The transfer of the $1100.00 operating surplus plus revenue from the 1973 canvass yet to be completed was expected to balance the capital budget.

The executive was instructed by the meeting to complete the 1973 canvass before the end of January. Approximately 25 per

Workshop of the Arts slated for Red Deer

The Alberta Government will sponsor a major Conference of the Arts in Red Deer from May 30 through June 2, 1974 to be known as "The Arts and You".

"The Arts and You" is a follow-up to the conference held in 1972 by Alberta delegates at the Canadian Conference of the Arts held in Ottawa in 1972 and will be of a scope that will give every Albertan the opportunity to become involved.

"The Government is excited about the prospect of community leaders in Alberta participating", said Horst Schmid, minister of Culture, Youth and Recreation. "We want businessmen, civil servants, and those who work with youth, senior citizens and the handicapped also urged to attend will be the media, town and city planners, religious and ethno-cultural groups, native organizations, educators and recreation leaders.

Communities across the province will be invited to send representatives to meet with top Alberta Artist from the field of dance, drama, visual arts and crafts, creative writing, film and photography, as well as instructors and workshop leaders from multi-cultural groups.

"The objective of this Conference will be a learning experience" stated Advanced Education Minister Foster. "Through discussion groups, demonstrations, workshop and performances the delegates will gain knowledge of the effective use of the arts in their own community situations."

"The workshops and demonstrations will focus on showing people how to "do" art, not just talk about it", Mr. Schmid added. He went on to say that, the host town, Red Deer, was chosen to hold the Conference due to its history of cultural involvement, numerous facilities, excellent accommodation and central location.

Around the town

Mrs. J.A.L. Smith and Edith Mary spent three days during Christmas at the parental home of Mr. and Mrs. J.W. Robinson.

Visitors at the Jake Saltzman home recently were Mr. and Mrs. Gary Jones and family of Pas Creek, Mr. and Mrs. M. Hess from Penn., Mr. and Mrs. Paul Wotten from Edmonton, and son, David from California, who has just returned from working in Holland.

Mr. and Mrs. Tom Peachy and children visited Joyce Longacre of Penn.

No more easing of suspension on driver's license

Permission to continue driving under restriction, for persons convicted of impaired driving, is no longer within the discretion of the judge in the court room, according to a ruling of the Supreme Court of Canada handed down recently.

For several years, the Statutes of Alberta have provided a six-month statutory suspension, followed conviction under the criminal code for impaired driving on a first offence, with an automatic increase to twelve months for a second conviction, and thirty-six months for a third.

In 1972, the Canadian Parliament enacted legislation which provided for a convicting judge to permit convicted persons to continue driving under certain restrictions, but the provinces did not believe the national government had the power to legislate on who could or could not hold a driver's license in any province.

However because of the uncertainty of the situation, the province of Alberta decided to allow the retention of driving privileges if the convicting judge made this kind of order.

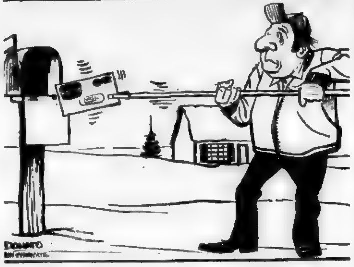
Last June, Alberta joined in an action started by the province of Ontario, which challenged the right of Canada to legislate in this field, and the matter went to the Supreme Court. The Supreme Court, in a majority decision, recently ruled that the matter was completely within the jurisdiction of the provinces, so the federal legislation is of no effect.



One-sided again

The Consumers' Association of Canada has come up with some impressive statistics in the consumer field recently, but we admit to being thrown offstep a week ago when they asked the federal cabinet to deny the request of the Canadian Egg Marketing Agency for power to control imports of eggs and raw products.

"Import controls will inevitably result in further price increases and consumers cannot tolerate this retrograde step," declared national president Maryon Brechin. Which makes us wonder where Mrs. Brechin was when the Ottawa government imposed controls on the importation of low priced men's shirts and other textiles from Taiwan and other Oriental countries. The consumer could hardly have been said to benefit from that step, yet few voices, other than in the West, were ever raised against that policy.

We're by no means suggesting the egg marketing board should have been given the power it sought . . . we're not well enough informed on the issue, except for a certain prejudice built up from policies which slowly forced all the smaller egg producers in this region out of the business entirely.

But we are concerned with the type of statement Mrs. Brechin makes which is based entirely on the effect on the consumer, mainly in Central Canada, without any consideration for its effects on producers in other parts of the country.

It was to protect Canadian consumers that western beef producers were denied the opportunity to export beef a few months ago when foreign prices were skyrocketing. It is to protect consumers in the Montreal market that western oil producers are being forced, not asked, to take less for their oil than they could get on the international market. It has been to protect the Eastern hog and beef industry that western grain growers have had for many years to subsidize the shipping of feed grains which are used to compete against them.

We'd agree with the Consumers' Association that you have to start somewhere, but it always puzzles Westerners that the start seems always to be made there, and that the action seems not to follow through when the opportunity arises for the East to reciprocate.

Real problem

It's all too easy for smaller problems to build up immediate interest among the public, and so divert attention from the pressing problems, pointed out United Grain Growers president, A. M. Runciman recently. Mr. Runciman in this instance declared that the dispute over rapeseed marketing has been diverting attention, and money, from a far more crucial problem facing prairie farmers, which is the lack of box cars for grain.

The supply has dropped from over eighty thousand cars to a little over forty-eight thousand cars, for both railways, he said, and no new cars have been built since the 1950's.

The grain grower spokesman says that unless the trend is turned around it could mean disaster by 1976, and farmers and their organizations need to get working on the problem.

Similarly, an official of one of the three major tank-car leasing companies in Canada described as "pure fantasy" the suggestion of Energy Minister Donald Macdonald that rail car shipments might move up to fifty thousand barrels of oil per day to the Montreal market. Practically every car they own is already tied up on long-term lease, says this official, and there's just no extra capacity.

If this situation obtains in two of our basic industries, it may well be that we're similarly strained in other areas, also, and a massive turnaround in railroad car production policy is indicated. Despite massive increases in air and truck shipments, we still depend heavily on the rails for the long hauls of high tonnage goods.

Adams-Lehman vows exchanged Dec. 8

On December 8th, Calvin United Church in Ryley was the scene of a lovely wedding when Lorna Susan Lehman, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Lehman of Ryley, became the bride of Dennis Melvin Russel Adams, son of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Dueck of Ryley. Rev. Stanley Bessey of Tofield officiated at the ceremony.

Entering the church on the arm of her father, the bride was radiant in a floor length gown of polyester pol, with a hood and coat of silver sequins in a white printed lace. She carried a bouquet of yellow roses.

Attending the bride were maid of honor, Norma Sears, cousin of the bride, and bridesmaid, Linda Dueck, sister of the groom. They wore matching hooded floor length gowns of turquoise fortrel and carried bouquets of carnations with three daisies centered around one yellow rose.

The groom wore a black tuxedo with a white ruffled shirt. His attendents were Nathan Fueder, friend of the groom and Orland Lehman, brother of the bride, and David Dueck brother of the groom.

During the cermony the soloist, Wallace Lehman brother of the bride sang "Hand In Hand We'll Walk Together." The organist was Mrs. Harriet Ruddy.

Following the ceremony a reception for about 80 guests served by Salem Mennonite Ladies was held in the Ryley Legion Hall. Irene Lehman, sister of the bride, was in charge of the guest book. Candlelighters were Karen Ross and Dianne Hjelter.

The bride's table was centered with a three-tiered wedding cake made and decorated by Laura Gagne. Alvin Lehman, uncle of the bride, was master of ceremonies and Rienold Grinde uncle of the bride, proposed the toast to the bride. A dance followed with the Travellers providing the music.

The happy couple will reside in Tofield.

Special Consultant to Financial Services

It may not come as a big surprise to you, but the average motorist spends a lot more money on automotive service than necessary, says one expert.

George Brown, general service manager of American Motors Corp., calls most of the problem the result of old habits that are hard to break.

Cars are serviced too frequently, and many unnecessary adjustments are made simply because an owner has always had such work done, says Brown. A good review of the new car manual would eliminate a lot of these trips to the garage.

Lubricating a car every 1,000 miles and changing the oil every 1,000 or 2,000 miles is not only considered a waste of time and money these days but can actually damage some grease fittings and motor seals. Engine tune-ups aren't necessary every 5,000 or 6,000 miles either. A complete check every 15,000 miles is plenty.

When cars do require service, selective replacement of worn parts can produce big savings. Perhaps all the spark plugs do not need replacement? Maybe all the adjustments of a front end alignment aren't required?

Only when all car owners request an accurate diagnosis and then demand that only those repairs which are necessary are performed will it become a standard practice, reports Brown.

Premier's New Year's message

It is possible that 1974, more than any other year in Alberta's history, will be a year of critical decisions for our province.

The most important questions facing us will relate to our ability to ensure that the natural resources, with which we have been endowed, are used effectively to provide for a sound and balanced Alberta economy. This challenge will involve standing strong in our resolve to obtain a fair return from our depleting resources of oil and gas.

One fact which we must confront is that we cannot continue to take for granted the prosperity we enjoy when in large part it has resulted from a depleting resource. I sense that Albertans are starting to lose the complacency that we may have felt at one time and we are fortunate because we do have the time to initiate new approaches. Some of the decisions will be tough ones, and in the development of new economic bases we cannot lose sight of the mistakes that other areas have made in their handling of urban growth and environmental considerations.

I want to emphasize my firm belief that we are a province with an exciting future and great opportunity — and that the proper management of our assets will have long term results, beneficial to all of Canada. I ask every Albertan to remember that these are your resources — and it is your future. Your ideas will be valued — and we want to have your thoughts about the ways in which we can handle these crucial policies.

Please accept my expression of best wishes to all Albertans for a good year. My colleagues and I look forward to working with you in 1974.

Rudzcki-Zukiwsky vows exchanged in Edmonton

On November 10, 1973 Donald John Rudzcki and Deana Grace Zukiwsky were united in marriage at Pilgrim United Church in Edmonton.

The groom is the eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Ral Rudzcki and the bride is the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Metro Zukiwsky, Edmonton.

Rev. B. Gross and Rev. S. Bessey performed the double ring ceremony.

The bride looked lovely in a beautiful floor length white heavy jersey gown. It was trimmed with a white frill around the neck and the bottom of the dress. The empire waist was trimmed with brocade lace. Her veil was held in place with a brocade head piece. She carried a bouquet of red roses.

The brides attendants were Miss Pat Manchakowsky, Miss Cheryl Manchakowski and Miss Debbie Dave. They all wore identical floor length gowns of silver metallic. They each carried a bouquet of pink, red and white roses.

Gerald Hoover, Ted Zukiwsky and Jim Ereiser were the grooms attendants. Gary Zukiwsky, cousin of the bride and Jim Kyle, cousin of the groom were the ushers.

Mrs. John Wall, soloist for the occasion, sang "The Wedding Song" at the beginning of the service and during the signing of the register, sang "O Perfect Love". Both of these songs added a special touch to the wedding.

Miss Sharon Rudzcki, sister of the groom, was organist. For the recessional, Norman Kyle, the groom's uncle, played "Amazing Grace" on the bagpipes, accompanied by Sharon Rudzcki at the organ.

For her daughter's wedding, the bride's mother chose a gown of brown velvet with gold sparkels. The groom's mother wore a gown of navy and white jersey. Both mothers wore corsages of red roses and an orchid.

Heather and David Rudzcki presided over the guest book at the church.

Following the wedding, a reception and dance was held at Kensington Hall, Edmonton. At the reception, Rev. Stan Bessey gave the blessing. Dennis Zukiwsky, brother of the bride was master of ceremonies for the evening and the toast to the bride was given by Ron Zukiwsky, brother of the bride, to which the groom ably responded.

The head table was centered with a three-tiered cake, beautifully decorated by Mrs. Ray Gould. It was baked by the bride's mother.

During the dance a presentation line was held and lunch was served later in the evening. Music was provided by the Meronyk Orchestra.

The happy couple now reside in Edmonton.

'Hat to get new fertilizer plant

Plans to build a world-scale fertilizer plant near Medicine Hat were announced by three farmer-owned co-operatives today. The $90 million plant will assure farmers across the west and eastern Canada increased supplies of ammonia and urea-based fertilizers from the beginning of 1976.

The three participants, Western Co-operative Fertilizers Limited, Calgary, United Co-operatives of Ontario, Mississauga and CF Industries Inc., Chicago, will represent nearly two million farmer-owners. A fourth participant is expected to be Cooperative Federee de Quebec representing an additional 40,000 farmer members.

The plant, which will employ about 200 people, will produce 1200 tons of anhydrous ammonia and 1300 tons of urea a day which makes it one of the largest such complexes in the world.

Canadians will own 51 percent directly in the equity of the new plant, and more indirectly since United Co-operatives of Ontario is one of the owners of CF Industries.

The plant will supply anhydrous ammonia and urea fertilizers to farmer-owners through the participating co-operative in the western Provinces, eastern Canada and the border regions of the United States.

Corporate parents of Western Co-operative Fertilizers are Manitoba Pool Elevators, Saskatchewan Wheat Pool, Alberta Wheat Pool and Federated Co-operatives Limited who jointly represent more than 125,000 farmers in western Canada. United Co-operatives of Ontario serves some 75,000 farmer members in Ontario. C. F. High grain prices could create hazard for farms, says Horner

Returning to a grain economy could be disastrous for Alberta because it leads to rural depopulation and to eventual increased rural costs.

That warning came from Dr. Hugh Horner, Deputy Premier for Alberta, during his address to Unifarm's fourth annual convention held in Edmonton a week ago.

The net income position of farmers and adding value to products through secondary processing, still represents the cornerstone of Alberta government agriculture policy, said Dr. Horner.

"We have made a strong commitment to both concepts and we will be evaluating our programs to make sure they move us to these goals," he said.

In a boom, economy shortages will show up, so the government is both seeking new markets and new sources of supplies for food production.

On the cost of energy, Dr. Horner said Albertans own the natural resources of Alberta and so they should have first access to them to keep input costs down.

Feed grains policy becomes crucial to maintaining a livestock economy in Alberta. This means, said Dr. Horner, that feeders need access to a reliable supply, at a known price and with equal opportunity on freight rates.

Also he said the Canadian Wheat Board must appreciate the Alberta Government's position of accepting the policy of having most of the rapeseed shipped out of Alberta before processing.

WALLET FOUND

There is a happy man these days in the person of Hiroyuki Hara of Brooks.

A wallet he lost over a couple of weeks ago has been found and returned to him. In addition to the usual valuable papers it contained a respectable sum of money.

It was found in Vancouver.

Mr. Hara was hauling grain recently from just southwest of town to the Alberta Wheat Pool elevator here; it was at this time that he missed his wallet.

Men in the Vancouver terminal of the Wheat Pool came across the wallet when they were cleaning grain, and a telex was sent immediately to the Calgary office advising of the find.

Gives a person a warm feeling to find there are still lots of honest people in the world.

Couple marks Golden Jubilee

(Mrs. Jim Bodnick)

The family of Mr and Mrs Alex Kleinschroth entertained 130 guests at an "Open House" held at Ministik Hall in honor the couple on the occasion of their golden wedding anniversary on Sunday, December 16th

A three tiered wedding cake made and decorated by Mrs. John Klimuschuch daughter-in-law, centred the head table and was flanked by golden candles

Both Jan Smith was born in Kincardine, Ont., and came to Sedalia in early 1910 where she joined brothers, Bill and Norman, who had come out several years previous.

Alex Kleinschroth came to Castor from Port Elgin, Ont., in 1910 with his parents, three sisters and two brothers

During these next years, Sarah Ann and Alex met and on December 18, 1923 were married by Rev Doran in the Smith home.

After living in the Castor area for eleven years they came to the Lindbrook and Tofield areas where they spent seven years.

In the spring of 1941 they came to the Ministik district settling on a quarter of the school section where they still reside. They carried on active farming and Alex doing much carpenter work.

They have two sons, George of Ministik and John of Edmonton, and two daughters, Mrs David (Norma) Hughes of Laoma, and Mrs. Maxwell (Donalda) Norman of Calgary. There are also eighteen grandchildren

Telegrams were received from relatives from the home town in Ontario and from Mrs Irene Smith a sister-in-law from Comox

Many messages of congratulations were received from friends relatives and neighbors far and near

A plaque from the Alberta Government was presented by Dr Walter Buck M.L.A. of the Clover Bar Constituency and Baker ex-M.L.A. of Clover Bar, presented the Lieutenant Governor's award. The pictures of Pioneer Days of the Strathcona County was presented by councillor J. D. Morrow of Deville. David Hughes presented the plaque on behalf of the Federal Government

David Hughes was master of ceremonies for the afternoon and a history of the honored couple was compiled and read by Mrs. Bill Kilford of Sherwood Park.

Several of the grandchildren either recited or gave musical selections. Lorraine Hughes, a granddaughter, was in charge of the guest book.

Tofield curling team win Zone championship

Two Tofield teams and one from Camrose emerged with Zone curling championships following playoff action in Tofield over the past weekend.

The Senior Ladies and Schoolgirl championships were won by Tofield teams while a Camrose team took top honors in the Ladies playoffs.

Schoolgirls

Tofield picked up two straight wins to take top honors and advance to the Northern Alberta championships to be held in Edmonton at the Ottewell Club on February 8, 9 and 10.

Members of the Tofield championship team are Linda Macleod, Maryanne Macleod, Collette Watson and Colleen Walker

The Tofield team had beaten Sedgewick twice in a row by scores of 5-3 and 9-5 after Sedgewick eliminated Hawtl in straight games. Only three teams had entered the Zone playoffs

Ladies

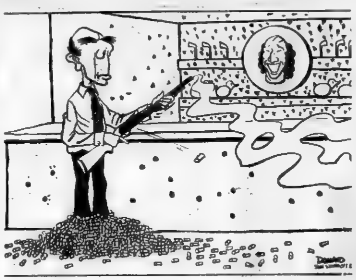
Jean Cook of Camrose took top honors by winning four straight games after bowing in their first outing

Cook beat B-T to Bruce but came back to take the "B" Event by stopping Tofield 8-3 and whipping Rosse of Camrose 11-1. In the finals, Cook stopped the Bruce team twice by scores of 11-2 and 13-1.

Other members of the winning rink were Mary Shields, Helen Sunderman and Faye Dewsbury. They will advance to the Northern Alberta playoffs at the Spartex in Edmonton, on January 25, 26, 27 and 28

Skipped by Irma Francis, the Tofield team disposed of their only opponents, Camrose, in two straight games.

Other members of the championship team are Faye Dodds, Ruby Sears and Irene Bichon



One more opportunity

Americans are running out of cheddar cheese, reports a recent heading, and as a result Canadians are going to have to pay more for their favorite Black Diamond, Cherry Hill or any other of the many excellent products of southern Ontario, according to the accompanying news report.

The story goes on to say that the prediction can be made because prices are higher in the United States, and President Nixon has just lowered the tariff barrier for a hundred million pounds of cheddar.

Two thirds of the quota have been allotted to New Zealand and Australia, but Canadian producers are hoping against hope to get in on a big share of the remainder of the quota.

We couldn't help but think how nice it would be if the government in Ottawa elected to follow the precedent they've already established with oil, in maintaining a somewhat lower than market price for the Eastern cheeses mentioned, so that Western consumers wouldn't have to pay such a hefty increase, or all that the international market will stand. After all, we see the spectacle of Western oil producers being forced to take a good deal less than world price for their oil, so that Montreal consumers will have to pay only modest increases for their fuel. It seems only Gallic logic that the process should be reversed, and so soon. And Mr. Trudeau is noted for his logic.

We don't expect anyone to hold their breath while waiting to hear him make the announcement, of course, but it occurs to us there is one aspect of the whole thing to brighten the scene, and that's the chance it may give Western cheese producers to branch out a bit, and increase their share of the market. Part of their problem, of course, is marketing against the entrenched, well established, and well known brands. But that's another matter, and it could be solved, possibly for the betterment of the whole western economy.

License suspension

The Supreme Court of Canada recently ruled that Alberta trial court judges never had the legal right to permit drivers under suspension of license to continue driving, under certain restrictions, as indicated by a federal government attempt to intervene. Either a license is suspended completely, or it's not revoked at all, according to the Supreme Court decision. There can be no partial measures, under present legislation in Alberta, since the matter comes under provincial jurisdiction.

Since the change came out, we've been surprised at how many favorable comments have been heard. Many people, apparently, felt there was little justice involved in allowing someone convicted of driving so badly as to be a menace on the road, to go right back on the road simply because his job depended on it. They take the view that probably the lives of others depend on his not being on the road, and simply to accept the job qualification isn't enough. That should have been considered before the offensive driving took place.

It's interesting, too, to note how much support there is for Hon. Miss Hunley's Stop Check program, and the manner in which it is persuading drinkers or parties of drinkers either to keep one person sober, or to take a taxi, or to stay off the roads. Many reports say there's been a marked reduction in drinking in public saloons and lounges, and here again the public seems to appreciate the effort.

Overall, it seems, hundreds of citizens have been more worried about the highway lottery than they'd care to admit, and appreciate any contribution of any kind towards improving the odds.

Liberals high on oil promise

OTTAWA

In early December there was a noticeable change in the attitude of every Liberal member of Parliament, and the buoyant optimism that became so evident had nothing to do with Gallup Poll popularity figures.

The Trudeau government has decided, on the urging of the party caucus, to take control of the nation's energy resources and use federal clout to pursue a tremendous trade advantage for Canada in an energy-starved world.

First problem to be faced is the growing indignation of the provinces, which will object with increasing vigor as Ottawa invades a field which they consider strictly provincial, because of the constitution.

Personally, I think the provinces will object in vain, and eventually lose the battle, because the federal government has all the necessary political tools to tie the provinces firmly to those wicked international oil companies.

Bitterness against the oil companies, because of unjustifiable price hikes, is nationwide, although more concentrated in eastern Canada, and the federal Liberals have picked a political winner in that issue, whether or not all the statements we'll hear will be accurate.

The major fly in the political jam for the Liberals right now is the fact that to pursue this grand design of energy control by Ottawa, the eastern part o the country is going to have to suffer some shortages, and terrific price increases for at least another two years.

How does any political party - particularly one with a slim Parliamentary minority - escape without blame when the major commodity of life - energy — increases in price by more than 100 percent in a matter of months?

I'm being a bit premature by saying energy prices have increased by 100 percent, but I believe that by the end of winter that figure won't be far from wrong.

The happy thought for the Liberals is that they are convinced it will be simple as turning down your thermostat to slough off most of that blame on the oil companies, and at the same time, firmly tie the oil companies to the opposition Conservatives.

That's the stuff of which elections are made, and from the way things look in Ottawa right now, I wouldn't be the least bit surprised if the Trudeau government decided to take its plan for energy economic nationalism to the people for a vote.

So far there's no evidence that the Tories have very powerful ammunition to oppose the Liberal plan, and that's what is keeping Liberal MP's in a state of buoyancy they haven't experienced for nearly 18 months.

Can Norway save STOL

De Havilland Canada has got its first firm order for the DHC-7 short-take-off-and-landing airliner. It is only for two of the 48-seat planes, but it is an important event. The buyer is the highly respected Norwegian airline Wideroe's Flyveselskap A/S which operates a remarkably successful network of short-take-off-and-landing [illegible] throughout the country. Under the contract, Wideroe insists it must have delivery in time to begin operations early in 1977. The price per aircraft is $2.35 million in 1973 dollars. Getting someone to sign and put up hard cash has been discouragingly hard work.

But it now seems other orders are about to start coming in. Two U.S. carriers, Metroflight Airlines of Houston and Golden West Airlines of Los Angeles [illegible] now apparently ready to put up their [illegible] for an initial [illegible] second for two.

A[illegible] Alpes [illegible] also is ready [illegible] two planes. There are [illegible] others at more or less [illegible] point. Added [illegible] initial orders [illegible] some where between [illegible] craft.

Logically each [illegible] followed [illegible] orders [illegible] the fleets. The one [illegible] mining problem faced [illegible] the DHC-7 salesmen [illegible] the uncertainty over whether production will actually go [illegible].

This still requires [illegible] decision by the federal government to invest some $200 million. It was due to be taken this summer but has been constantly delayed. Now, it appears, yet another internal government study is being carried out that is due to report in February. If the latest study is completed by then, and if the cabinet then gives immediate approval, de Havilland executives think they can make Wideroe's 1977 deadline.

They are also confident that with a production line guaranteed they could crack some of the bigger U.S. regional carriers who could be looking for six to 10 at a time. Taken together with a potential Air Canada contract, if that airline presses ahead with its Stol development work, these orders could begin to push the DHC-7 towards the magic breakeven point. The decision for the ministers, when eventually they face it, shows no signs of getting easier.

ARCTIC OIL AND NATRAL GAS PIPE LINE

The present oil crisis focuses attention on Vancouver inventor Joseph T. Sparling's system to transport oil and natural gas by an underground pipe line which uses a very cold liquid natural gas line below an oil line to keep the ground along the pipe line right-of-way permanently frozen. This system, he claims, avoids the serious danger of collapse of an arctic pipe line as a result of melting and the instability of the frozen tundra over which such a line must run. Canadian patent 935,735 was granted on October 23, 1973

Bartel-Schmidt vows exchanged in Tofield

Tofield Mennonite Church was the scene of a lovely candle-light ceremony on November 30th., when Evelyn Mary, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Schmidt of Tofield, became the bride of Paul Hans Peter, son of Mr and Mrs. Heinrich Bartel of Rosedale, B.C. Rev. Menno Epp of Foothills Mennonite Church in Calgary officiated at the ceremony. Rev. Hans Bartel of Agassiz, B.C., gave a short meditation.

Entering the church on the arm of her father, the bride was lovely in a floor-length gown of polyester satin trimmed with lace. Her elbow length veil was trimmed with matching lace and was held in place by a floral headpiece. She carried a bouquet of pink roses with daisies.

Attending the bride were the maid of honor, Irene Schmidt, sister of the bride; and bridesmaids, Lori Dyck and Nola Dyck, friends of the bride. They wore matching gowns of blue and carried bouquets of pink sweetheart roses with white daisies.

Attending the groom were Vic Bartel, his brother, and Reinar Goetzke and Eckhard Claassen, friends of the groom. They wore navy tuxedoes with white shirts trimmed with black lace. Candellighters were Rosie Bartel, sister of the groom and Gordon Schmidt, brother of the bride. Ushers were Darrell Heidebrecht, cousin of the bride and Harold Bartel, brother of the groom.

During the ceremony the soloist, Grace Laskoski, sang "Ave Verum" and "The Lord's Prayer." The organist was Elaine Kauffman.

Following the ceremony a reception for 230 guests was held at the Tofield Community Centre. Judy Epp, friend of the couple, was in charge of the guest book. The bride's table was centered with a three-tiered wedding cake, decorated by Miss Edith Wideman. George Heidebrecht was master of ceremonies and Henry Schroeder proposed the toast to the bride, to which the groom responded with a song he himself had composed.

For going away, the bride chose a brown double-knit dress and coat ensemble with matching accessories. Her corsage was of yellow roses.

After a wedding trip to Disneyland, the happy couple are making their home in Calgary.

4-H County Council elects its officers

by Sherry Wickstrom

The 4-H County of Beaver District held their first meeting for the 1973-1974 year on Monday, January 7 at the D. A.'s office at Ryley.

First on the agenda was the election of officers.

President — Norman Withers of Viking.

Vice-President — Elgar Grinde of Holden.

Secretary-Treasurer — John Moore of Tofield.

Reporter — Sherry Wickstrom of Ryley.

After this, the members decided who would go to the regional meetings from our group. They are as follows: Norman Withers, Elgar Grinde, and Don Holtham. (who is from Holden).

As the meeting progressed, Howard Bjorge, of Vermilion, gave a report and showed us slides on the 4-H summer camp at Moose Lake. Since the camp had originally been for the 4-H members 12-14, it was suggested that a camp for the younger set, 10-12, should be set up. We were informed that there had been a counsellor training camp last spring.

The 4-H fees for the 1973-1974 year will be one dollar per member.

Curling and skating for the county was suggested to discuss at the club level. A small committee was formed to find out what facilities are available in each town. Regional 4-H curling and skating were also discussed.

A possibility of exchange programs were brought up by Howard Bjorge also. Members of the Northern Alberta Region would, for example, travel to another region one summer for a while, and the next year another region would stay in our region for a while during the summer.

The next meeting will probably be held around the end of January.

A CARPET CAN BE ADVERTISED ON THE RADIO OR TELEVISION AT $7.50 A YARD.

It sounds like a very low price. But when they add $2.00 for cushions, $2.00 for labor — that's $4.00 a yard more that you don't expect. So you are really paying $11.50 a yard. Some companies also charge for mileage.

Birthday celebrations are being held Sunday for Pastor A.O. Asen, who will mark his 100th birthday next week. Seen in Norway, the well-known Lutheran pastor has served a number of fields in Canada and the United States, before moving to Camrose a number of years ago to make his home in Bethany. The program will start at 2:00 p.m. in Convocation Centre at Camrose Lutheran College.

Canadian holidayers 'safe' in USA, says AMA

In response to numerous inquiries concerning the gasoline situation in the United States, the American Motor Association has confirmed that only in isolated cases will motorists be inconvenienced at the present time. In the State of Washington, supplies of gasoline have been restricted causing some stations to adopt early closings and Sunday closings. At the present time these supplies are available within each district.

In Oregon, fuel sales are being limited to 5 to 10 gallons Saturdays and Sundays are critical for obtaining supplies of gasoline.

Gasoline supplies are holding up at the present time in California. No one is being refused fuel, but stations are restricting the amount of purchase to 5 or 10 gallons.

Gasoline stations in the Detroit area have been known to refuse gasoline to Canadian motorists in order to conserve their supply for regular customers. Motorists should also be aware that the New York thruway will not serve gas to motorists from 9:00 p.m. Saturday to midnight Sunday.

The Canadian Automobile Association and the American Automobile Association continue to monitor the situation, and further reports are expected during the first week of December

New 'user's' fee levied on flights

An airport charge, amounting to $2.50 on each passenger originating in Canada at all of the airports operated by the Ministry of Transport, will be levied on the air carriers starting January 1, 1974, or as soon thereafter as the administrative details can be worked out, Transport Minister Jean Marchand announced today.

The practice of levying charges to recover the costs of air transportation is already in use in over 120 countries including the United States, France, Israel, Japan, Brazil and Italy. For example, in the United States there is a tax on air transportation levied at the rate of eight percent for all domestic air travel, and an individual head charge of $3.00 per person on those passengers destined for overseas points from the United States.

ONE of the total Canadian charge, $2.50 is in lieu of the once expensive Air Transportation Tax which was passed by Parliament in 1969 but which has not been proclaimed by the Government. This air tax would have been levied at the rate of five percent of the air fare plus a departure charge on international flights of between $2.00 and $5.00. The remaining thirty cents of the new airport charge will be used to offset the costs of civil aviation security measures incurred by the Ministry of Transport.

The $2.50 charge is in line with the Federal Government's policy of 'users will pay' instead of the costs of air transport continuing to be a burden on the general taxpayer who may not choose to travel by air. The airport charge will be levied under the authority of the Aeronautics Act.

The present cost of operating just the airport facilities in Canada amounts to some $150 million annually while revenues total only $70 million. The airport charge is expected to reduce this deficit by some $50 million.

WEST TO ALASKA

Canadian bankers will be watching more than passing interest to see the outcome of Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce's applications to open a branch in Alaska. At last week's formal hearing in Anchorage, almost every Alaska bank opposed the Canadian bank's entry. But it was supported by several influential members of the state House of representatives The Commerce made a strong pitch based, in part, on its strong representation in northern Canadian communities. It has 19 branches in the Yukon and Northwest Territories and provides eight other northern communities with a "flying bank" service. It also stressed its significant experience in financing resource projects. Apart from some technical objections by the other banks, the fact that US banks may not establish branches in Canada was clearly a concern. And although it didn't come out in the formal hearing, there is, it appears, concern that entry of a Canadian bank might clear the way for an invasion by Japanese banks. A decision is not expected until early in the New Year. Meanwhile, Warren Mosley, assistant general manager, international, said "I'm more hopeful since the hearing, because we got fairly broad cross section of approval. The opposition was pretty narrowly based."

Making the most of traffic jam

Ever wondered how to make productive use of those lost hours on the strangled expressway between your home and office or on the road between sales calls in different cities?

IMPETUS, the magazine of The Financial Post, has come up with an answer. Learn to speak French. Even if your commuting journey is only 20 minutes long each day, IMPETUS points out, it adds up to about 13 days a year, enough time for a crash course.

To test the theory, IMPETUS put a Toronto businessman, Roy Lipman, through a French course recorded on cassettes, and carefully gauged the results. Special care was taken to check Lipman's driving while listening to the tapes.

A driving professional tested Lipman's skill both with and without the tapes running in the car, and noted his driving did suffer slightly although not dangerously. As a result, experts recommend tape learning in a car only if you're an above-average driver — as Lipman is. And — remember that driving is at all times the principal task at hand. As far as effectiveness is concerned, retention of material may actually be increased while driving if who responds to challenge, according to IMPETUS.

The final test, a subjective assessment of Lipman's French was made by a language teacher. Result? He's not yet fluently bilingual. But he's mastered the fundamentals and is enthusiastically continuing the program. But most of all, he's made use of found time otherwise devoted to cursing his fate in a traffic jam.

IMPETUS also notes that the "classroom" may be expanded to include the home, office, airplane and even — as Lipman tried — aboard a sail boat. Nor is the course selection limited to French.

PLANNING FOR RETIREMENT

As time passes, most of us begin to wonder about retirement. Will there be enough money? Where will we live? What happens if illness occurs. Will there be enough and interesting things to do? What about friends. There are no ready-made answers to these important questions. Everyone has different needs and ways of meeting them will be different too.

The Department of Agriculture is holding a retiring seminar in Holden on three consecutive Wednesdays. If you are 50 or more it is a must that you attend or if you are younger and contemplating selling out the course would also benefit you.

In the Holden Community Hall on January 23rd, 1974, from 7:00 to 9:00 P.M. there will be an introductory session on "The Road to Retirement". On January 30th and February 6th from 9:00 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. topics of discussion will be as follows: Aspects of Retirement, Costs of Living, Investing Money, Tax Concessions, Canada Pension, Wills and Estate Planning, How to Dispose of your Farm and Creative Use of Time. On January 30th and February 6th lunch will be served compliments of Alberta Rural Resources. In total eight speakers are being brought in from outside this district so that your particular questions can be answered with some authority.

Pre-registration is required, therefore, contact the District Agriculturist's Office to have your name placed on the list before January 22nd, 1974.

A. I. COURSE

The A. I. Course to be held at Holden, February 11th - 15th will be held as planned. As the D.A.'s office has a number of names on hand of people wishing to participate in the school, we are fairly sure that it will go ahead.

If you have given your name to the D.A.'s office but as yet, have not sent the cheque for $125.00 application fee, would you please do so so that you will be sure to be accomodated. Anyone else who is interested in the Course but as yet has not sent in his name, please do so as soon as possible.

EMERGENCY CROP PROGRAM

The Emergency Crop Program originally scheduled to terminate January 1st, 1974, has been extended. The program is now dated to end January 31st of this year. Under provisions of the Emergency Crop Program, farmers can borrow up to $7,500.00, interest free, for a period of one year based on need. The County of Beaver Agricultural Development Committee has been approving Emergency Crop Program applications at the rate of $15.00 per acre snowed under crops and $5.00 per acre for grain harvested in a tough or damp condition. The $15.00 per acre figure is expected to cover cash operating expenses while the $5.00 per acre for tough or damp grains would cover the cost of drying and treating with Chemator. Applications are available at the District Agriculturist's Office.

LABOUR ASSISTANCE PROGRAM

The Labour Assistance Program for Livestock Facility Development is in effect until April 30th of this year. The program is designed to alleviate local unemployment and underemployment in farming communities and to encourage the expansion and diversification of livestock production to meet increasing world demand for livestock products. It will pay toward the labour cost of the $2,000.00 providing this cost does not exceed 50 per cent of the project up to a maximum of total cost (materials and labour) of the project. Since the program is designed as a winter works program, projects undertaken must be of a type that can be carried out during the winter months and must be related to livestock. Projects could include barns, shelters, hay sheds, silos, corrals, feed handling facilities and so on. Projects must be approved by the District Agriculturist's office before starting and when completed the farmer must submit a labour input Claim for Reimbursement.

NEW ASSISTANT D.A.

We are pleased to announce the arrival a new assistant D.A. who started at the Ryley extension office on December 1, 1973. Jim MacKay is a Bozeman Montana University graduate and will be working in this district for at least one year. Mr. and Mrs. MacKay are living in Tofield and are looking forward to meeting the people of this area. Mr. MacKay is originally from Manitoba and has recently lived in Calgary.

PEST CONTROL

Farmers in the County of Beaver are reminded that any livestock losses due to predators should be reported to the agricultural fieldmans office. In situations where losses continue, the services of a predator specialist will be obtained at no cost to the farmer. Also, in some situations compensation may be available to the farmer to help cover his losses. This winter strychnine baits, which in the past have been distributed for magpie control, will be discontinued. An improved circular magpie trap is now being promoted for magpie control. However in extreme cases the county will still release the poison baits. For more information, please contact the agricultural fieldman's office (663-3730).

SEED GRAIN

The Canada Seeds Act stipulates that all grain sold as seed must be graded in accordance to the act. Anyone selling grain for seed should send one pound sample to the Plant Products Division, Canada Department of Agriculture, #73 Federal Building, Edmonton. The fee is $2.50 for the official grading and $2.50 for a germination test if desired. A seed drill survey that was taken last spring shows that the quality of seed used in the County of Beaver is extremely poor. In fact over half of the samples contained so many weed seeds that the seed would not qualify for a seed grade.

FAMILY FINANCE WORKSHOPS FOR 1974

If you would be interested in having a family finance workshop in your district, contact me as soon as possible.

Starting in the New Year, the Alberta Department of Agriculture, Home Economics Branch will be offering a series of family finance workshops in various parts of the province to show farm women and their families how to use managerial skills to achieve financial security and family goals.

These workshops will also provide participants with a thorough knowledge of wills and estate planning. Lack of this information, and lack of information on the family farm business, has often cost women unnecessary time, money and grief when they have had to settle their husband's estate. Since statistics show that the majority of women outlive men by about eight years, this is a very important aspect of farm management, particularly with all the complexities of modern farming. If a widow does not have a thorough knowledge of the farm business, it can take several years to settle an estate. If, on the other hand, she has a good knowledge of the business and has all the papers and documents in order, the estate can often be settled in a few months.

The family finance workshops consist of a series of lessons, all of which are based on a hypothetical family called the Harrisons. This "model" family was developed from information gathered from 22 farm families in south-central Alberta. The data pertaining to their 1972 family living expenditures, farm business and consumer buying practices was obtained through interviews with these 22 families. They allowed those gathering the information to use their recorded data to develop a family model for the workshop series.

This case study approach enables workshop participants to look at a typical farm family's financial situation, their assets and liabilities, and to practice their managerial skills in a hypothetical situation. They can put themselves in the place of the Harrisons and discuss family goals and the ways in which they would go about achieving them.

Each series of workshops will cover the following topics: values and goals and their relationship to managing the family's financial resources; household inventories; making decisions; developing a financial plan; making the financial plan work through a knowledge of accounting, net worth statements, estate planning and wills, family protection through life and household insurance; and consumer credit.

Tofield lady curlers arrange 'spiel plans

The Tofield Ladies Curling Club held their regular monthly meeting on Tuesday, January 15th with 30 members present.

Final arrangements were completed for the Tofield Ladies Trophy 'spiel to be held February 21st to 24th. The registration committee reported that 13 rinks have already entered, almost half of the 32 rinks allowed. The trophy committee reported that 52 trophies have been purchased and will be on display at Robinson Store when received. The banquet committee received the meetings' approval to hold the banquet on Saturday night, February 23rd in the Legion Hall.

The meeting approved a motion that the Ladies Curling Club sponsor the Irma Francis rink, the successful Zone 11 Senior Women's representatives to the Northern Alberta competitions in Edmonton beginning January 25th.

The meeting approved a raffle. It was decided to sell a limited number of tickets at $1.00 each on a pool-type raffle whereby each purchaser may choose his own lucky number. The "pool board" will be operated from Dykeman's Confectionery.

Grace Whillans, an afternoon curler reported that afternoon curlers are complaining because on many occasions coffee and sweets are not available. The president Verna Watson, informed the meeting that the names of persons responsible for each afternoon of curling is posted at the rink and she felt that when the weather and road conditions improve so would the attendance of those responsible for catering to the afternoon curlers.

The club accepted the request from the County of Beaver No. 9 to cater to a turkey super. The County is hosting a Central Alberta Counties' bonspiel to be held in Tofield on February 25th. 12 to 15 teams are expected to compete for the Central Alberta Counties trophy.

Trudeau's act is wearing thin

By Peter Ward

It's almost exactly a year since Prime Minister Trudeau, chastened by the results of the 1972 election, was trying [illegible] how much he had learned [illegible] the lessons he had learned from the election results.

There can be no denying that he kept a remarkably low profile during the year — or at least the first half of it — as he demonstrated the new image of the new man created by the voters. The new Trudeau was more like the old Mackenzie King, than the outspoken leather-coated swinger who captured a parliamentary majority in 1968.

But the new Trudeau seemed to disappear in the last month of the year, and the prime minister reverted to type. The metamorphosis came with removal of the threat of defeat over the energy issue.

The Prime Minister blushed hardly at all when he made his energy policy announcements, adopting New Democratic Party demands completely. Neither did he blush when he swooped down on Vancouver, following his statement, to spread the new gospel in the Liberal western wastelands.

But he strayed pretty far from the truth during those western speeches in more than one place, and he climbed once more upon the favorite Prime Ministerial hobby horse of polarization for political gain.

There's a deliberate attempt being made to isolate Alberta — maybe Saskatchewan too — in the current energy dilemma facing Canada. It smacks of typical Trudeau tactics, and it's every bit as destructive of national unity as is Trudeau's use of the French Canadian separatism club.

Within a few days of being assured of NDP support, Trudeau was pulling the old fuddle-duddle act in parliament again, and that's unbecoming. Is foolish no matter how loud the shouted inanities of Tory George Hees has become.

Trudeau's attempt to set the rest of Canada against oil-producing Alberta was inexcusable and at least as preposterous as his attempts again to paint the Tories in bigot colors over bilingualism. Imagine the prime minister actually saying that Quebec would sooner have bilingual policies than oil! Imagine suggesting that there is a choice between the two for Quebecers. Could it be that the Prime Minister is nervous about losing support in Quebec, because no oil and gasoline price freeze applies there?

It certainly is a pity that the not inconsiderable talent of the present cabinet is so often eclipsed by the petulant small boy behaviour of number one.

Uncalled for slight

The House of Commons delivered an uncalled for slight to the Senate last week, in unceremoniously refusing to consider an amendment proposed by the Senate in a Bill from the Commons, then sending it back to the Senate for approval, unamended, and then proroguing the House and sending the members back home for a break.

The Commons arrogance towards the Senate at all times is unreasonable, in a two-tier system of government, and unforgiveable when the Senate members were really trying to bail out the Minister of Justice from an unhappily untenable position.

Whatever the intention, the action will give rise to more and more demands that the Senate be abolished.

We believe there may be a good deal of validity to suggestions that the Senate should be revised, its content and make-up and structure altered in one or more ways to make it more in keeping with what it should be, but so far, at any rate, we're unalterably opposed to elimination of the Senate.

We firmly believe there is soundness in the concept of two tiers of government. We firmly believe there is work for both. One, call it House of Commons, Lower House, Assembly or whatever you want, should be representative of the people [illegible] and an elective house. The other, call it House of Lords, or Senate, or Upper House, or anything, should be appointed in some manner designed hopefully to provide some of the best brains in the country to bear on discussion.

Obviously, the sentence above says we do not believe that the best brains necessarily get into Parliament by the election process . . . . We're lucky if the members elected truly represent the people. And to gain the best government, we really need the expression both of the people's goals, and of the more thoughtful and [illegible] among us.

The utter and practically [illegible] predominance of either one [illegible] groups could well spell disaster [illegible] our country.

Having said all this, we truly believe it's time for revision in the method of appointment to the Senate. We truly believe the people of Canada are heartily sick of seeing [illegible] a haven for loyal party workers, although we must admit that the appointment of Alberta Senators Donald Cameron and Ernest Manning could hardly be said to follow that line.

Just for starters, what would be wrong with having a seat filled by the head of each of the major churches, (the Moderator, the Primate, the Archbishop, the President, and so on,) the national president of the I.O.D.E., the B.P.W.C., the Chamber of Commerce, one or all of the universities for example and so on and on. The list might include youth groups, ethnic groups, bankers and business groups, many others. The seat would be filled, for example, by whoever was leader or Primate, or whatever, at the time the seat came open, and then held by that person during his or her lifetime, or until they reached the statutory retirement age. That way we'd have a continuity, and a slow, steady revolving change, rather than overnight change, as with an election.

Obviously this isn't a completely developed program, but it could be the nucleus for some new pattern of appointment — something more representative of what we need, which in our opinion, is an aristocracy of brains.

We [illegible] appointive method, [illegible] strongly believe that [illegible] out having [illegible]

"ICE CAPADES"

Dear Sir:

On Saturday, January 12th two bus loads of the Tofield Senior Citizen's Golden Club travelled to the city to see the Ice Capades, a thrill to behold a beautiful setting of figure skating and the lighting was out of this world.

We have seen Karen Magnussen perform on T.V., but seeing her in person on skates was a real treat, how she can skate and control herself is most beautiful. So you young ones start practising.

The clowns and all the rest [illegible] were fantastic.

JANUARY IS NATIONAL EGG MONTH

Since most people have had a surfeit of special foods over the holiday season simpler eating is a welcome change for awhile.

National Egg Month will focus attention on one of Nature's most nearly perfect foods and help consumers spread the food dollar by stretching or replacing more expensive protein foods with eggs.

An egg dessert for example will help increase one of the most important food elements in the diet - protein, and two large eggs, as a main course, have the protein value of an average 3-ounce serving of lean meat. In addition, eggs are a good source of iron (a nutrient found to be low in Canadian diets) and also Vitamin A.

A special dessert to top off a budget meal will find favour with most families. Following is a sample recipe from a new free leaflet which also contains some dinner and supper main course recipes.

To obtain a free copy, send name and address to C.E.M.A., 116 Albert Street, Suite 905, Ottawa K1P 5G3, and ask for CEMA Recipe leaflet.

FROSTY LIME DESSERT

1 envelope unflavoured gelatine
one half cup cold water
4 egg yolks
4 egg whites
one half cup lime juice (bottled juice is fine)
three quarters cup granulated sugar one eighth teaspoon green food colouring one half cup whipping cream

Sprinkle gelatin over cold water to soften.

In top of double boiler, beat egg yolks well. Stir in lime juice and one quarter cup of the sugar until well blended. Cook over hot water, stirring constantly until mixture thickens slightly. Remove from heat and stir in gelatin until dissolved. Blend in green colouring. Cool to room temperature stirring occasionally.

Beat egg whites until frothy. [illegible] add remaining one half cup sugar, beating until stiff peaks form. Whip cream until stiff.

Fold whites, then cream into cooled lime mixture. Pour into one and one half quart dish or spoon into individual serving dishes. Refrigerate 3 hours, or until firm.

FROM THE SCRAP BOOK

Always speak well of your friends and neighbors and remember when you are throwing mud you are losing ground. Anon J.W.R.

Century mark passed by Pastor A. Aasen

"Happy Birthday" was said many times this afternoon as Bethany Home and Hospital became the setting for a special birthday tea marking the hundred year birthday for Pastor Anders O. Aasen. In addition to the residents and staff of Bethany, large numbers of friends from all over town dropped in to join in the special anniversary.

Formal observation of the birthday was held on Sunday afternoon at Convocation Centre of CLC, when several hundred people turned out to join in a public celebration of the event. Divided into two parts, a service of thanksgiving was held on the gymnasium floor upstairs, after which the group adjourned to the dining room for a session of rejoicing and refreshment.

Pastor Aasen himself contributed the highlight of the afternoon, when faced with a tremendous birthday cake bearing one hundred flaming candles, he managed to blow out nearly forty of them with one big, sustained blow. Only then did relatives around the table gleefully join in helping to put out the remaining flames.

As is customary with such affairs, much of the comment during the programs centered on the work done half a century and more by the then enterprising young man, but interestingly and most unusually, a good deal of comment focussed on the surprisingly large amount of work still being done by this centennarian, who includes in his daily round of activity functioning as chaplain at Bethany, and lecturing special classes both at Camrose Lutheran College and at Canadian Lutheran Bible Institute, as well as providing counselling services in individual cases.

The well organized celebration saw numbers of visitors from a distance, including three of his daughters, two grandsons, his son-in-law, the Rev. Dr. Fredrik Schiotz, past president of the ALC of America and of the Lutheran World Federation, and also the Rev. Dr. S. T. Jacobson, president of the ELC of Canada.

Tributes and presentations often produced a highly emotional overtone to the joyful occasion. Much of his work over 75 years in the ministry had consisted of starting new missions, or revitalizing parishes in distress, pointed out Dr. Jacobson, and the impact he has had on such units was clearly and strikingly illustrated when the present pastor of one of the churches he founded in Vancouver presented a cheque contributed by Lutherans from all over Vancouver, to support the work of the church in any field designated by Pastor Aasen. The cheque was in the amount of $1,135.50.

CLC physical education director Garry Gibson summed up the feelings of many who knew Pastor Aasen, when he voiced warm appreciation for the encouragement the College received to go forward, even when things looked bleak. "How can you not listen to a man with this kind of conviction, who at the age of . . . was it 96? . . . walked 12 miles in the Miles for Millions and just about broke every businessman in Camrose?" demanded Mr. Gibson with a big smile. "You must speak to people in their own age bracket, or they won't listen," said Mr. Gibson, "and your words speak to our age."

Tributes were voiced by many. Pastor Carl Kopperud of Messiah Church spoke of his help and inspiration for younger men, especially in the ministry, while Pastor Arnold Hagen of CLBI spoke of his inspiration to the students there, through his enthusiasm, his encouragement, and his evangelistic fervor. Pastor Henry Haugen of Bethany Home and Hospital spoke warmly of his ministry at Bethany being a real blessing, while Morris Leiren, on behalf of the laymen, spoke of the need of more men with such positive optimism.

Rev. Karel Lunde humorously closed the session with the comment that this was a great occasion . . . it had to be, he said, to take precedence over the Super Bowl football game, but it was fitting in that Pastor Aasen had been a great runner in the spiritual race of life. The church's greatest heritage is its young people stressed Mr. Lunde, and Mr. Aasen had always been keenly interested in the young.

President Glen Johnson was chairman of both parts of the proceedings, and took the opportunity to present greetings from Premier Lougheed, Governor General Michener, Prime Minister Trudeau, Queen Elizabeth, and telegram from Norwegian Consul Arne J. Johannessen bearing greetings from the King of Norway.

At the special request of Pastor Aasen, his grandson, Dr. Robyn Garvin of Vancouver delighted the audience with a piano solo, playing the first movement of a Beethoven sonata, encoring the popular request with the third movement, Perpetual Motion. Dr. Garvin's concert level presentation delighted not only his grandfather, but the entire assembly.

Other musical highlights in the programs were two musical numbers by the CLC Choir directed by Prof. James Neff, in the first session and three selections by the CLBI Singers.

Aasen has led busy life

Anders O. Aasen was born in Lyngdal, Norway, January 16, 1874. His father was "husmann" or cottager, which means that he belonged to the hardest working and poorest paid farmers in Norway. When Anders was a year and one half old, his father was killed in the woods. Anders' mother was left with a brood of five children, the oldest eight years and the youngest just three weeks old. From the age of six to eleven, Anders knew no real home. He stayed with neighbors, a little while at each place, as was the custom for the poor people of the parish.

In 1885, he emigrated to America with his family, and with the help of an uncle. They took residence at East Koshkonong, Wisconsin where two years later he prepared for confirmation with the Rev. Jacob Otteson. This was the turning point in Anders life. Pastor Otteson took a great interest in the bright but poor newcomer and later directed his steps toward Luther College in Decorah, Iowa and thence to the Seminary.

Pastor Aasen was ordained in 1899 in the Norwegian Lutheran Synod. Pastor Aasen's field of labor through fifty years of ministry stretch from Minnesota to the interior of Alaska in the north, and to Sountern California in the South. He has especially been successful, in establishing new missions and in reviving old defunct churches and guiding them until they become self-supporting. All of his ministry may be summed up in three words . . . Pastor Aasen's words: "HOME MISSION ZEAL"!

His ministry commenced at Belview Minnesota in 1899 to 1910. From there he moved to Minneapolis where he served 24 years. During his ministry at Minneapolis he started the Lutheran Rescue Home for girls, and was president of its Board of Directors for eighteen years.

After leaving Minneapolis he was constantly on the move. He stayed in one place only long enough to get a new mission established, or in case of older neglected congregations, until they had become numerically and financially able to carry on the work without aid from the Board of Home Missions. On the Pacific Coast, he was Pastor at First Lutheran Church in Vancouver and while there established a congregation in Dunbar Lutheran Church in Vancouver. He served at Port Madison and Seattle, Washington for five years, at Santa Monica, California for three years and the Matanuska Colongy and Sitka, Alaska for one year . . . his ministry in Alaska was supported by the Government.

In 1957, in his retirement, he was called to Bethany Home and Hospital in Camrose, to be Chaplain. He served for three years, and was later relieved by a younger man. However, he continued active as an assistant in taking services and Bible studies for a number of years following . . . even to the present day. During his stay at Bethany which became his home, he has taught Bible classes at Camrose Lutheran College for eight years and is presently a guest lecturer in Bible and religious studies at the College.

He travels widely through the U.S. and Canada, filling invitations to speak at churches he has founded or served. Last November he travelled to Vancouver to be guest speaker at First Lutheran Church, while they celebrated their anniversary. He has been asked to address the Seminary students in Saskatoon this winter and will be going to Prince Rupert early this Spring to be present at a Church anniversary.

Committees were appointed to look after these, with others appointed for the Chamber of Commerce on February 5th and the annual birthday party. The date for this is changed from the 20th to the 18th of January. The Lodge had an invitation to visit with Viking Lodge at their meeting Tuesday, February 5th and weather permitting, two car loads will attend.

The district meeting of No. 4 District which will be held in Holden this year was discussed, with a tentative date suggested. Lady Chupka had obtained the material for the Lodge aprons, for use when catering. At the conclusion of the meeting a social and lunch were enjoyed. Lunch hostesses were Lady Christine MacKay and Lady Kathleen Hurum.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Tiedemann had Helen's mother, Mrs. Morrison of Toronto with them for a few days after the New Years Holiday, arriving from Unity, Sask. where she had been with her son and family for three weeks. Helen and Henry drove her to Edmonton on the Sunday of the past week where they held a family re-union and dinner. Mrs. Morrison is visiting with relatives in Edmonton for a couple of days before she leaves by plane.

Holden Lodge B.P.O. Elks held their monthly meeting, on Monday evening, with Exalted Ruler, John Semotuik chairing the meeting, and a good turnout of members in spite of the bad weather. Regular business was attended to and correspondence dealth with. The committee in charge of the New Years Eve supper and dance reported a very successful evening. Bro. Earl Hardy of the bingo committee reported that owing to the inclement weather the past few weeks the attendance at the weekly bingos had been reduced. A donation of $300.00 was made to the Village of Holden towards the operation of the skating rink. Ex. Ruler Semotuik appointed a committee to make arrangements and set a date for a social at which they would entertain at a Ladies Night. A report was read during the meeting of the Elks Purple Cross Fund which assists the Elks Deaf and Detection program.

Holden and district news items

(Mrs. G. H. Taylor)

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Tschir had their families from Edmonton and Camrose spending the holiday season with them.

Visiting with Mrs. Rosie Havres for the Christmas holiday were her nephew Julian and his wife. During the holiday week they visited in Edmonton with Rosie's sister and family.

Monday afternoon visitors in Edmonton were Clara Anderson, Mrs. Hanson and Geo. H. Taylor.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. H. Taylor were Sunday visitors with Mrs. Campbell.

Miss Ethel Brown was a business visitor in Camrose and Edmonton during the Christmas holiday vacation.

Mrs. Beth Campbell had the pleasure on Monday evening of hearing her grandson, Jim Campbell, playing in a program over C.K.U.A. Jim was introduced by John Barnum, Concert Master of the Edmonton Symphony Orchestra and conductor of the Edmonton Youth Orchestra. They are old friends and both attended the University of Toronto, taking music and their degree there. Jim played Poulenc's Sonata for clarinet and piano, the pianist being John York of London, England. Jim has been spending a couple of weeks during the holidays with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ken Campbell at Leduc, and was returning to Toronto after New Year's to play in several concerts for the Jeunesse Musicale and other concert work.

HIGH SCHOOL CAROLLERS

On Friday night December 21 a few of the Holden High School Students Union members went out carolling. They collected $55 which went to the Holden Agricultural Society.

Those carolling were Susan Cooper, Barbara Kawalilak, and Darlene Micklich, Debra Semotuk, Peter Kawalilak, Brenda Sen, Bernice Tymchak, Debbie Malik, Jackie Semotiuk and Cris Cooper.

New Year's Day guests with Mr. and Mrs. Otto Hurum were Mr. and Mrs. Roy Nichols.

Wishing all the staff at the Mercury and friends around the district, happiness and good health in the New Year.

"May the road wind sweetly before you,
May the sun shine gently upon you,
May the wind blow softly to your back;
May the good Lord hold you in the hollow of His hand."

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Keith returned home on Friday afternoon last week after visiting for a week during the recent holiday with their daughter Loretta and family, Mr. and Mrs. Larry Thygesen in Calgary. Their grandson drove them there and back home.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Siber, who recently retired from farming and are now residing in Camrose, will be celebrating their golden wedding anniversary on January 19th at the Moose Hall in Camrose. Open house will be held from 7 to 9 with a dance to follow. They will be pleased to see all their friends and relatives to help them celebrate.

Mr. and Mrs. Pete Mielimaka entertained a number of friends and relatives Tuesday evening to celebrate their 30th wedding anniversary.

George Albrecht, who has been resident for the past few years at Vialta Lodge, is now resident at the nursing home in Viking.

Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Budd returned home Sunday evening after spending the weekend in Provost and Cadogan visiting with Mae's mother and relations. Their daughter Linda and children went with them and then returned home to Moose Jaw. They had been visiting with her parents for a couple of weeks over the holiday seasons.

Mrs. Campbell was most pleasantly surprised on Sunday when, on looking out of the window, saw that two Good Samaritans were cleaning out the snow from the paths around the house and sidewalk. The boys doing their good deed were David MacKay and Harvey Hunchuk, the boys refusing payment of any kind for their work.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur James, their daughter Carol and Arthur's sister, Mrs. Irene Sandeman-Allan, visited with Mrs. Campbell for a couple of hours after the funeral service for their mother, Mrs. Mary James, before leaving for Edmonton to take the train back to Kamloops, Irene then going by bus to Victoria.

Mr. and Mrs. Pat Fleming, Dawn, Heather, Garth and Miss Darlene Helfrich were Boxing Day guests with the Jim Flemings of Sherwood Park. Dawn stayed over for a few days to visit with Kathy Helfrich.

VIKING BASKETBALL

On Tuesday, Dec. 18th, the Viking Senior High basketball teams were in Holden to complete the first half of the County of Beaver season. The girls game opened quickly and Viking made points in quick succession until the final buzzer ended the game with a score of 3- to 10 in favor of the Viking team.

Viking also dominated the play in the boys game, totalling a score of 40 to 27. (This score may be slightly incorrect due to a lack of official statistics.) At the halfway mark in the season the girls team, the Viking Vixens, are on top of the league with a 3-0 record. The boys team, the Norsemen, hold the second place with a 2-1 record.

FEED GRAIN TRANSPORT ASSISTANCE PROGRAM

An extension of the current Provincial Feed Freight Assistance Program has been announced by Dr G R Purnell, Deputy Minister of Agriculture, effective January 1 1974.

The program will assist livestock and poultry producers in transporting feed grains at the rate of 20 cents per hundredweight on wheat, oats and barley that have to be transported over distances greater than 100 miles. The program now applies to the transport of feed grains in addition to forage.

Feedlot operators, livestock and poultry owners and feed mills are all eligible provided that the livestock owner is the ultimate beneficiary of this program. The maximum grant will be $1,000 per applicant.

This assistance is designed to aid livestock owners who are forced, through insufficient local supplies, to transport feed grains long distances.

Application forms will be available at all municipal district and county offices after January 1st, 1974. Those eligible are advised to retain all receipts of transactions between January 1st and 31st until the forms are available.

The Forage Freight Assistance Program implemented November 6th, 1973, is in effect until March 31st, 1974. This program assists stockmen at the rate of $.06 per ton mile at distances over 25 miles to a maximum of $15 per ton. This is available to owners of dairy cattle, beef cattle on feed on farms, and beef cattle in commercial feedlots. This assistance applies to the movement of hay, straw, pellets and cubes and is available through municipal and county offices.

Dr Purnell urges farmers who are seeking or selling feed grain or forage to make use of the service provided by the Alberta Feed and Forage Exchange operated by the Alberta Grain Commission. There are no costs for services offered by the Commission. The exchange takes no part in pricing but lists both potential buyers and sellers.

Tofield School quests tv sets

By Grace Phillips

Last year the Tofield School appealed for donations of used TV sets. This request met with an excellent response from the people of the Tofield area. The TV sets were repaired and have been put to good use in the classrooms.

They have proved very useful for receiving educational programs and ... that more sets could be used.

So, if anyone has recently bought a TV set and is wondering what to do with the old one a happy solution would be to donate it to the Tofield School where it would be very welcome. If preferred, the donor may phone the school at 662-3133 and the set will be picked up

Celebrating 50 years

Mr. and Mrs. Charles R. Sizer marked their golden wedding anniversary on Jan. 7th, and celebrated it with an open house and dance on Friday at the Moose Hall. Sergina and Charles are both from pioneer families in the Holden district, and lived there until retiring to Camrose last October. Many attended the open house from distances, including a daughter from Equader and two of the witnesses at the wedding 50 years ago, namely, Mrs. Christina Nohr of Vancouver, Mrs. Sizer's sister-in-law, and Mrs. Elise Hopstead of Ann Arbor, Mich., Mrs. Sizer's eldest sister.

Don Litwin will head Beaverhill Gas Co-op

There was a large attendance at the General Meeting of the Beaverhill Gas Co-op which was held in the Kingman Hall on January 21st. There were representatives from the Co-op Branch, Palmer Engineering and North Western Utilities in attendance. Northwestern Utilities showed interest in the construction and operation of the Beaverhills Gas Co-op.

A motion was made by Charles Quall, seconded by Lars Rude that the board of directors investigate what terms and arrangements Utility Companies are prepared to provide to the Beaverhill Gas Co-op and compare these terms and arrangements with contractual agreements with Palmer Engineering, full membership ownership and member participation. Having reviewed and assessed the alternatives the board of directors shall be empowered to take whatever action they deem is in the best interests of the membership. Carried.

A permanent board of directors was elected:

District 1 Leo Laube,
District 2 Harry Stauffer,
District 3 Joe Kaufman,
District 4 Don Litwin,
District 5 Harvey Adamson,
District 6 Wilf Howard,
District 7 Ken Canfield,
District 8 Fred Coyendal,
District 9 Les Webster
District 10 Peter Brown,
District 11 Vince Bates

After the meeting the board of directors met and elected the following officers.

Chairman Don Litwin
Vice Chairman Harry Stauffer,
Secretary Lester Sorenson.

It was agreed to retain Mr. Collins as acting treasurer.

The present application sign up is 144 members. Agreements for installation and gas service cannot be made before we have a two-third sign up of rural customers.

Community League again names Moos as president

by Grace Phillips

Participation in the most financially successful Dominion Day celebration in Tofield's history, a donation of $500.00 to the Tofield Agricultural Society, $133 given to Tofield Junior Sports, uniforms costing $182.00 for a minor hockey team, a $50.00 bursary to the students with the highest marks in Grade IX in 1973, a trophy for the Calf Club, participation in the annual visit of Santa Claus to Tofield, a teen dance, a New Year's dance were among the activities reported by Bob Moos, president of the Tofield Community League at the League's annual meeting on January 22nd in the Community Centre.

Preceding the annual meeting, the regular January meeting took place with the president in the chair and 13 members present. H. E. Christensen, treasurer, reported a successful month for the League.

A bingo, the annual Carol Festival, the Community Christmas Card and the New Year's Eve dance were all profitable activities.

In regard to the Carol Festival, secretary, J. C. Lampitt reported that Mr. Henry Schroeder who was in charge of the Festival, had made a donation to the League of his expenses incurred for that event. This donation of $40.00 was gratefully recorded.

It was decided to investigate the cost of carpeting the foyer and the meeting room of the Community Centre.

W. A. Swift brought to the attention of the meeting that garbage is no longer to be burned at the rear of the hall. Instead it is to be bagged and put out for collection which is done on Tuesdays and Thursdays.

The 1973 financial report given by treasurer H. E. Christensen showed fairly successful year in gross receipts but with high expenses for maintainance.

A large percentage of the receipts had been donated to various local organizations as a community service.

J. A. Whyte, theatre committee convenor, reported a financial loss in running the twice-weekly shows.

Election of officers for 1974 resulted in the same slate of officers being returned to office after a vote of thanks for their performance in 1973.

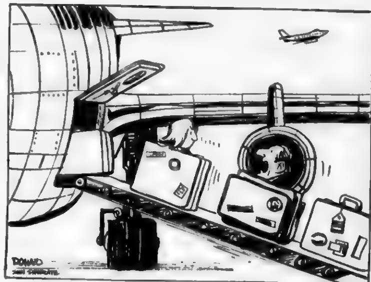
MacDuff Ottawa Report

Fending off Domesday



"NOW I KNOW WHY THEY CALL IT A PACKAGE DEAL!"

The stakes are high

There's no game in the country at the moment where the stakes are higher than the one in which Premier Lougheed is playing at the moment, and it needs a pretty cool head and a steady hand to even sit in on it. The Alberta team went east with a lot of the marbles already, knowing full well everybody else at the conference table wants to take some of the marbles away from them.

Mr. Lougheed has indicated he's prepared to do some bargaining, in the interests of a united Canada, but he's also indicated that he's prepared to give nothing away. And after all, why should he? In more than seventy years of trying to balance the terms with Central Canada, the West has never had a better bargaining position than it has right now, and it probably won't get another chance as good as this for another seventy years.

We'd bet there are mighty few Albertans today whose support for the position taken by Mr. Lougheed wouldn't transcend every long-term party loyalty, so that he sits at the conference with almost universal backing from Albertans.

Mr. Lougheed quietly pointed out in the opening round of statements that for years and years the West has tried to interest the East in our coal, in our oil, and in our gas, and they never heard us. As long as it was available easily, and more cheaply, from somewhere else, they didn't even know who we were. Suddenly oil is hard to get, and the price has risen drastically, and those products for which they had no interest a short time ago suddenly take on a new meaning, one important to the national interest.

Mr. Lougheed has urged development of a policy of national energy self-sufficiency, one which would see coal from the West shipped to the East, also. We've been busy for years exporting jobs, in the form of raw resources, said the premier, urging the development of tariff policies and tax policies designed to encourage the development of more of these jobs in Canada, preferably as close as possible to the actual source of production, in order to better distribute these jobs throughout the entire country.

One problem is that the Trudeau government wants to introduce an extremely short term policy, one which would last only until the end of this April without specifying what they would consider afterwards. And unless they impose some sort of ill-considered, spur of the moment policy, there's no chance it could be worked out sensibly in so short a period of time.

If it could, then why has there not been some sort of sensible solution to the problem of freight rates, which the Ottawa government agreed to study months and months ago at the conference in Calgary with all the western premiers. Half a year has gone by, and they haven't yet succeeded in gathering all the papers, much less coming closer to any meaningful decision.

If we can have one price for oil all across the country, just by snapping fingers and signing a proclamation, then why can't we have a uniform rate for shipping freight all across the country, too.

By Peter Ward

As wait for the federal-provincial conference on energy to sort out the future directions for Canada in that vital field, it is a rather frightening experience to watch the price of oil continue to spiral out of sight.

There are a few aspects of the international energy crisis which should be considered, if for no other reason than to place our personal concerns about shortages and prices in perspective.

The impetus for higher oil prices which gathered full momentum in 1973, did not come from the Arab states, contrary to what one may think. The history of price negotiations between international oil companies and the oil producing states shows clearly that the Shah of Iran was the major force aiming at higher prices for producing countries.

Those countries have all taken a price beating from the industrialized nations in the past, because there was until recently more oil available than the market could absorb. The terrible growth appetite of the western world changed that situation.

Now the price of oil is shooting upwards, but there is a finite limit to how high it can go. If the oil producing nations price their product right out of the market and destroy the economies of the industrialized nations, then we'll be back in the old situation of an oversupply, because nobody will have the funds to buy oil. The oil producers have shown themselves to be pretty shrewd recently, and they are well aware of that danger. Price and shortage of supply will not be allowed to kill off western economies because that would beggar the seller as well as the buyer.

However, we in the West can expect a traumatic period of readjustment, as we all learn to change our habits of energy waste.

And that brings up another aspect of the current shortage. By slapping us with these higher energy prices, the oil producing nations of the world may just have struck a major blow for the survival of this old globe of ours.

The way we have been ravaging things, tossing petroleum wastes into the sea, fouling the land with them, and literally filling the air with exhaust gases, pollution doomsday was racing to meet us at break-neck speed.

WEST TO ALASKA

Canadian bankers will be watching more than passing interest to see the outcome of Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce's applications to open a branch in Alaska. At last week's formal hearing in Anchorage, almost every Alaska bank opposed the Canadian bank's entry. But it was supported by several influential members of the state House of representatives. The Commerce made a strong pitch based, in part, on its strong representation in northern Canadian communities. It has 10 branches in the Yukon and Northwest Territories and provides eight other northern communities with a "flying bank" service. It also stressed its significant experience in financing resource projects. Apart from some technical objections by the other banks, the fact that U.S. banks may not establish branches in Canada was clearly a concern. And although it didn't come out in the formal hearing, there is, it appears, concern that entry of a Canadian bank might clear the way for an invasion by Japanese banks. A decision is not expected until early in the New Year. Meanwhile, Warren Moysey, assistant general manager, international, said "I'm more hopeful since the hearing, because we got fairly broad cross section of approval. The opposition was pretty narrowly based."

RAIL POSTER SEEKS SNOWMOBILER CO-OPERATION— CP Rail is distributing the poster to snowmobiler and sports clubs, and posting it in its stations from coast to coast. There are stiff fines involved in operating the vehicles on railway property. Canada safety council figures show that six people died in the 1972-73 winter season as a result of snowmobile accident in or alongside railway tracks.

YOU
TOMORROW

There is only today between you and tomorrow

Which is why Canada Pension Plan benefits will be increased today and will be kept in line with the cost increases of tomorrow

What this means to you as a beneficiary

From January 1st 1974, Canada Pension Plan benefit payments will be adjusted to reach . . . then maintain a level in line with the actual cost of living.

If you are receiving monthly benefits that began during the period 1967 to 1973, your benefits have been recalculated so that the amount you receive in 1974 is related to the actual increase in the cost of living over the years your benefits have been paid. When you receive your January 1974 benefit cheque, you will see that it has been increased. The increase in your payment will vary from 8% to 20% and will depend on the year in which your benefit first became payable.

In future years, if living costs continue to rise, you can expect further increases in your benefits based on current cost of living data.

What this means to you as a contributor

As a contributor to the Canada Pension Plan, you are building a basic and portable retirement plan for the future and at the same time providing current protection for yourself and your dependents against the possibility of severe disability or early death.

In order to protect the value of your eventual benefits, the Canadian Parliament has passed legislation which ensures that the contributions you make today will give benefits that maintain the purchasing power of today's wages twenty, thirty or even fifty years from now . . . when you need it!

To achieve this, the Government plans to have the earnings ceiling — the maximum amount on which contributions are paid and on which benefits are calculated — increased each year so that it will reach, and then keep even with the average earnings of Canadian industrial workers. This ceiling will be raised from $5,600.00 in 1973, to $6,600.00 in 1974 and $7,400.00 in 1975.

This new earnings ceiling means that the year's basic exemption — the initial amount on which you do not pay contributions — is changed from $600.00 in 1973 to $700.00 for 1974.

These changes also mean that the maximum employee contributions will increase from $90.00 a year in 1973 to $106.20 in 1974. Your contribution is matched by your employer. In the case of self-employed persons, the maximum annual contribution is increased to $212.40 for 1974 as against $180.00 last year. For earnings of less than $5,700.00, there will be no increase in contributions.

The change in the earnings ceiling means that the maximum retirement pension will rise from $90.71 for pensions effective in December 1973 to $134.97 for those whose pensions will begin in December 1975. As the maximum earnings levels for the years after 1975 continue to rise, so will the maximum retirement pensions in those years. There will also be increases in the maximum values each year for disability and survivors' benefits.

THE MINERAL
(AND OTHER SYMPTONS
AS WELL)

Why is it that so many women take to eating clay or dirt during their pregnancy while other women, pregnant or not - - and some men - make a habit of chewing ice cubes? Why do so many children chew on paint chips and plaster containing lead? Why are so many youngsters irritable, lacking in appetite, problems to parents and doctors? And what is the real reason for impaired learning in many youngsters?

Moreover, why do so many adults - - women particularly - suffer chronically, if not dramatically, from feelings of fatigue and apathy

The one answer to all these questions is iron deficiency. And it doesn't have to be so great a deficiency that it produces out right anemia. The news today is that iron deficiency can have many repurcussions besides anemia - - that it is a systemic, not just a blood problem. And that it is amazingly common - the most prevalent nutritional deficiency state in the country.

Iron is an essential component of red blood cells. It goes into hemoglobin, the red cell sub stance that carries oxygen from the lungs to the muscles, brain, and all parts of every body cell. It is found in enzymes that promote vital body processes.

Total body iron is only half a gram, less than 2- 100ths of an ounce in infancy, and increases to only about five grams in adulthood. Seventy percent of it is in use in blood, cells and enzymes, only about 30 percent is held stored in reserve. And that makes for a slim margin of safety - - because one milligram is lost daily in urine, sweat, and castoff cells, and while an average modern diet provides 10 - 15 milligrams, only 10 - 15 percent of that is absorbed. So it is easy to have an iron deficiency

One reason for this may be the decrease in use of iron cooking utensils. Once standbys in homes and processing plants iron cooking pots have been much replaced by aluminum, stainless steel, and other ware.

Another factor is that the amount of iron in the total array of foods on the market averages about 10 milligrams for every 200 calories. Many concerned about keeping calories and weight down fall far below their iron requirements. Moreover, 50 - 60 percent of the iron in the usual diet is supplied by meats and cereals - - but women vary considerably in meat eating habits and whenever weight is a problem there is a tendency to reduce intake of cereal products. In fact, as people in general become more affluent cereal consumption tends to decrease

For your family you will want to make certain you serve a balanced diet with foods rich in iron. Excellent iron sources include meat (especially liver) green vegetables beans nuts wholegrained and enriched cereals.

Funeral service was held Friday, January 18th at Park Memorial Chapel in Edmonton with the Rev. R.M Bartlett officiating. Cremation followed.

Mrs Laskoski's brother, father of Milton Malick, passed away last October.

Arthur Olson was in Camrose, Friday evening, January 18th to attend the 50th wedding anniversary celebration held for his aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Sizer. Also attending the occasion was his sister, Mrs. Alice Jones and Mrs. Bertha Nolr both of Edmonton and Mrs. Charles Sizer's sister, Nina from Vancouver.

FRIENDSHIP MEETING

The Friendship Group met for their regular monthly meeting, on Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs Beth Campbell with 10 ladies present. Mrs. Rosie Raeder, in charge of devotions, opened the meeting with a hymn and the Lord's Prayer in unison. Her scripture reading was John, Chapter 14, verses 1 - 18, then she gave a short reading from the Upper Room on Faith and concluded with a prayer.

The Roll call was taken with the ladies responding in the usual manner with a scripture verse. The ladies were advised that a letter of thanks and receipt had been received from The Canadian Bible House for the generous donation sent in by the group. A picture of the group with a covering letter had been sent to their protegee in Hong Kong and a Christmas card made by her had been received.

A chapter of the study book was taken and discussed, Hammers in the Fire, this being on evidence of the universal flood as mentioned in Genesis, chapters 7-8. The meeting was closed with a hymn, the hostess served lunch, and a social hour was enjoyed.

The next meeting in February will be held at the home of Mrs. Edith Carlson with Mrs Taylor taking the devotions.

Ross Zwerschke is presently a hospital patient having treatment for an attack of pneumonia.

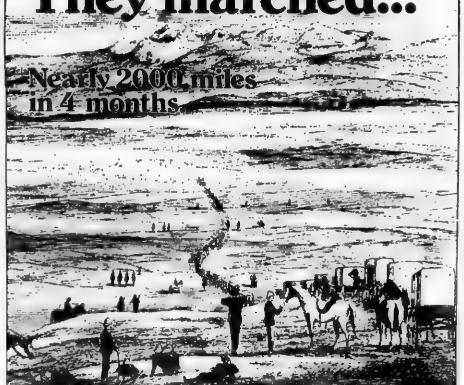
Thought for the Week:
The things other people say which you like the least may do you the most good.

They marched...



With the promise of a dollar a day.

They marched over territory that had never been properly mapped. Most of the men had never been west of Toronto, were not accustomed to riding horses or drinking water with the colour and consistency of ink. The oxen and horses died around them from hunger and thirst. Travellers brought them stories of Indian massacres. Their pay was to have been a dollar a day. Nine months later they still had not received it. In spite of all this they managed to establish outposts in the area that later became Alberta. One was Fort Macleod, another Fort Saskatchewan. These forts and their successors, brought law and order to an area that had known neither . . . and laid the foundations of a province that now has a history one hundred years proud.

I NEED YOUR HELP

WHY?

Because it costs money — a lot of money to pay for me and to operate me!

I was completed in August, 1972 at a total cost of $213,942.00. Since then, equipment such as time-clock, infra-red heaters, shaver and flooder, and furnishings have increased my total cost to $220,500.00.

When my doors opened in October, 1972 the Tofield Agricultural Society had borrowed $70,000.00. Since then, this loan has been reduced to $61,000.00 but the monthly interest on this loan is around $475.00. Since July, 1972 interest payments have totalled $7,625.00 — again a lot of money that could have been put to better use.

How Am I Used?

I am used by people of all ages for many different activities, such as:

1. Senior Hockey — 9 hrs. weekly
2. Minor Hockey — 21 hrs. weekly
3. Rental for Minor Hockey — 5½ hrs. weekly
4. Public Skating — 8½ hrs. weekly
5. Figure Skating — 6¾ hrs. weekly
6. Old Timers' Hockey — 3 hrs. weekly
7. Midnight Raiders Hockey — 1½ hrs. weekly
8. Regular Rental — 7½ hrs. weekly
9. Occasional use on Sunday and Saturday mornings — 5¼ hrs. weekly

So — you see — I am kept very busy.

Also, many spectators get hours of enjoyment cheering for their team — the Tofield Satellites, the Ryley Flyers or the Grand Forks Gulls in the Beaverhill Hockey League. They enjoy rooting from the Tofield Old Timers and for the Tofield or Ryley teams in the Highway 14 Minor Hockey League. And who can forget the Ice Revue "Fantasyland" by the Tofield Skating Club.

How Would I Like to be Used?

I'd prefer to be used more by the people of the area. However, my directors find it necessary to rent my ice for 14 hours or more per week. They say that this pays most of the interest on the loan.

I believe, however, that I could provide more public skating, more practice time for hockey, more time for the figure skaters, and there might even be other activities that could be added to the schedule.

How Can You Help?

Please give generously when the canvasser calls on you to complete the canvass started last year. To date, this canvass has raised $4,862.00.

I need $21,000.00 more. This amount will reduce my loan to $40,000.00. I feel that if this goal is reached, my debt and interest payments can be handled without a further appeal for donations. And, I could be used the way in which I would like to be used.

Remember that your donation qualifies as an income tax exemption!

When Will the Canvass be Held?

Wednesday, January 30 to Saturday, February 9.

WHO WILL CANVASS?

Paul Kallal, Oscar Epp, Vince Bates, Bruce Telford, Owen Jones, Alberta Watt, Mavis McLeod, Barry Price, Tom Jacobs, Herb Swars, Wes Lawson, Arney Klassen, Sam Hulkovich, Ed Williams, John Baergen, Arnold Hildebrand, Chick Blacklock, Robert Dueck, Bill Friesen, Howard Meger, Floyd Irwin, Donald Roth, Lawrence Kallal, Glen Rell, Dave Schmidt, John Thiessen, Homer Schmidt, Don Litwin, Eldon Boettger, Harley Lehman, Joseph Wideman, Ken Boettger, Harold Schultz, Charlie Sears, Glen Jones, Ron Goeglein, Joe Laarhuis, Stan Schacker, Cork Neufeld, Stan Voltner.

Also, donations may be left at the Town Office, Tofield.

Or if you prefer you may mail your donation to the Secretary-Treasurer, Tofield Agricultural Society, Box 129, Tofield, Alberta.

Through the ice with ease

A proposal to transport liquified natural gas (LNG) from the islands of the Queen Elizabeth group in the Artic by a semi-submersible icebreaker has been advanced by a Winnipeg man. "Such a tanker-icebreaker could also be used to carry oil through thick Arctic ice with comparitive ease," says Robert M Stephens, who recently was issued a U.S. patent on the idea. "It would be equally adaptable for transporting bulk commodities such as potash, sulphur, ore, pulp and grain," he says. Stephens says: "While I am an engineer I have no degrees, but then neither did Edison, the Wright Brothers, Henry Ford, Carlson - the inventor of Zerox - or Sir Charles Cockerell, inventor of the hovercraft." He has invented many things, including an air-water-borne barge which, under test, showed that it reduced water resistance by 60 percent, a low-cost rapid transit system for low-density traffic in the Canadian hinterland, and variable-pitch propellors for light aircraft. "I have also designed a new type of caisson that could considerably reduce construction costs of the Cocquid power site in the Bay of Fundy, N.S." he says. The icebreaker is designed with the hull of a submarine and the superstructure of a conventional ship, except that the foredeck slopes toward the bow and has a series of sharp, rugged teeth that would help break up the ice as the vessel slips, semisubmerged, partially under the thick ice of the Arctic. "The whole of the hull portion of the semi-submersible under-rides the ice sheet, avoiding it, and only the narrow enclosed superstructure confronts it," Stephens says. He points out that the S.S. Manhattan, in both her voyages in the Northwest Passage, proportionately had twice the power of a conventional vessel and could only manage to average four knots in seven-foot thick ice. "Twelve knots is considered the economic minimum," Stephens say. He believes a semisubmersible liquefied natural gas carrier of 60,000 tons could transport LNG from a liquefaction plant on one of the islands of the Queen Elizabeth group to Churchill, Man., from where the LNG could be re-converted to gas and pumped through a pipeline to Canada's central provinces. Stephens has a plan to keep the port of Churchill ice-free all year by building a barrier at Fort Prince of Wales, as well as a dam and diversion channel adjacent to Cockles Point to get rid of slush ice. There could also be twin shipping locks and a shipping lane dredged from the locks to deep water. "The harbour would be kept in a reasonably fluid condition by compressed air bubbles and the heating and stirring of the water by a wind-powered machine," he says.

W. O. Mitchell to speak at College

One of Western Canada's most famed writers W. O. Mitchell will appear at Camrose Lutheran College, on Sunday evening, January 27, at 8:15 p.m. in the Convocation Centre. The lecture is sponsored by the College Cultural Committee. His appearance at C.L.C. is funded by a grant from the Canada Council.

William Ormond Mitchell, the creator of the mythical inhabitants of Crocus, Saskatchewan, has become almost a myth himself. Because of his talents as a raconteur, his novels and plays, his successful radio series "Jake and the Kid" and his articulate views upon the creative process, his inimitable personality has had a great deal of exposure through the media. Probably he is better known to the public than any other western Canadian writer.

Vikettes win three, but Vikings get two

The CLC Vikettes and Vikings each picked up two wins in ACAC basketball action during the past week while the Vikettes won an exhibition contest and the Vikings lost one.

The victories gave the Vikettes a 4-2 record in league play to date while the Vikings evened their record at 3-3.

In league standings, released on January 15th, the Vikettes were 5th while the Vikings were 7th. Both teams were in action last night (Tuesday) against Red Deer. These games will be reported next week.

Calgary will be the center of action this coming weekend as both CLC teams tangle with Mount Royal on Friday night and play against SAIT on Saturday afternoon.

The Vikettes whipped NAIT 51-23 on Wednesday as Pinsky led the way with 14 points while Knudslien had 10 points. On Saturday, the Vikettes stopped SAIT 63-45 with Knudslien leading the way with 18 points. In an exhibition contest, the Vikettes whipped Mars Maidens of Edmonton 44-13 on Friday night with Knudslien again racking up 18 points while Pinsky had 10 points.

The Vikings finished strong to edge NAIT 72-69 as Olsen picked up 24 points while Relling had 19. McEachern of NAIT led the scorers with 29 points. In the game with SAIT, Vikings won handily 86-51 as Olsen racked up 28 points while Benedet of the losers swished 30.

In an exhibition game, the U. of A. Bearcats edged the Vikings 75-72 as Lawrie led the way with 20 points. Olsen of the losers was the game's top point-getter with 26 points.

CROP SURVEY FROM SPACE

Satellites orbiting hundreds of miles above the fields may one day replace the teams of government workers, farmers and elevator agents who, each summer, must call or drive from farm to farm to estimate the size of maturing crops.

The satellites may provide earlier acreage estimates for the Canadian Wheat Board and may one day be able to measure the extent of drought, frost damage and the productivity of prairie rangeland, says an Agriculture Canada researcher.

Zwierschke re-elected to head Holden Society

The 1973 annual meeting of the Holden and District Agricultural Society was held on December 20th, in the Holden Community Hall, with approximately twenty-six members in attendance.

In his report, President Allan Zwierschke outlined the Society's activities and progress made during the year on the proposed Recreational Complex. He stated that members of the Board of Directors travelled to several communities to view their recreational facilities and to obtain ideas. Several firms have submitted bids, and although a contract has not yet been signed, a building has been chosen. The contract will be signed early in the new year.

A major financial breakthrough was made when the Alberta Government capital grant of $50,000 was approved. Mr. Zwierschke made mention of the very successful carnival which was held last fall, and thanked all the committees and everyone who helped make it so.

Officers elected were: Allan Zwierschke, president; William Ogrodnick, first vice-president; Norman Koetke, second vice-president; directors re-elected were: Bob MacKay, Lyle Grosland, Harry Shyba, Dave Faryna, Leona Koetke, Lars Olson, Bruce Budd, and Norman Lefsrud. Newly elected directors were: Helmer Olson and Marie Malick.

Beaver ATA holds annual curling 'spiel

by Mrs. G. H. Taylor

In the recently held County of Beaver Alberta Teachers Association annual bonspiel held in Viking, 16 rinks competed in a three-game point system series of curling matches.

Out of a total possible 30 points, the Allan rink of Tofield accumulated 23½ points. On the team, Vivian Carlson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Melvin Carlson was a player.

Tofield's Bill Taylor rink and Holden's Francis Blue rink each earned 21 points. Skips rocks were thrown to determine second and third place, with Bill Taylor's rock nearest to the button breaking the tie giving his rink second place and Holden rink taking third place.

Viking's Terry Petrie rink captured honors for most points in a game with 11 and highest end with 6. Allan Zwierschke from Ryley played hard fought games but only managed to make 7½ points.

There were also games played by Bruce teachers and rinks representing the County of Beaver School Committee and Central office. The day concluded with a "pot luck" supper and presentations of general merchandise prizes.

Holden plans canvass for recreation complex

The Holden and District Agricultural Society is going to conduct a canvass of the village and surrounding area, in an attempt to raise a minimum of $40,000. The purpose of the canvass is to raise a portion of the required $180,000.

The campaign will start on February 8th, and will conclude on March 1st. Canvassers will be calling at each house and business place.

In addition, anyone wishing to make a donation to the fund raising campaign, may leave their contribution at the Village office, or at the Royal Bank. A "thermometer" located in the window of the village office, will rise as the contributions come in.

At the present time, the Society's finances consist of the Provincial grant of $50,000 and proceeds from the Carnival which were approximately $1,500, a donation from the Chamber of Commerce of $1,000 and several smaller donations and membership fees totaling $400.

It is the hope of the Agricultural Society that, by raising a minimum of $40,000 from local donations, the indication will be that the people of the community are behind this project, and will enable the Society to obtain a loan and further grants.

The Board of Directors have made a decision on a building and, a contract will be signed by the time this canvass takes place. The building will be situated on the site of the present skating rink, and construction should begin in early spring. Plans of the Complex may be viewed at the village office and at the Royal Bank. A display model of the building will be made available by the contractor at a later date, and will also be displayed.

The Recreation Complex will consist of an arena and curling rink as well as a large lobby area and kitchen. Plans for the mezzinine floor have not yet been completed but, will likely be used as meeting rooms.

The building is intended to be used for agricultural functions, 4-H shows, hobby fairs, bingos, etc., as well as skating, hockey and curling. Plans are being formulated to provide a meeting room for senior citizens.

Holden plans canvass for recreation complex

The Holden and District Agricultural Society is going to conduct a canvass of the village and surrounding area, in an attempt to raise a minimum of $40,000. The purpose of the canvass is to raise a portion of the required $180,000.

The campaign will start on February 8th, and will conclude on March 1st. Canvassers will be calling at each house and business place

In addition, anyone wishing to make a donation to the fund raising campaign, may leave their contribution at the Village office, or at the Royal Bank. A "thermometer" located in the window of the village office, will rise as the contributions come in.

At the present time, the Society's finances consist of the Provincial grant of $50,000 and proceeds from the Carnival which were approximately $1,500, a donation from the Chamber of Commerce of $1,000 and several smaller donations and membership fees totaling $400

It is the hope of the Agricultural Society that, by raising a minimum of $40,000 from local donations, the indication will be that the people of the community are behind this project, and will enable the Society to obtain a loan and further grants.

The Board of Directors have made a decision on a building and, a contract will be signed by the time this canvass takes place. The building will be situated on the site of the present skating rink, and construction should begin in early spring. Plans of the Complex may be viewed at the village office and at the Royal Bank. A display model of the building will be made available by the contractor at a later date, and will also be displayed.

The Recreation Complex will consist of an arena and curling rink as well as a large lobby area and kitchen. Plans for the mezzanine floor have not yet been completed but, will likely be used as meeting rooms.

The building is intended to be used for agricultural functions, 4-H shows, hobby fairs, bingos, etc., as well as skating, hockey and curling. Plans are being formulated to provide a meeting room for senior citizens

Beaver ATA holds annual curling 'spiel

by Mrs G H Taylor

In the recently held County of Beaver Alberta Teachers Association annual bonspiel held in Viking, 16 rinks competed in a three-game point system series of curling matches.

Out of a total possible 30 points, the Allan rink of Tofield accumulated 24½ points. On the team, Vivian Carlson, daughter of Mr and Mrs Melvin Carlson was a player

Tofield's Bill Taylor rink and Holden's Francis Blue rink each earned 21 points. Skips rocks were thrown to determine second and third place, with Bill Taylor's rock nearest to the button, breaking the tie giving his rink second place and Holden rink taking third place.

Viking's Terry Petrie rink captured honors for most points in a game with 11 and highest end with 6. Allan Zwiertschke from Ryley played hard-fought games but only managed to make 7½ points

There were also games played by Bruce teachers and rinks representing the County of Beaver School Committee and Central office. The day concluded with a "pot-luck" supper and presentations of general merchandise prizes

Oldtimers host Wetaskiwin

An exceptionally large crowd of hockey fans turned out for last Friday's double-header at the Tofield Arena

In the first game, the Tofield and New Sarepta Mighty Mites battled to a 1-1 tie and won the approval of the impartial crowd, who cheered both sides equally

A 5-5 tie was the final score between the Oldtimers and Sam's Midnight Raiders. Again an impartial crowd applauded any outstanding play by either team

This Friday, the Oldtimers will host the Wetaskiwin Oldtimers, with game time set for 9.00 p.m.

Young Voyageur program renewed

High school students in the County of Beaver will be involved in the Young Voyageur Program 1974 during July or August 1974.

Twenty students age 15 to 17 years will travel to and stay for seven days in another Canadian province or territory. In return the County of Beaver will host twenty students for seven days.

This will be the third time that the County of Beaver has been involved in this particular student exchange program. In 1967 students from here went to Sault Ste. Marie and hosted a group from Iles de la Madeleine, Quebec. In 1970 the group from here went to Montreal and hosted a group from Halifax

It is expected that the County of Beaver will be advised in March of the destination for County of Beaver students

Common language

After years of struggling with some of the differences between the British and American systems of measurement we were developing a longing for the introduction of the metric system, with is worldwide application of equivalents. For instance, anyone who has tried to work with the Imperial gallon as compared with the United States gallon knows there's a lot of difference between gallons. And of course, even the British recognized the problems of the old pounds, shillings, pence coinage, and moved into the decimal system a few years ago.

But we floundered a few days ago on reading that gross wages in the United States last year passed the trillion dollar mark for the first time. Now, there's a figure for you! Almost incomprehensible is the trillion.

Of course, little boys can still top that, with their quintillion, or even the zillion, which sounds as though it must be the largest of all.

But going back to the record wage level again. What kind of billion was it, we wondered. An American billion or a British billion. And the difference is a great deal more here than between gallons.

In the United States, a thousand thousand is called a million, a thousand million is called a billion, and a thousand billion becomes a trillion. All easy enough and straightforward, isn't it.

Well, over in dear ol' England, a thousand thousand is called a million, same as in the U.S. But watch the next one: it takes a million million to make a British billion. (A little rapid calculating makes the British billion the equivalent of the American trillion.) And then the British go on to require a billion billion to equal a trillion. And boy, that's some number. (We ran out of fingers before we were able to count the zillions.)

The disappointing part of it is, nothing in the metric system is going to straighten it out

"Imagine yourself poor"

The Canadian Save the Children Fund is asking Canadians to 'Imagine Yourself Poor'. Quoting from Robert Heilbroner's "The Great Ascent", CANSAVE lists the following steps which would have to be taken to reduce the relatively affluent Canadian standard of living to that endured by millions of people living in underdeveloped countries.

1 Give away all your furniture except a table, a chair, and a few old blankets

2. Take away all except the oldest suit of clothes for each person. The head of the family keeps the only shoes

3 Move into a tool shed in a shanty town having no public services

4 Empty pantry and refrigerator of all food except a little flour, salt, and sugar, a few mouldy potatoes, some onions and dried beans.

5 Remove all electric wiring and plumbing. Carry your water from a village shed

6 Give up all appliances, tools and pets as we know them.

7 Cancel all subscriptions, the family is illiterate

8 Listen to the one radio in town, and probably the one station

9 Find that the nearest medicine is ten miles away, with a midwife in charge of the clinic

10. Dispose of all insurance, pensions, bank accounts, and savings, leaving only a cash hoard of $5 for the family

11 Of the $100 to $300 cash income scratched from your three tenant acres, give one third to the landlord and one tenth to the money lender

12 Plan that your life will be shortened by 25 to 30 years.

Although poverty of a degree is certainly known in Canada, absolute poverty is non-existent and inconceivable. Kenric R Marshall, CANSAVE National Director points out, "A nation that can afford to spend over $2 billion on alcoholic beverages $150 million on soft drinks, $1.5 billion on tobacco products, and $140 million through the pari mutuel machines can well afford to meet the targets of their charity drives"

CANSAVE hopes to reach its campaign goal of $2,000,000 by confronting the public with the shocking facts of life in developing countries, facts graphically detailed by Mr Marshall:

"While we have one doctor for every 825 of us, they average only one per 25,000 people. While there is one teacher for every 85 children in Canada, in Africa there is one for every 800 students. While we can expect to live to 70, they are fortunate to reach 40."

According to Mr. Marshall, "In Canada we voluntarily raise over $800 million a year for various causes within our own country. We raise approximately $50 million, or only 6 percent as much, for all the rest of the world. Charity not only has begun at home, it has largely remained here."

For over 50 years The Canadian Save the Children Fund has been raising money in Canada to support social development programs in more than 30 countries around the world. Programs include day care health, and nutrition centres family planning counsel; vocational and agricultural training; village self-help programs school garden and feeding projects and many other development programs.

More shortages

So far recently all the talk and emphasis has been on the problem in securing sufficient supplies of energy, basically in the form of oil

But looming on the horizon, and possibly far more serious to the national economy, may be a shortage of steel. Not to say other common metals. For months there has been a serious shortage of copper, the remarkable increase in the use of photographic materials, for microfilming, offset printing, and many other uses, has put severe pressure on silver for a number of months and signs of pressure on other metals have also been shaping up

If the shortage of petroleum products curtails the available supplies of plastics, which might be used to supplant metals in some instances and if common metals become more and more scarce, thus higher and higher priced, we shall see changes in our economy undreamed of even in the most sober consideration of the oil shortages.

Incidentally, when a number of Canadian provinces pressed Ottawa and the confederation this week for policies aimed at developing national control of certain natural resources they seem either to have played to the gallery, of consumers, back home, to have forgotten long range implications for the [illegible] advantages of the moment, or else completely to have overlooked the significance of what they were asking

In this instance the resources, gas and oil, happen to be in Alberta. And most of the other provinces are short. But what happens when the pressure comes on [illegible] silver or iron ore? What happens when it's uranium, or nickel, or asbestos, or coal or wood pulp?

Once this principle becomes established [illegible] Alberta [illegible] little matter to [illegible] into products vital to other provinces

Dear Sir

The full effects of the drought [in] the East African nation of Ethiopia are still not known. Agricultural production has been [illegible] in the stricken areas. Live stock losses are massive. Two million farmers and herdsmen and their families are directly affected. The United Nations now estimates that 150,000 have perished of starvation and disease. The next harvest is not due until December 1974.

[illegible]

[illegible] of famine victims [illegible] OXFAM [illegible] team is able to reach some of these people by landrover. Ethiopia, with a population of 24 million has only 60 Ethiopian medical doctors. Food, made available by the Canadian and other governments through UNICEF and the Ethiopian Nutrition Institute must be transported by truck as far as possible into the interior. Then teams of Ethiopian students must trek it by mule to the many remote villages. Evidently this operation is just getting underway.

OXFAM is striving to play an [illegible] dynamic role in effective relief distribution. However, although OXFAM financial assistance has now passed (Canadian $50,000) this does not provide sufficient leverage to [illegible] combined relief and long term development operations by the Ethiopian government.

Western Canadians who have not yet been able to respond to OXFAM's urgent appeal for funds are urged to do so now. Cheques and money-orders [should] be made out to OXFAM CANADA Ethiopia and mailed to OXFAM Box 12,000 in Vancouver, Victoria, Calgary, Edmonton, Regina or Winnipeg, whichever is nearest. Official receipts will be provided by OXFAM representatives in each of these centres.

Sincerely

Grant Rowan Western Region Director for the OXFAM CANADA Western Region Board

I am a Canadian . . .

By Clint Buehler

I am a Canadian.

My skin is black and brown and red and white and yellow and a rainbow of those in combination.

My God has many names, for my religion is Catholic and Protestant and Jewish and Islamic and Buddhist and many more - even agnostic and atheist

My ancestors come from many lands, some only recently, and some long centuries ago.

My language is as many tongues as there are countries in this world, and more

My philosophy and politics range across the whole spectrum of man's belief and understanding and experience

These things make me what I am as an individual, make me unique. They determine my part in the mosaic of this nation when I proudly say:

I am a Canadian

My Canada is a totem pole beside a Pacific inlet, a train winding through the mountains, the lonely sentinel of a prairie elevator, a barren stretch of tundra, the irregular graph of city skyscrapers against a sunset, a church spire thrusting from a blaze of trees in autumn dress, fishing boats pulling into shore at dusk

My Canada is lovers walking hand in hand by the sea, two old men soaking up the sun on a park bench, children racing across a school yard, secretaries rushing from a noon shopping trip to the office, two young men at a bus stop watching the girls go by, a middle-aged couple sharing a special secret

My Canada is the stillness of night broken by the lonely cry of a loon across a remote and still lake, the crispness of mountain air at dawn, the crackle of stubble underfoot during harvest the freshness of new-fallen snow turned to blue by a pale moon shining, the blaze of fireweed among outcroppings of rock

My Canada is a cowboy rounding up cattle in the shadow of the Rockies, new automobiles coming off an assembly line, a dog team racing across frozen wastes, a tractor leaving a trail of freshly-turned soil, the steady motion of a giant pump pulling crude oil from the depths, tobacco drying in the sheds, a loading freighter pushing up the St Lawrence, a beam of reassurance wheeling from a lighthouse on a lonely [illegible]

I am a Canadian

Being a Canadian means that I am not an island, but aware of the needs and problems and dreams of those with whom I share this land.

Being a Canadian means that I recognize and accept my responsibility as a citizen - to be a giver, not a taker, a support, not a burden; a thinking follower if not an inspired leader

Being a Canadian means preserving the law by obeying it; changing those things that careful thought says need change by orderly means; preserving unity by turning a deaf ear to the siren call of divisiveness

Being a Canadian means being politically aware and active by doing my share to ensure that the best people possible run for public office; that as large a portion of the voters as possible go to the polls with sufficient knowledge to make a wise choice, that those who are elected are given the support and encouragement to govern wisely and well.

Being a Canadian means that I must do my share to ensure the preservation of my country against the threat of those things which endanger it against pollution of the mind as well as our natural resources; against apathy and ignorance and prejudice against greed and avarice and jealousy; against selfishness and short sightedness and exploitation.

Being a Canadian means standing proudly and fearlessly to proclaim:

I am a Canadian.

Farmers get record refund on hail insurance premiums

Farmers who had their grain crops insured under the Alberta Hail and Crop Insurance Corporation's hail program last year will receive a record premium refund this year, due to relatively light hail damage during the year.

The refund amounts to 35 percent of the total premiums paid by those who did not file claims and 15 percent of premiums paid by those who had claims. It does not apply to farmers who had "spot-loss" hail coverage on their crops under the All - Risk Crop Insurance Program.

Although hail was recorded for more than the normal number of days last summer and fall, the storms were not as large or destructive as in most years.

Claims paid by the corporation for hail losses in 1973 totalled $1,317,000 compared with premiums of $3,000,000 for a loss-to-premium ratio of 43.6 percent. In 1972 this ratio was 68 percent and in 1971 it was 100.6 percent.

Ever had the problem of trying to fill a plastic garbage bag which simply refuses to stay open? The portable bag holder recently developed by John E. Anderson of Toronto may provide a solution. Holden district news

(Mrs. G. H. Taylor)

Mrs. Edith Carlson and Mrs. Komarnisky of Poe were visiting Saturday afternoon with Chris Christensen in Tofield hospital.

Art Siegal a former long-time Holden district farmer now of Edmonton, is at present a patient in the intensive care ward in the Misericordia hospital in Edmonton after suffering a severe heart attack, and may possibly have to have heart surgery. Art and his sister, Mrs. Martha Hurm have resided in Edmonton since he retired from farming several years ago.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Ogonoski were visitors in Edmonton over the week-end, taking home their grand-daughters, twin daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Dennis Ogonoski, who had been staying with them for the past three weeks. Jack and Emily brought home with them their young grandson, Monty, son of Donna and George Chappelle who will be staying with them for a while.

Mr. and Mrs. George Chappelle of Edmonton were receiving congratulations on the birth of their daughter, January 29th in the General Hospital, a sister for their young son, Monty and a grand-daughter for Mr. and Mrs. Jack Ogonoski.

Bert Appleby, who was a patient for a few days in Viking hospital having a check-up, returned home on Wednesday evening.

Mrs. Margaret Zwierschke is a patient in Tofield hospital with pneumonia, Ross Zwierschke, who was a hospital patient with the 'flu, is now back home. Mrs. Edith Carlson called on Mrs. Zwierschke when in the hospital last Saturday when visiting with Mr. Christensen.

CARE OF LEATHER GLOVES

Leather gloves can be an attractive accessory to your winter wardrobe. Learn how to give them proper care. Look inside for a label saying "washable". If in doubt because of no label, dry clean. All washable gloves can be washed if they've never been dry cleaned. Dry cleaning removes leather's natural oils and destroys its washability.

Gloves with wool linings can be washed. Those with fur cannot.

Wash all leather gloves on the hand. Make a cool suds of a very mild soap solution: avoid using detergent, as this will remove natural oils. Wash gloves as though washing your hands. Rub stubborn soil with a soft brush. When gloves are clean, gently roll them down from the wrists. Rinse thoroughly in cool water and mild soap solution. Pat gloves in a towel; reshape by gentle stretching and by blowing into fingers. Dry away from heat on a towel or glove stretcher. Before gloves are completely dry, finger press then gently stretching, starting at top and working around and down toward fingers.

I'd like to pass along a worthwhile comment printed in the Co-op Consumer Tooles: "In the excitement of putting a new garment or article to use, information carefully prepared and thoughtfully supplied by the manufacturer to help you get maximum service is often unheeded or lost." PLEASE — read all instruction tags, labels and guarantee forms which accompany purchases you make. Retain this information for future reference. To fulfill terms or a guarantee, fill in forms and either mail to manufacturer or give them to the local retailer of that product.

CARE OF YOUR SYNTHETIC FUR

Synthetic furs are a common sight in the realm of fashion today. Special care should be given your coat or jacket to retain its attractive appearance.

Whether your fur-like pile fabric is composed of pure dynel, orlon, darlon or a blend of these synthetics and backed with cotton, the manufacturers recommend they be cleaned by the furrier method. The moderate additional cleaning cost will be justified in the added attractiveness of your garment.

Home care of synthetic furs is easy. If you're caught in the snow or rain, just give your coat a vigorous shake and hang it up to dry. When dry, a brisk, gentle combing will help restore any matted areas. Never comb or brush a pile fabric when wet. Safeguard your garment deep pile by hanging it away from other coats in your closet and keep it away from direct heat as you would a fine fur. The problem of moths does not exist with synthetic furs. Because the fabric is free of animal hair, your garment is usually non-allergic.

Oil spills near Strome

Clean-up crews are working hard to clear up nearly 90,000 gallons of oil which remains on the ground after a pipe break near Strome late Monday night.

In all, nearly 180,000 gallons of oil came through the break in the pipeline, and as of this morning (Wednesday) about one-half of this amount had already been cleaned up.

Officials of Interprovincial Pipe, owners of the busted line, expected to have the remainder of the oil cleaned up by the end of this week, if weather conditions permitted.

Reason for the break in the pipeline was not immediately known.

I have one line I sell for $11.95 a yd. INSTALLED.
If I want to advertise and say I was having a sale, I could advertise only two ways:
(1) I can advertise for a low price of $10.45. But when it comes time to buy, you find out that it does not include labor charges of $1.50 a yd.
(2) I could also advertise for a lower price of $8.95 a yd., but that also does not include labor or cushion. The extra charge would be $3.00 a yd. — total price $11.95 a yd.

Tourist Association to list major events

Advice was received at the meeting of the board of Battle River Tourist Association to the effect that, again this year, Travel Alberta would be providing publicity for sporting events and celebrations taking part in the various communities in Alberta.

Mrs. Sylvia Clemens, secretary-treasurer of the BRTA suggested that all member communities list their major events with her at the Association office, 6213-48 Ave., Camrose, so that these can be forwarded to Travel Alberta. This also applies to events at other times of year, or which notice should be sent when dates are available.

Mrs. Edna Palmer, membership committee chairman, reported that memberships were coming in nicely, and after some discussion, it was strongly urged that each community institute a drive for individual memberships, as these provided worthwhile support for the BRTA in its efforts to encourage and facilitate tourism in the zone

L. D'Albertanson, publicity chairman, asked the meeting whether they would think over the publicity program, and try to come up with some sort of assessment of its effectiveness.

It was reported by Past President Bill Fowler, that the post cards had been received and that some sales had been made. He urged board members to contact local outlets and take orders for the cards.

Five resolutions, which had been initially submitted to the board at the December meeting were again brought forward to be discussed. They were accepted with certain revisions. The resolutions are for submission to the annual meeting of the Travel Industry Assn. of Alberta. They dealt with the following topics:

1. The placing of signs which would indicate to tourists when they left one zone and entered another.

2. The provision of signs on rural roads where they entered grid roads and highways. It was felt that as many tourists were now being accomodated on farms, through the efforts of the Alberta Great West County Assn such signs could be of real value However it was also realized that such a program might take some time to complete

3. A request that the program of providing campsites along Alberta Highways be continued.

4. Pressure for continued expansion of tourists facilities to meet the growing demand, and a suggestion that this program also include the setting aside of further areas for tourist purposes, and for wilderness areas

5. A request that a more effective program of signing be instituted in connection with Alberta's forestry roads, including "dead end" signs on roads requiring them.

Re "MINOR HOCKEY"

Dear Sir:

I recently attended a minor hockey game between two of the younger Tofield teams, I found the behavior of some of the parents appalling. Rivalry was at a peak, but, I'm sure the outcome of the game was far more important to these parents than to the boys.

There was a tremendous amount of cheering and yelling - mostly negative.

These boys are just learning how to play hockey and are bound to make mistakes. Correction, should be done by the coach at practise or the boys "OWN" parents at home, not at full volume by the mothers in the stands during the game.

"Cheering" of this type would be more inclined to make the losing team more despondant, rather than spurring them on.

Some of the players were accused of being poor sports, but, the sportsmanship of the boys on the ice was far superior to that of the parents in the stands. THINK PARENTS!

By all means, come to the games and cheer your team on, but, cheer the good plays loudly and groan inwardly at the bad ones. I'm sure this type of cheering will bring much better results and be appreciated by players, coaches and other fans.

Valentine Tea is set in the Tofield School

By Grace Phillips

All friends of the students and staff of the Tofield School are cordially invited to attend the annual Valentine Tea to be held on Thursday, February 14 in the school gym

The Valentine Queen will be crowned at 3:15 by Linda Rose, last year's Valentine Queen.

Candidates this year are Melody Henriksen, Colleen Telford, Heather Allan, Lynn Warner, Marilyn Mackie, Sandra Pike.

Barry Jones, president of the Big 3 of the Tofield Junior High is assisted by social conveners Janet Schacher and Joanne Warkentin in making arrangements. Karen Jacobsen is in charge of decorations.

Tofield students plan to publish a yearbook

The Tofield High School Student's Union are planning to publish a 1973-74 school yearbook. We plan to include pictures of all students in elementary, junior high and senior high classes, staff members, student organizations sports groups as well as a picture of the 1973 graduating class. As advertising, we are planning to have a pictorial section of the town and surrounding area's, places of business and their owners or managements. It will be a hardcover yearbook

As a school yearbook has not been published since 1967, we felt that another yearbook would be of considerable value in future years as a souvenir and reminder of school and community life in 1974.

At the present time, the cost of the book is $4.00 per copy but if the response is great enough and we discover that we can lower our price, we will do so. This yearbook is a non profit project

To aid us in our planning, order forms have been sent home with the oldest member of families with children attending school. Anyone wishing to place an order for a yearbook who did not receive an order form or who have no children attending school should contact Heather Appleby at 662-2492 or call the school at 662-3133. Please do so promptly as we must forward all orders to the yearbook plant next Monday, February 11th

Standings are static in Beaverhill hockey

Positions of teams in the Beaverhill Hockey League did not change in the past week.

Last Thursday night in Tofield the Lamont Nuggets out scored Grand Forks Gulls 11-3. In Andrew the home town Aces strengthened their hold on the final playoff position with a 11-2 win over Smoky Lake.

On Saturday in Tofield, the Satellites regained second place with a 5-3 win over Lamont

Meanwhile in Smoky Lake, it was Ryley over Smoky Lake 9-4. The game in Smoky Lake was a very close contest until the third period when Ryley scored five unanswered goals. The Shantz, Boettger, Lehman line accounted for seven of the nine Ryley goals. Don Shantz picked up a hat trick for the winners while Ken Boettger and Lorne Lehman each added a pair V. Bahan scored all of the Smoky Lake goals.

On Tuesday night in Tofield the Andrew Aces squeezed by the Grand Forks Gulls 5-4. Bob Lehman scored three goals for the losers. Gull goaltender Don Ozubko played another one of his brilliant games as he blocked 40 shots. Marv Swanson and Brian Harberg were added to the Grand Forks roster and both played impressive games

Communication

A third topic seems to have been added to the list of things we can't escape, such as Death and Taxes, the new one being criticism of the Unemployment Insurance Commission.

No matter which side you're on, it comes in for criticism. If you're an employer paying into it, the Commission is too free with your money. If you're an employee with what amounts to practically a guaranteed job, paying into it, the criticism is much the same.

And if you're a worker who has occasion to make a claim against it, all too often the complaint is that the commission is too hard to work with, and doesn't pay enough in benefits when it does approve a claim.

One thing that might help in the latter case, if help is really needed, would be more concerted efforts to get the freeloaders off, so that available funds would go further where they're most needed.

And one thing that might help to eliminate some of the abuses would be more communication between the UIC and the government's other arm, Manpower.

All too often, it seems, workers turn down prospective jobs rather than take a chance of missing out on benefits, or aren't prepared to put out the effort needed to draw down a third more pay than their benefits. If the Manpower Commission required on all job applications, and made the reports available to the UIC, it's just possible that some, maybe a lot of the freeloading and abuse could be eliminated.

Sharing the wealth sounds like a great idea if everyone shares and shares alike. But it tends to lose its lustre a bit when you discover that some are doing all the producing while others are doing all the sharing.

Leading the world

A recent statement by the Hon. Jean Pierre Goyer, Canadian Minister of Supply and Services, is interesting because it reveals the fact that policies of the Canadian Government, in effect since 1911, with regard to bidding on supplies for the government, are in the forefront by comparison internationally.

The statement was made at a time when Mr. Goyer was announcing still further changes in an effort to balance efficiency with fairness, and protection of the public with scrupulous honesty.

It has always been recognized, of course, that there are ways of government patronage being introduced into the procuring of government materials, or the letting of government tenders. The aim is to reduce this as much as possible, insofar as the solicitation of bids, receipt of tenders, handling and opening them.

The problem can perhaps be understood a little more clearly when it is revealed that upwards of 275,000 purchase orders are completed each year, for more than a billion dollars. An estimated sixty thousand firms, covering thousands of different types of commodities and services, participate.

With certain exceptions, all written tenders expected to result in tenders of more than $10,000 will now be opened in public. Firstly, of course, this is to ensure that all know the prices tendered are the ones used in assessing tenders. But there are other factors, too, such as delivery time, availability of spare parts, the financial, technical and managerial competence of the companies involved, and the degree to which they meet all the other conditions of the tender. Price is obviously important, but it's not always the most important, and it's at times like these that the public opening of tenders proves most protective of the public's interest.

Even when bids are not opened publicly, the information is supposed to be always available, and if the other bidders, and Opposition members of the Commons are on their job, there should be pretty careful scrutiny in most instances.

MacDuff Ottawa Report

Wintering in dreamland

Ottawa (CEF)

Every winter at about this time, when you think that the snow will be here forever, a few lucky colleagues take off for the sunny south and return resplendent in their brown skins to gloat over those who stayed at home to shovel.

The Ward family has never taken the winter escape route although the journalistic breadwinner in the family has, on some occasions, come in for critical fire because his onerous calling has required winter travel.

Quite often in years past a trip to the Middle East has been necessary; twice it has been the Far East; and twice the Caribbean. Now I confess, not all these jaunts have been uncontrived, but I remember one which was nothing less than a beautiful surprise thunder bolt.

It was in mid March. I drove to work through half sleet, half snow, dreading the inevitable assignment to go out and take weather pictures. At 7 a.m. the city desk sent me to Toronto International airport to photograph a couple departing on honeymoon for Nassau.

The couple in question was Mr. and Mrs. Harry Oakes, Jr., and they were leaving for the Oakes family home after a quicky Toronto wedding. Harry's late father, you might remember was the Canadian mining millionaire who was murdered in Nassau under sensational circumstances.

On that particular March morning, a Nassau honeymoon could not have been more appealing, even if one had to go without a wife. Well, my city desk rushed money out to me via cab and ordered me to go along as third person on the Oakes honeymoon. I knew Harry slightly, but he was still unimpressed at the thought of play-by-play coverage of his honeymoon.

We had a brief conversation on the plane and came to the agreement that I would stay out of the way, and in return, Harry would pose for me with his bride on the white beaches of New Providence Island, and provide information for all the journalistic color any reader could possibly desire. Not only that, but he would refuse dealings with any other journalists.

He was as good as his word. I spent several glorious days with Harry and his bride, swimming, fishing and photographing with the Caribbean splashing in the background. Of course I had to buy a new set of clothing in Nassau on the expense account, because the proper costume for Toronto in mid-March simply doesn't fit in the Bahamas.

That, without question, was the nicest surprise assignment journalism has thrown my way in 24 years. The guy who sits behind me in the Press Gallery has just returned from the south with his tan, and there's no way this year that a southern assignment can be dreamed up for me.

That's why this week the report from Ottawa has absolutely nothing to do with politics, parliament, snow, or ice. It's merely the product of day-dreaming at the typewriter.

FAKE FABRICS

The difference between a genuine velvet or suede and a flocked fabric can easily be determined by checking the backing which is usually a knitted cotton fabric, advises Consumers' Association of Canada. Before buying, shoppers should make sure that such garments are guaranteed dry-cleanable without any loss of adhesive or surface finish.

Now they have to figure it out at home

It's entirely possible the oil industry majors put pressure on the government to bring other companies into line," says Roy Lindseth, a Calgary petroleum consultant and chairman of the Canadian Geo-science Council. The petroleum industry is the major user of geophysical computation, to interpret vast amounts of seismic data. A picture of underlying strata is provided by bouncing sound waves through the earth's crust and recording them at a number of points. "While seismic data processing isn't the largest segment of the country's EDP industry, the big benefit for strengthening this sector is that it helps provide a base for new technology," says an editorial in this month's issue of Canadian Data systems. Calgary is the major centre for seismic-data processing, and industry experts there estimate the new exploration ground rules will result in several millions more dollars' worth of computer processing and probably 100 new high-paid jobs developing there in the next year.

Reduction in snowmobile noise proposed by Transport Minister

An amendment to the Motor Vehicle Safety Regulations to reduce noise levels at the snowmobile operator's ear for the purpose of protecting him against impairment of health is proposed by Transport Minister Jean Marchand.

Mr Marchand proposed maximum noise levels for snowmobile of 77 decibels, "A" scale (dbA) to be effective February 1, 1975. This is the second phase of a continuing program to reduce the snowmobile noise level to 73dbA by 1980. These specified noise outputs are measured by a generally accepted standard procedure employing a person at 50 feet. The "A" scale has been established as a measurement of noise level to which the average human ear is responsive.

The reduction from the present regulation of 82dbA to 79dbA by February 1, 1975 can be accomplished without loss in vehicle performance at a cost to the consumer of under $80.00, representing less than a five per cent increase in the unit price of a snowmobile.

The reduction of 4db A is equivalent to a sound pressure reduction of approximately 35 per cent. In addition to providing substantially greater protection to operator's hearing, this proposal will greatly reduce the snowmobile noise to communities across Canada, Mr. Marchand said.

"The Great Canadian Beaver Chase"

—FROM INTERCOM

Do you remember, how, when you were little, you believed that if you dug down deep enough, you would eventually dig right through to China? Well not too long ago some members of this Department's Parks staff would probably have considered that route easier. It certainly would have been a more direct way to get four beavers to China

"It all began when David Lohnes of the Park's Policy Division walked into this office in September and innocently inquired if anyone here knew anything about beavers," explained Fred Cramp. "When that didn't get any response he asked if anyone was a biologist and, since I came the closest to that request, lo and behold, it was my baby."

Fred soon discovered that his "baby" involved arranging for two healthy beavers - one male, one female - to get to China as a gift from Canada and Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau, during his recent trip there. The Canadian Wildlife Service had been offered the job, but declined because of a shortage of available manpower Simple Task. Just sack 'em and ship 'em. Who would of could have foreseen that before that task was completed, there would be Beaver Liaison Officers strung from here to China?

The easiest way to obtain a beaver is to contact someone who already has them - game farms - but unfortunately they had no extra beavers in stock. The next inquiry went to the Ontario Ministry of Natural Resources who also had no beavers, but suggested that the normal practice was to issue a live trapping permit to a registered trapper. Mr. Trapper was duly notified to deliver one female, one male beaver.

"Then we called a beaver expert at the Canadian Wildlife Service to get information about shopping, feeding, care etc. and BANG- we hit our first snag. Did you know, the expert tells us, that beavers are extremely hard to sex!"

Only one beaver knows for sure - and he ain't talking

Here was a problem. These two beavers represented a bond of friendship between two countries The idea was that they should not only survive their trip and live in China, but, most of all, reproduce. What would happen if the two that landed in China were both males, or both females, or if one should die during or after the trip? Embarrassing to say the very least.

Aware that one of the panda bears sent by China to the United States died soon after its arrival, the people involved decided to play it safe. Four beavers. This would guarantee that at least one male and one female would live to represent Canada in China.

As a back-up supply, the Parks Prairie Regional office and Riding Mountain National Park were requested to get some beavers, have their sex established, get suitable cages, and be prepared to ship them East.

Meanwhile, in case you haven't noticed, the number of people involved in this beaver tale is increasing.

Next the Winnipeg Zoo supplied information about care and shipping and the National Herbarium came through with detailed information and maps about food availability and beaver environment in China. Canadian beavers would not only like Chinese food, but China could become a beaver's bliss. In the day-to-day progression of events, contacts with External Affairs, and ever-increasing complications, some light was beginning to shine through. In Peking, the Canadian Embassy appointed a Beaver Liaison Officer to handle arrangements there and calls came in for a quick course in the life and times of the Canadian beaver. Health and quarantine regulations were studied and obeyed.

Thoughts then turned to the air arrangements and the initial plan to have the beavers accompany the Trudeau party They could go the usual manner in the baggage compartment or they could go inside with the people. The latter was thought safer and it was agreed that three or four seats could be removed at the back of the craft to accommodate the beaver cages during the 45 hr. flight.

The next birth came when it was learned that the Trudeau plane was already overbooked and there was some concern over what could happen if the flight ran into strong winds. Beavers can weigh up to 65 pounds each and there was nearly one hundred pounds of food including pressed hay pellets from Ritchie's Feed and Seed and milk-bone dog biscuits.

The alternative plan took the beavers from Montreal to Paris, to Islamabad, to Peking. They would go by baggage, but in each place a Beaver Liaison officer would be appointed from the Canadian Embassy to go down to the airport, check food and water, and ensure their continued good health. More people would need to know about beavers, but not only would it work, and did, but the flight length would be shorter since the Trudeau craft was making a one-night stopover and this flight would'nt.

THE BATTLE OF THE SEXES

Meanwhile Manitoba staff had caught several beaver and, by means of xrays, had determined that they had the necessary two males. In Ontario, three beavers were caught and delivered to Ottawa. It turned out they were three females - but that's jumping ahead of the story.

The only sure way to determine the sex of a beaver is by x-ray, but how does one get the beaver to sit still? Tranquillization is one answer, but the dosage depends on many factors and one runs the risk of killing the animal. An alternative is to physically hold down the beaver, but he isn't going to be friendly, and a lot of manpower is needed. A third alternative and the one used - is to anaesthetize the beaver to the point of drowsiness and then feed him gas.

The appointment was set, four people gathered for the operation, and an otherwise naturalized mass of restless was thrown into one of the beaver cages. To avoid the numbing fumes those present rushed to the farthest corners of the room to wait the few minutes for the other to take effect.

A beaver, underwater animal that he is, can hold his breath for 20 minutes

"Everytime they went back to that cage and looked in, the beaver was sitting up smiling at them It took 20 minutes to pussyfy the one animal and they had to do three altogether All were females. And although the beavers recovered beautifully, the men kept falling asleep in their taxi hom-"

Two western males and two eastern females Would they get along? It didn't become a problem because beavers are monogamous only to the point of staying with one mate until he or she disappears or dies. Then they find another But because they are territorial animals and may fight to the death to maintain their area, it was necessary to cage them separately. Each cage was marked designating the sex of the beaver within and, in addition, each male had one rear web foot punched in case the cage markings were lost.

Beavers . . .

The problem of getting the proper cages was solved by Ottawa's Little Farm pet shop, the cages were wired shut, and each was covered with burlap to keep the animals calm. Inside was placed food, a chewing stick, and water. The water cans were corn niblets containers purchased by the Cramp family who, it is said, is still eating corn. The chewing stick- a shaft of poplar - was essential to the beavers' sunny disposition and tooth formation. At every stop en route the Beaver Liaison Officer had to ensure the stick was still in the cage, returning it if it had been thrown out by the animals

And then finally, working against the clock, rearranging schedules and procedures, co-ordinating - by this time - the host of people involved, the Parks and External Affairs people got their precious cargo off Canadian soil

Prior to their departure and en route a host of telegrams and communicatives noted the progress of "our furry friends" and "The Great Canadian Beaver Chase".

Needless to say the humor of the whole operation - important as it was - was not lost. The Canadian Embassy is Peking, very naturally, called for relevant literature such as "Teach Yourself Beavers" and "Everything you ever wanted to know about beavers but were afraid to ask." Ottawa was also advised to warn the beavers that the Peking flight was "often very late into Peking." It was.

At every stop en route telegrams confirmed the continued good condition of this special Canadian contingent until, finally from Peking, came the news that the "Beavers arrived 00 35 hours in excellent, almost insulting, condition." The embassy also noted that all the cages were still marked according to sex, therefore there was no need to examine rear feet, however in view of the practice "all male Embassy officers have had a hole punched in their shoes". The beavers now dwell in the Peking Zoo.

Like any fine stage presentation, the greatest fun lies behind the scenes, and so it was for the Parks personnel An unusual assignment brings unusual and unforeseen problems and circumstances that can be handled only as they occur, but can be remembered with glee.

Now, have you ever wondered, how they got that one beaver to pose for the Canadian nickel?

APRIL AID

The income tax help system and how to make it work for you.

As you know by now, we changed a lot of things last year We gave you a new return, a new Guide, several new deductions and a few new rules And quite honestly, we were more than a little concerned about your reaction to it all. (And very, very interested in your opinions)

Well, now that we've had time to really look back at it and assess it honestly, it appears that most taxpayers did not seem to find it too difficult The error rate did not accelerate greatly or change drastically from former years Generally, most taxpayers seemed to handle their new returns fairly well.

However, Income Tax will never be the easiest or most enjoyable thing in anyone's life. And it will always present problems in some areas, for some people That's expected and understandable.

So. What we want to do now is really work on those problem areas. And the best way to do that is to work with you, individually, on whatever part of Income Tax that causes you difficulty.

And that's what April Aid is all about It's a help system and its primary objective is to ensure that whenever or whatever you need help with, you can get it. And know how to get it.

And this is how it works:

First. Your Guide is always the best answer when you have a problem. Read it. Follow it. It not only gives explanations, but in many cases, examples of just how to figure something out.

Second. If you're still confused or something just doesn't seem to work, phone. The number of your own District Taxation Office is below and at the end of that number there are people whose only job is to help taxpayers with problems, by telephone And on Mondays and Tuesdays phone lines are open 'til 6 p.m. So don't hesitate.

If you live outside the office area, call the Operator and ask for Zenith 0-4000 She will automatically connect you to your own District Taxation Office. Remember, all calls are free, all questions are answered, and if you have queries, we want you to call.

Third. Some people prefer to talk things over in person. If you're one of them and have problems, drop by for free help. Anytime. The address of your District Taxation Office is below.

Fourth. Write. To the address below. Explain your problem as clearly as possible and include all information. (And your return address, please.) In return, we'll answer all letters as quickly and clearly as possible. Remember – if you need help, it's there. (And free). And all you have to do is ask.

April Aid.

Let's make it work for you.

Rat population has a decline for 1973

The number of established rat infestations in Alberta dropped to 36 in 1973 from 77 the previous year.

The head of the Alberta Department of Agriculture's Crop Protection and Pest Control Branch J. B. Gurba, attributes this significant drop to the greater emphasis that has been placed on preventative rat control measures in this province, and to the increased co-operation on the part of some Saskatchewan municipalities along the Alberta Saskatchewan border.

An estimated 25,000 rats were eliminated by the band of bait stations along the Alberta side of this 300-mile border which stretches from Montana in the south to Cold Lake in the north. Approximately 3,138 farms, grain elevators and other premises were checked by municipal and provincial officers. Even though the rat control experts had fewer infestations to contend with, they reported considerably more difficulty in destroying them this year. However, thanks to the cooperation of residents, pest control officers and other agencies, all had been removed by the end of the year.

Mr. Gurba reports that Warfarin bait continues to be the most effective method of controlling rats. About 7.5 tons of ready mixed poison bait and 2,783 packages of water bait were used to destroy the thousands of migrating rats before they had a chance to become established. According to Mr. Gurba some field research was also carried out on new baits and improved baiting techniques.

Mr. Gurba emphasizes again this year that most of the credit for Alberta's international fame as a 'Rat-Free Province' must go to Alberta residents themselves. He says: "The tremendous support and co-operation which we have received has once again proved that the world-wide [illegible] precedent just has to [illegible]. With this type of help we intend to maintain Alberta's enviable reputation."

"WHY ME?"

The question 'why has this happened to me' is one that is so often asked when trouble or disaster comes upon us. UPHOLSTRY FABRICS

In the last few years there has been a growing interest in re-upholstering. Before purchasing fabric one should be aware of the facts affecting durability or wear-life. A very important aspect to consider is fabric construction.

Generally, the closer the weave of the upholstery fabric, the better will be its overall performance. A good way to test this is to hold a sample up to the light and note how easily you can see through the fabric.

Feel the texture! The fabric should be comfortable - - not scratchy or harsh.

Yarns of medium or high twist tend to support wear well. Latex or acrylic backings are used to stabilize upholstery fabrics; however, be cautious of an overly thick coating which tends to be stiff and often camouflages an inferior fabric.

Two basic types of surface textures are available . . . flat surfaces and pile surfaces. Flat fabrics have a relatively smooth finish and include such fabrics as homespun, satin, denim, brocade, damask, matelasse, tapestry, shantung, tweed, boucle, and vinyl. With these fabrics you should note that long yarns floating on the surface and raised design patterns could contribute to snagging and areas of concentrated wear.

Pile fabrics have a three dimensional effect, a raised surface. Frieze, velvet, velour, and plush are examples. With this construction, note the type of fiber composing the pile, for it is this fiber that will receive the most abrasion. The denser the pile, the longer the wear-life of the upholstery fabric. The pile should not be easy to pull out.

Natural leather should be examined closely. The hides should be of uniform thickness and pliability throughout. Although the initial cost of this covering may be somewhat high the wear-life is long. Suede is popular with many contemporary designs, however, the maintenance problem is slightly increased. Dark colors tend to be more practical and show less soiling and staining. A suede sponge helps in daily cleaning while a "suede protector" should be applied to prevent deep penetration of stains.

Vinyls are found in expanded and non-expanded forms. Expanded vinyls which include a layer of foam on the underside of the fabric remain pliable for a longer length of time especially under the effects of perspiration oils. Non-expanded vinyls often are quite stiff, do not mold easily around corners, show sharp creases, and develop cracks more quickly. Knit backings are added to improve strength.

CASE opens new office in Edmonton

Counselling Assistance to Small Enterprises, referred to as CASE is now available to firms in Alberta. It is a program of the Department of Industry, Trade of Commerce.

An office was opened in Edmonton following the successful operation of two pilot projects, in Montreal and Winnipeg. Other offices were opened in Vancouver and Regina.

The CASE program provides management assistance to small enterprises which often, because of their normally rather basic management structure and lack of resources, are unable to engage specialist skills.

CASE counsellors are paid at the rate of $50 per day plus expenses. The Department of Industry, Trade and Commerce pays $10 per day of this amount, together with the expenses. The company seeking the assistance pays the other $30.

The pilot projects have been in operation for two years and have aided more than 333 small businesses.

Coordinator of CASE in Alberta is William Newbigging. He has already recruited and trained a team of 10 counsellors.

Ryley clinches 'first' in Beaverhills hockey

With the regular schedule rapidly drawing to a close, a battle for final placings is going on in the Beaverhills Hockey League.

Tofield leads Lamont by only two points while Andrew is seven points out of third place. Smoky Lake still has a mathematical chance of getting fourth place and a play off berth.

Following are the results of games played during the past week. Because of difficulty with telephone lines, only the scores are given, with details being omitted for this time only.

Mercury apologizes

The Mercury wishes to extend apologies to its customers and correspondents.

Normally, our salesman, Penny Thomson travels to Ryley, Holden and Tofield every Wednesday to sell advertising, visit our customers and pick up the news from the correspondents.

Road reports yesterday (Wednesday) morning from the County of Camrose councillor indicated that traffic was impossible on the Kingman Road.

Attempts were made to travel via the Round Hill Road, but after getting stuck twice, Mrs. Thomson returned to Camrose. It was then considered too late to go by way of Highway 21.

As a result, all business was conducted by telephone. However due to considerable trouble with the lines, some news couldn't be understood and had to be omitted rather than make mistakes.

The Mercury, will in the future, look at the road situation earlier so that better arrangements can be made to maintain contact with every one.

Mazankowski renews request for crop aid

Don Mazankowski, M.P. for Vegreville, called upon the Minister of Agriculture to stop procrastinating and come forth without further delay with a federal program to help alleviate the hardships of farmers who were unable to harvest their crops this fall because of adverse harvest conditions and an early snow fall.

The precedent for Federal Government assistance in these kinds of circumstances is clearly established. Only a year ago assistance was provided farmers in Ontario and Quebec because of abnormal rainfall and frost damage as were farmers in the Peace River area of Alberta and British Columbia because of early snow. Mr. Mazankowski, having just visited a large portion of the unharvested area said, "The problem in Northern Alberta is parallel to these disasters, and is very serious. The Minister himself acknowledged that fact when appearing before a Parliamentary Committee and expressed the opinion that this disaster would be considered in the same fashion."

Many farmers have carried out only a small portion of their harvest operation; feed grain supplies are diminishing and becoming very expensive, hay and straw supplies are critically short with prices for both escalating dramatically. Furthermore, it has been an abnormally long, cold, hard and snowy winter, with the prospect of plenty more of it in sight.

The conditions are such that Federal Government action is warranted and necessary without further delay. Although many farmers in Western Canada have benefitted from the upturn in the agricultural economy those whose crops are under the snow are really behind the eight ball with added production costs and feed supply costs. The Minister in November, said "The Government is prepared to do anything we can to aid farmers in some kind of catastrophe such as this."

Mr. Mazankowski called upon the Minister of Agriculture to honour that commitment now.

Figures don't lie

It's true that figures don't lie, according to the old saying, but it's also true that oftentimes they only tell half the story. Or possibly it could be said that only half the figures often don't tell the entire story, and put another way, it means that selected figures can be used to completely distort the picture.

We were reminded of this with a recent report from the director of the agricultural division of Statistics Canada, W. L. Porteous, who predicted two weeks ago that Canadian farmers are facing a happy prospect for income in 1974. Their income would soar to a record $4.6 billion, a figure more than twice the amount they received two years ago.

His forecast is backed up with several figures to substantiate his prediction, but only somewhat further down in his report does he suggest that while gross income levels will be at unprecedent high levels, the net figures will be trimmed by "skyrocketing farm expenses".

Most meaningful figure in the list of skyrocketing items, especially in this region, but really, for the Canadian housewife everywhere, was the price of feed grains, which last year increased, according to Mr. Porteous, by 58 percent. This tended to back up the report we heard only yesterday from a knowledgeable breeder in the district who declared that at today's costs of operating, beef has to be fifty cents a pound on the hoof simply for a feeder to break even. This doesn't include anything for his labor, and obviously, no profit to compensate for the gamble involved.

And anybody in the business knows that beef today is bringing in only forty-eight cents.

Of course, things are looking rather better for the straight grain farmer, where prices have soared to exceptional levels, without the same percentage increase in costs, but it was a long time in coming. And of course, the higher returns for the grain farmer are part of the problem facing the feeder, who must pay these higher prices to bring his animals to market.

Back to Mr. Porteous and his report . . . it really does look as though things should be good for the farmers for some time, overall, in spite of the exceptional cost problem, but it's going to take some re-arrangement of a number of priorities before returns and prices straighten themselves out, in some fashion, again.

And then there's sugar

Talking about price increases, one of the sorest points in the grocer's world these days has been the yo-yo type of pricing on sugar. Only with a yo-yo, things generally tend to go down more than they go up, whereas with sugar, the downs have been only brief, and much lighter than the ups.

Wholesalers almost hate to talk about it these days, what with the price having jumped a full hundred percent in the matter of only a relatively few weeks, but they admit that even such a volatile thing as the price of sugar can react to government pressure.

Some months ago, faced with amazingly rapid price shifts, both up and down, including an almost unbelievable three shifts in one day, wholesale merchants apparently voiced severe objections to the government. And whether or not it was a coincidence, or whether government threat of pressure and control was effective, the price stabilized suddenly and dramatically for some time.

Maybe it couldn't be expected to work every time, but maybe it's time to try it out again. If it works, the policy could even be extended to other aspects of the market, too.

Retribution

Violence breeds violence, we're told, but we also believe that the fear of violence often inhibits the committing of violence.

And we've come to believe that as a nation, [illegible] we seem to have become [illegible] too soft in inflicting violence as a means of prevention. This feeling [illegible] by the shocking murder in Edmonton during the past week, where one man was stabbed to death, and another was shot. The second affair at the moment seems particularly incredible, since there was utterly no motive, and seemingly not [illegible] reason.

It may be that one or both murders were done under the influence of drugs [illegible] even vaguely be predicted. It may be alcohol was involved. It may be that [illegible] cult of witchcraft or Satan [illegible] being followed, [illegible] be that [illegible] far too much violence portrayed on the television [illegible] for so many years that we're coming to accept it as a way of life.

One thing certain is that it still is shocking in this country to think of [illegible] being taken so callously, so needlessly, so pointlessly. And we think the public generally is becoming more [illegible] more upset over what seems to be more concern for the criminal than [illegible] of his crime. We think the public generally is outraged over the seeming incongruity among sentences for criminals convicted of robbing a [illegible] or a bank, as compared with [illegible] convicted of robbing a life.

Probably law enforcement today [illegible]

MacDuff Ottawa Report

New oil drives out old

OTTAWA (CEF)

Reports reaching Ottawa in January indicate there is a large-scale exodus of oil exploration equipment from the western provinces to the United States and that oil company exploration spending in Canada this year will be drastically down.

Some oilmen I have talked to explain the activity with a shrug of the shoulders and expressions of regret that Canada will not treat oil companies with more appreciation allowing them a large chunk of windfall profit on Canadian oil because of the increased international price.

But I fear the oilmen aren't telling the whole story. The exodus is the result of U.S. policies to expand production of crude oil at home, and the attractiveness of the deal Washington has placed before the oil companies would be impossible for Canada to match.

President Nixon froze the price of all U.S. oil being produced from existing oil fields at roughly $5.50 a barrel but told the oil industry that any new oil discovered would not be subject to the freeze. It could be priced at level competitive with world markets—now about $10.50 a barrel.

He also told the industry that for every barrel of new oil [illegible] a barrel for all new oil discovered . $6 from the actual discovery, because the higher $10.50 price can be charged, and $6 from the authorized increase in price of a barrel of "old" oil.

As if that weren't enough, in mid January President Nixon also announced that tax changes in the U.S. would disallow as expenses any oil company spending on exploration outside the U.S.

I recently faced senior political leaders with these circumstances and asked them how Canada could expect to compete with the U.S. for oil exploration in a situation like that.

"We can't," I was told. "But the current situation won't last forever."

The wording was different in some cases but the sense of what each source told me was this: Canada will have to be patient until after the [illegible] U.S. presidential election [illegible] oil company bonanza [illegible] when President Nixon [illegible] by a Democrat. [illegible]

So no matter what degree of [illegible] Canada can expect a [illegible] privately [illegible] exploration for oil until 1977. Some exploration, though, will continue because the price [illegible] Canada is on the verge of [illegible] the same [illegible] oil price [illegible] have just traveled.

Fortunately geologists have [illegible] in telling [illegible] the [illegible] sedimentary pockets [illegible] actually drill [illegible]

NO, IT'S NOT A [illegible] L'S ABODE or a gingerbread house. It's [illegible] a polyurethane foam house that builder [illegible] (above) hopes to market on a mass scale. Th[illegible] is about a third of what normal structures cost, and [illegible] believes that its curved surfaces will make [illegible] happier.

Modern etiquette

By Roberta Lee

Q. We shall soon be spending a few days with our daughter and her new husband who live in another city. Since they are on a strict budget, do you think it would be all right to offer to share the food expenses while we are there?

A. Rather than offering to do this, much better to take the young couple out for a meal while you are there.

Q. May a dinner guest in someone's home properly ask for a second helping of some particular dish?

A. Only when with relatives or very good friends. Otherwise, you should wait until asked.

Q. Would it be proper for me, a young bachelor, to invite two young unmarried women friends from out-of-town to make use of the spare bedroom in my apartment while they are in town?

A. The offer is fine, but for the sake of appearances and everyone's reputation, you move out while they are there.

Q. Just what is meant by "a la carte" on a restaurant menu?

A. It merely means that you select each dish that appeals to you and pay for each separate item - - whereas when ordering "table d'hote" you pay a set price for the entire meal.

Wild oats robbing farmers of "money"

Alberta farmers are unwittingly harboring a thief.

The robber is described as between two and four feet tall with broad, flat leaves and seeds with two flowering scales. The culprit goes by the name "wild oats" and is responsible for the theft of about $120,000,000 each year from western farmers.

Farmers, businessmen and governments are uniting to fight wild oats in an effort to defeat western Canada's most serious weed problem. About half of western Canada's cultivated acreage is infested with wild oats to varying degrees with more than 10 million acres in Alberta, including summerfallow, experiencing the problem last year.

Individual farmers can play a role in the battle by following recommended cultivation practices and using proper chemical controls and application procedures.

In areas of Alberta with sufficient moisture, soil may be tilled to expose and kill wild oat seedlings. Producers in these areas planting early maturing barley or rapeseed might consider following this type of control. Planting clean seed is another way Alberta farmers can reduce wild oats and put more money in their pockets.

Following proper chemical procedures also reduces wild oat populations and ensures higher return from a crop after harvest.

The farmer should choose a herbicide applicator designed for the job he has in mind. Nozzles should be checked constantly to ensure each nozzle is delivering an even spray because uneven spraying results in wasted chemical, inadequate weed control and decreased profits.

Spraying at the correct stage of weed and crop growth will also produce better results.

Wild oats have proven to be such a problem that a conference was held on the topic in Saskatoon last year. The conference brought together about 250 key farm, government and industry personnel who established an 18-man committee to study and make recommendations on wild oat control.

Committee chairman Harry Leggett, who also heads the department's Grains and Special Crops Division said the committee is looking into a large-scale information campaign on ways of controlling wild oats.

Other recommendations before the committee include examining changes in the grading system, providing stiffer penalties for farmers delivering dirty grain to the elevators and initiating new research projects to study wild oat control.

If wild oat infestation could have been cut by 50 per cent last year the prairie wheat crop would have been 725 million bushels instead of 625 million bushels.

They help you find names to call people

Ever noticed the names printed in black type at the top corner of each white page in your telephone directory? At AGT we call them "Telltales."

They may not be the names of the people you want to phone. But they sure tell you where to find the names – and telephone numbers of the people you do want to phone.

It's easy! All you do is turn to the Telltale that is closest to the name of the party you're calling.

Each Telltale contains two names – the first name on the page and the last name on the page. Somewhere in between is the name and phone number of the person you wish to dial. By using Telltales you can save a lot of time.

Please use the telephone book, including the Telltales. Make it your first source of information. Among other things, it's designed to help you avoid the time-waste and frustration of "wrong-number run-around".

Fight wild oats with barley or rapeseed

The Minister Responsible for the Canadian Wheat Board, Otto Lang has urged prairie grain producers to embark on a "vigourous campaign" to reduce the volume of wild oats entering the grain handling and transportation system.

The Minister pointed out that nearly 8 percent of grain deliveries to country elevators is dockage and more than 40 per cent of that dockage is wild oats.

He said, "The dockage is shipped with the grain to terminal elevators at a cost of about $2 million a year. It takes up 33 railway cars of space every day which could otherwise be used for moving clean grain."

Mr Lang referred producers to research work done at the C.D.A. Research Station at Lacombe, Alberta which indicated that barley and rapeseed can compete better than some other crops against wild oats.

"Where land is likely to be infested with wild oats, producers might consider seeding barley or rapeseed as a method of wild oat control, as well as a step to ensure adequate supplies of these two crops," Mr. Lang said.

Forestburg banker will retire at end of month

After 46 years of service in the banking business Allan W Roddick has decided to retire.

Mr Roddick will retire formally at the end of this month from his position as manager of the Bank of Montreal in Forestburg and will continue to make his home in that centre.

The citizens of Forestburg have planned a retirement party for Mr Roddick on Saturday March 2nd in the Forestburg High School Auditorium. It will get underway at 8:30 p.m.

A native of Viking, Mr Roddick joined the Bank of Montreal in Edmonton in 1928 moving to Camrose in 1935 for a one-year stay. He then moved to Grande Prairie, Raymond and Hughenden before coming to Daysland in 1948 for four years.

Four years in Wetaskiwin were followed by four more years in Hughenden before moving to Forestburg in 1960 where he has remained for the past 14 years.

During his stay in Forestburg Mr Roddick has been active in the Lions Club, Masonic Lodge, worked with Boy Scouts and the local band.

While his interests include golf and curling, one of his main ambitions after retirement is to catch a seven-pound trout.

Wage levels restrict agriculture expansion

Levels of wages currently being received by farm workers across the country may be placing significant restriction on expansion of Canada's agricultural industry.

In a recent survey conducted by the Canadian Federation of Agriculture the current wage level of farm workers was found to be the most critical factor in the current nation-wide farm labour shortage - a shortage considered by many to be the most operative restraint on national agricultural output.

For the past several months, the Federation has been interviewing farmers and farm workers, along with federal and provincial government officials, in an attempt to bring the national farm labour situation into focus. Results of the survey will be used as a basis of discussion at the National Farm Labour Seminar, to be held in Ottawa, February 11 and 12, 1974.

According to C. F. A. findings farm product prices have not been high enough in most cases to permit farm workers to be paid at levels commensurate with remuneration for similar skills and hours of work in other industries.

Survey results show that "in every province wages for farm workers were found to be significantly below wage levels available in other industries".

Other problems identified in the survey related to conditions of work and housing, personnel management, manpower recruitment procedures, underdeveloped agro-technological skills, and the public image of farm workers. Farm work is presently characterized by long hours, six or seven day work weeks, and infrequent two-day weekends off.

These problems and others will be given a thorough airing when some one hundred representatives of federal and provincial governments, universities and farm organization meet in Ottawa, February 11 and 12. The seminar was organized by the Canadian Federation of Agriculture in conjunction with Dairy Farmers of Canada.

Approximately HALF of the adults in Canada are overweight. Surprising? Maybe. That is one of the findings released from the Nutrition Canada National Survey. Repor...

The Nutrition Canada Survey was initiated by Health and Welfare Canada, in cooperation with the provincial governments to assess the nutritional status of Canadians. It is the most comprehensive nutrition study ever undertaken in Canada and was carried out over a period of two years.

During that time, special clinics were held in 400 rural, urban and metropolitan communities to examine some 19,000 Canadians. The survey sample consisted of equal numbers of men and women from various age and income groups. All of the provinces and territories were included in the survey.

The Nutrition Canada National Survey Report is the first of a series of reports to be published and it contains the basic findings while special reports will be released later, focusing on individual provinces and special subjects.

The basic findings are listed as follows:

Weight — approximately half of the adults in Canada are overweight. It would appear that our sedentary life style is probably the major factor.

Iron — large number of Canadians of all ages have an iron deficit.

Protein and or Calories — deficit among some pregnant women and a small proportion of children under five years of age.

Calcium and Vitamin D — shortage in many infants, children adolescents and pregnant women. Shortage of dietary vitamin D indicates a low consumption of fortified milk by many Canadians.

Vitamin C — there is some evidence of Vitamin C deficiency for the general population.

Thiamin — there is an indication of moderate deficiency in many adults particularly men in general.

The survey results revealed no consistent effect of sex, income or community type on the nutritional status of Canadians. Nutritional problems are essentially the same in summer as in winter, in urban and in rural areas, regardless of whether the community is above or below the poverty line. Copies of Nutrition Canada

New queen is crowned at Ministik ice carnival

by Mrs Jim Roddick

The Ministik Winter Carnival began with the crowning of the Carnival queen at a Valentine Dance at the hall on Saturday evening. Miss Debbie Grummett daughter of Mr and Mrs Lloyd Grummett won the title, being one of seven competitors.

Lorraine Davenport won the position of First Princess, and Tracey Schwark was Second Princess. Other contestants for the crown were Liana Heitman, Laura Kleinschroth, Michelle Erickson, and Carol Erickson. Judging was made on the basis of number of tickets sold by the girls.

With Glenn Ferguson as master of ceremonies, each girl was called to the stage. As each girl was eliminated, they were presented with a gift by J D Morrow, Councillor for this division of the County of Strathcona and a corsage was pinned on each. The Queen was crowned by Mr Morrow who called on Duane McPhail, Recreational Director of the county, to present Debbie with a travel case. Stephen Herricks then presented her with a spray of lovely carnations.

Before the presentations were made Brent Bowerman read a poem to the contestants that was composed by Mrs Sarah Kleinschroth. Following the crowning of the queen Myron Bowerman read a poem to her by the same author. The ceremonies were concluded with a promenade of the girls with their fathers: Lloyd Grummett and Debbie, Joe Davenport and Lorraine, Dennis Schwark and Tracey, John Heitman and Liana, Sven Erickson and Carol, Lee Johnson and Michelle Erickson and George Kleinschroth and Laura.

Crowfoot...

Born a Blood.
Became a Blackfoot.

Buried a Statesman.

Crowfoot, born a Blood Indian, became the acknowledged spokesman for the whole Blackfoot Nation. He was a man who held the future of Alberta in the palm of his hand, but he foresaw that the Indian Culture could not withstand the impact of the White Man. He knew that his way of life was over, yet he attempted to salvage what he could. Having satisfied himself that the arrival of the Mounties meant that his people would be protected from themselves and from others, he persuaded his fellow chiefs to sign Treaty Number Seven in 1877. Alberta was opened for peaceful settlement. The Indians settled onto their reserves and Crowfoot passed into history as The Peacemaker, the Father of his People.

From our proud past, the promise of our future.

FROM THE SCRAP BOOK

There are two days about which nobody should ever worry about, and these are yesterday and tomorrow. Yesterday is gone beyond recall and tomorrow never comes—J W H

POINSETTIA (Euphorbia pulcherrima) The newer varieties of this age old plant will last and last from Christmas through Mother's Day. A great deal has been done by plant hybridizers to make this a regular house plant rather than the "temperamental" type of the past. Many growers will confuse the leaf-like bracts with the flowers. Actually the flowers are inconspicuous and the colorful show is provided by the large scarlet, pink or cream bracts.

It is still the most popular Christmas plant for giving and receiving and does best in the home with good light exposure and a temperature of about 65 degrees.

Yellowing and dropping of lower foliage may be caused by temperatures below 60 degree F, drafts and drying out at the roots. Feeding with a completely soluble fertilizer every two weeks after the plants are well established is good house plant practice.

Help a broken world

Lent begins today.

And while for many of us it is only another of those "special" days on the calendar, without much meaning, for still many others of us it is the beginning of the most important season in the Christian calendar. And the beginning of a period of self sacrifice during which we try to bring to mind some of the underlying principles and truths of the Christian religion . . . on which Lent stands.

Within Camrose, as in many parts of Canada, several of the church denominations are joining together in a slightly different approach to the Lenten question, with the Committee for World Development. Combining their efforts in an attempt to provide support for world development projects in many countries, the local churches will join thousands of others to help provide emergency relief for any crisis area, but focussing especially on the underdeveloped nations in the world.

The 1974 theme is "Share . . . to Help a Broken World". A world broken by unshared bread. It is hard to be a Christian in a rich country when the rest of the world is hungry points out the committee developing plans. But they add, consider the fact that ten thousand children will die of malnutrition and starvation today.

The gift of money is only one way to help, says the committee but more important is the understanding of the problems of a broken world, and the need for doing more to help relieve their plight.

One of the means to be used here is to join forces in a starvation dinner, on March 17th. when soup, bread, tea, coffee and water will be served at Camrose Lutheran College. It is expected hundreds of members of the local United, Roman Catholic, Lutheran and Anglican churches will join in, offering their help in various ways to assist the World Development Committee.

With Lent as a backdrop, it should be most successful in helping to build an assistance, and support, and understanding, as well as finances. Never truer was the old, old saying "The gift without the giver is bare."

Meaningless figures

Personal income for all of Canada rose 11.5 percent in 1972, to more than eighty billion dollars, for an average of $3,750 per person, according to Statistics Canada figures a short time ago.

Alberta was third highest in the level of provincial average incomes, running well behind (nearly $900) Ontario and B.C.

Anyway, the table shows per person income in Alberta for 1972 (latest figures available) of $3,756

An I for the average [illegible] as 3.8 persons, that amounts to $14,280. Which is a tidy little figure.

[illegible] it really meant anything. But other than for comparative purposes, such is it's relatively meaningless figure, and one which could be better put to use. Recently, our statistics from the same government, showing the [illegible] in many brackets [illegible] Alberta $12,000 and [illegible] But you never know.

MacDuff Ottawa Report

A wet, heavy future

OTTAWA (CP) — News and government thinking. The Canadian - developed "CANDU" system, which uses water as proving extremely popular internationally and could become a major source of trade revenue for Canada.

The U.S reactor system - our major competitor - uses more expensive enriched uranium for fuel, and enriching uranium requires tremendously capital investment, as well as huge amounts of electric power. Many say it is not as safe a system as the CANDU reactor.

U.S. reactors, though, use ordinary water as the moderator, as opposed to heavy water in CANDU reactors. Heavy water is not exactly cheap - $30 a pound is the current price and even Canada, the world's largest producer at close to 90 tons annually, is having trouble producing sufficient quantities for her own needs

Canadian sales teams have recently been meeting all over the world with the pitch for CANDU reactors, and every time we sell one we sell it with the guarantee of a heavy water supply. That means that within the next few years, Canada's construction industry is going to see a bonanza in the specialized work of building heavy water plants.

It's one of those nice spin - offs from the world energy crisis, which will help Canada in the long run, provided sufficient government planning is done

ABI alumni in airplane downed by Cuba

Two alumni members of Alberta Bible Institute in Camrose were among 32 passengers and three crew members aboard a plane forced down by Cuban fighter planes as it flew over Cuba last Saturday on its way to the United States. Cousins, Dewey L. Johnson of Carstairs and Melvin Johnson of Churchbridge, Sask., are also both members of the ABI Board of Trustees. Mrs. Melvin Johnson was also in the group.

The aircraft involved is owned by Project Partners, an organization of the Church of God, based in Wichita, Kansas. The church project is directed by Rev. Charles Theisen.

The plane was forced down for allegedly flying too low, although it was understood that permission to fly over Cuba en route to the U.S. had been granted.

The entire group was detained in a hotel room, and said their lives were never threatened, but they were not released until the U.S. state department said it had a guarantee for payment of $6,800 to the Cubans. American officials understood the money was to cover maintenance of the plane, care of its passengers and crew and the cost of forcing it down.

Pilot of the plane, 23-year-old Donald Shaver of Florida reported the weekend incident "a good opportunity to test our faith." He did not comment on whether he thought he was flying too low.

MORE MILEAGE FOR FURS

Whether you get a new fur coat for Christmas, or bought one as an investment in personal comfort, you'll want it to look its best for as long as possible. Consumer Contact talked to furriers late last fall and came up with ten tips that may help you get the longest run for your money. Now that winter is here in dead earnest you might want to clip this out for reference

When a fur item gets wet in either rain or sleet never dry it near heat. Hang it on a strong wooden or plastic hanger in a cool area

When putting in and out of cars, make sure the hem of your coat does not drag through the salts slush

Never apply perfume directly to fur.

If liquor is accidently spilled on fur, remove it immediately with a water dampened cloth.

If a fur is accidently burned by a cigarette or a cigar, don't play amateur furrier—take it to an expert as soon as possible

Never apply an iron to a wrinkled lining. Hang the coat on a sturdy hanger in a cool place and let the wrinkles fall out

Never hang a fur item in direct sunlight - fur shades can fade

Never hang a fur coat or jacket on a metal hook. If there aren't any sturdy hangers available, place the article over the back of a chair using the top of the chairback to support the shoulders of the coat or jacket.

It is a good idea to have your fur garment cleaned before storing. Just like everything else - people, furniture, and cars - furs pick up dirt, and and all film from the atmosphere.

If you are storing your fur at home never put it in a plastic bag. Instead, take a piece of thin cloth and hang it from the hook in the top of the hanger, allowing it to fall down both the front and the back of the garment. Leave the cloth open at each side so not to build up static electricity and therefore heat, in the fur

The record pirates

Tape and record pirates are raiding the Canadian recording industry to the tune of 5.5 million a year. That's the figure released recently by Arnold Gosewich, president of the Canadian Recording Industry Association (CRIA), and reported Brian Robertson, CRIA secretary-treasurer, says the problem of bootlegged records and tapes has been escalating since 1966. He blames lax enforcement of Canadian copyright laws and penalties so lenient that they lead to a devil-may-care attitude: "The maximum penalty we can expect from a conviction is a $500 fine plus the seizure of the records and the tapes. The government is revising the copyright law in this area but it could be five years before the changes are put through. At the moment our legal counsel is working overtime on the problem." Legitimate retailers stay well clear of pirated productions and the bootleg recordings seldom surface in the major markets of Montreal, Toronto and Vancouver. Instead, they tend to turn up as loss leaders in out-of-the-way gas stations, hardware stores, novelty shops, and so on. The pirate recording problem has been inherited by Canada from the U.S., says Paul Amos, the Montreal lawyer working with the CRIA on the problem. He says 99.9 per cent of the pirate recordings come from the U.S. "We have secured the co-operation of customs people and we are aware of many of the illegal shipments that are coming into this country. We are seriously thinking at the momen of putting a total embargo on all tapes - they seem to be a greater problem than records - coming into Canada fom the U.S. Most of the legitimate tapes sold in stores are made in the country anyway. Besides customs people, we have sought the co-operation of various law enforcement agencies and have been successful in getting many arrests and tape seizures in the last year." Amos figures 25,000-50,000 tapes have been seized in the last year.

In loving memory of Bon Lester Pointer who passed away March 4 1972.
No further away than a picture
A smile or remembered phrase
But loved one lives in memory So close in so many ways
For how often does a sunset Bring nostalgic thoughts to mind
Or moments that our heart one shared
In days gone left behind
How often has a flower Or a crystal autumn sky Brought golden recollections Of happy days gone by
Yes, memory, how a magic way Of keeping our loved one near Each time it's in mind and heart Is the one we hold most dear
We still remembered by mother, wife, children grandchildren bros and many friends 27c3907

Queen will be crowned at the Kinsmen's rodeo

The Camrose Kinsmen will be crowning a "queen" at this year's version of their Winchester Rifle Rodeo scheduled for April.

The annual rodeo will be staged in the Recreation Center on April 6th and 7th with top cowboys from Canada and the United States expected to be on hand to compete for prize money and Winchester rifles.

Five girls from different communities will be competing in the Winchester Rifle Rodeo Queen Contest. All have sponsors from their local communities.

The queen candidates are Candace Ferguson, Hay Lakes, sponsored by the Hay Lakes Gymkhana Club; Carolyn Gray, Tofield, sponsored by the Beaverhills Light Horse Association; Patti Jacobson, Bawlf, sponsored by the Double Diamond Riding Club; Debbie Sablik, Wetaskiwin, sponsored by the Peace Pipe 4-H Light Horse Association; and Kathy Solway, Camrose, sponsored by the Camrose & District Light Horse Association.

The queen will be crowned on the first day of the rodeo. She will be selected by a judging committee headed by Jim Brown.

All queen candidates, and their sponsors, will be selling tickets on a draw for a portable television set. This will count for 50% of the judging in the queen competition. Horsemanship will count for another 10% while dress and personality will account for the remaining 10%.

The queen will receive a western saddle, a Tex-Tan western hat as well as numerous other gifts. As well, suitable gifts will be provided for the runners-up.

A spokesman for the Kinsmen Club said yesterday (Tuesday) that a draw, for a Winchester Rifle, will again be made this year. Tickets for this draw will soon be available at Byers Country & Western Store and Duff Layton's Men's Wear.

County spending sets new record

Not yet housebroken Clarence Burpee of Hughenden, with Sandy the Musk Ox. Sandy gets along well with people and thinks he should be allowed in the house. – Photo by Mrs. Burpee.

The County of Beaver spent a record amount of money during 1973, but came up with a surplus of $140,577.68.

Municipal costs amounted to $1,532,538.29 with a surplus of $18,786.22 while the school committee spent $2,200,865.57 and had a surplus of $91,791.17.

MUNICIPAL

Total revenue amounted to $1,581,324.51 with taxes providing the greatest amount of money at $952,048.37. Contributions, grants and subsidies totalled $197,577.86 with lesser amounts coming from various sources.

Public works was the biggest spender costing a total of $789,693.08 while money for educational expenses was $112,312.00. Administration cost $88,261.45 while insurance amounted to $29,795.60 with special expenditures amounting to $35,053.58 and recreation costing $17,991.83.

SCHOOL COMMITTEE

Total revenue amounted to $2,292,657.04 with the School Foundation Program providing $1,877,744 while the supplementary requisition on taxpayers amounted to $311,661 with the balance coming from different sources.

Instruction costs took the biggest bite at $1,325,313.70 while transportation cost $219,187.46 and maintenance totalled $205,727.47. Debt charges absorbed $110,591.80 with instructional aids costing $98,047.34 with lesser totals being used for other expenditures.

REEVE'S REPORT

Reeve J. H. Roddick noted that interest was lacking in annual ratepayers' meetings and that none was scheduled for 1974, as a result.

The reeve's report indicated that the heavy snowfall was costing heavily, amounting to $123,140 to clear roads from November until January. He noted that tax collections were improved.

Road improvement consisted of reconstruction of 19 miles, regravelling about 100 miles, oiling 28 miles and re-oiling 26 miles. Most of the emphasis on road work was on secondary roads in the county.

In his report as chairman of the School Committee, Mr. Roddick pointed out that the steady decline in the number of students in the county was still causing some problems in financing. He suggested that the surplus for 1973's operations would have to be used to purchase new buses during the next two years.

Hockey tourney is a big success

The past weekend, 25 teams played off for team trophies in Tofield's minor hockey tournament.

The tournament was well organized and all games went as to schedule. It was a good clean brand of hockey with lots of spectators all day and record door receipts.

Highlight of the tournament came on Sunday afternoon when the Minor Hockey queen candidate, Susan Sorken dropped the puck for the faceoff in the game between the Tofield Mites and the Fire Chief Mites.

Winners of the events who were awarded trophies were as follows:

Mighty Mites: Eastwood Edmonton
Mites: Tofield Fire Chiefs
Pee Wee: Fort Saskatchewan
Bantam: Hay Lakes
Midget: Fort Saskatchewan

Lamco plans annual meeting

Lamco Gas Co-op Ltd., will hold its first annual meeting on Wednesday, March 20th, at the Lamont Community Centre.

The meeting will begin at 7 p.m. and all members are asked to attend. Among the business items to be discussed is the changing of the fiscal year-end and increasing the size of the Board of Directors.

Word received from the Tax Department indicates that the entire amount of a member's contract ($1,350.00) plus any interest is deductible in 1973 only, as a capital cost. Additional yard service costs may be capitalized, and depreciated over a number of years in the same manner as any other capital improvement. Also, 25% of the annual gas expense may be deducted.

MacDuff Ottawa Report

The new healer-dealers

OTTAWA (CEP) — I'm still burning about some of the results of the conference here in February of the Federal and Provincial ministers of health. I suppose the aspect of the conference which rankled most was the notification handed out by the ministers that Canada was in danger of being oversupplied with doctors, and hence immigration of doctors would likely be stopped or restricted.

Most of our immigrant doctors — Federal Health Minister Marc Lalonde tells us immigrants make up 33 per cent of Canadian doctors — come from Britain, the Caribbean, India, Pakistan, and a few from the U.S. In most cases those immigrant doctors have come to Canada because of higher fees with payment guaranteed through various provincial medicare schemes.

Many have left countries where there is a real shortage of medical men to join in the share - the - wealth bonanza which is available in Canada — and the U.S. to the self-policed professions of doctoring and lawyering.

Whatever happened to the good old law of supply and demand? Theoretically too many doctors would result in lower fees, and a reduction of the number of people entering the profession. Same for lawyers. But when professions regulate themselves it doesn't work that way.

At the end of the health ministers' conference, Marc Lalonde even told us that too many doctors would likely result in higher overall health costs for Canadians, because doctors, doing less work would lobby for higher fees to maintain present life-styles.

The conference was also concerned that doctors in Canada are concentrated in the wealthier, urban areas of the country. Would you care to hazard a guess at why? Some smaller isolated communities in the country can't attract doctors in spite of government grants to doctors moving to such areas which range as high as $25,000.

To meet the problem, the ministers talked about levying doctors to practice in individual communities, so that no more than an adequate number would be resident in a particular area. But they intend to talk over all their ideas with the medical associations, and guess what that means.

Generalities are always dangerous, and so before go-

Brains will triumph

For years Canadians trying to read dates written on forms as numerals have often wondered whether they were looking at a British dateform or an American style, as they tried to decipher such figures as 12-1-73.

The 73 obviously referred to 1973, but that 12-1 . . . did it mean the twelfth day of the first month (January 12) or the 1st day of the 12th month, (December 1st?) Of course, no problem occurred if the one figure was over 12, because obviously then it had to be the day of the month.

It was the British, (wasn't it) who felt the date should be written as you'd say it, that is, January 12 or 1-12-73, while the Americans (or was it the other way around) opted for the progressive style, day, month, year, so that they would come up with 12, January, 1973, or 12-1-73.

Obviously in this shrinking world, and especially with computors linking countries everywhere, it becomes more and more important to have a common language, and we find a good deal of pride in the fact that Canada found a solution (at least, if the others will accept it).

It's a simple little thing, really, and so obvious one wonders why it took so long, but that's often the way. The solution, being urged in many new forms, is to use the information in diminishing order of year, month, day. Thus 73-1-12 can mean only one thing, the year 1973, the month January, and the 12th day.

It seems a masterpiece of logic. Nobody says it that way, either British or American. So nobody loses face in a compromise, and nobody can misunderstand the new logic.

ing any further I should state firmly that I know many doctors who are not ripoff artists, but disliked men, wealthy of the traditional respect that society has shown to medical men in the past. The fact that the image has slipped is proof enough that there are others, far more anxious to make a buck as quickly as possible than they are to be good at their profession.

The answer? Well, you don't blame rank and file doctors, anymore than you'd blame plumbers, electricians, or postmen for getting what the traffic will bear. The biggest step governments could take, in my opinion, is to insist that lay men have a voice in the professional associations of both doctors and lawyers.

But then, lawyers make up the bulk of our politicians, don't they?

"WHERE WAS EVERYONE"
Dear Editor:

On Monday evening, March 4th, 1974, the annual Town of Tofield Ratepayers' Meeting was held.

Approximately 40 people showed up for this meeting out of a town with a population of approximately 1200.

Where were our ratepayers? Where were the people who are every day solving this town's problems in the local coffee shops? Ratepayers, where were you Monday evening?

Let's have more group support for this town and present our beefs and bouquets whatever the case may be, in force.

Thank you,
J. McNeill

Saving S. Africa's rarest animal

One of the Boldest experiments ever tried in the wild aimed at ensuring the safety of South Africa's rarest animal, the rare antelope swung into action in the Kruger National Park recently, writes Derek du Plessis of The Star.

Rangers, scientific staff, veterinary surgeons, helpers and a helicopter were combined to immobilize the species from anthrax, a disease endemic to the park, but which affects the roan antelope in particular. The serum was administered by a special dart shot from the helicopter as the roan ran wild.

This method of operation — the culmination of many months of planning — has never been attempted anywhere before, and seemed to be a success. In one 10 minute period during the operation, seven animals were immobilized as the helicopter swooped over a sizeable herd.

During a serious outbreak last year 6 roan died, reducing their number to just 230 the lowest the park's population has ever been. Even that total of three antelope still remain in South Africa in terms of nature this put them only a shade away from extinction.

The dart which contained the serum is ingenious and was designed by the Park's experts. Shot from a shotgun, it plunges into the animal's rump, the impact rele[ases] the serum [and] [a]nthrax mark animals which have [been] treated. [Be]sides the dart [con]tains a [dye] and the [ani]mal's [sk]in [is] marked [with] a [pa]tch of [pi]nk. [Th]is method [is] [ad]vantageous [in] that [it] [en]ables [the] [ra]ngers to [re]cognize [the] [ro]an popu[la]tion. This [is] [an] [im]portant [fa]ctor [in] the possible prop[a]gation of the species.

The secret [pro]gramme [is] called for the capture of [ro]ans to be released [in] [an] [a]nthrax-proof enclosure. [Th]ere they are able to breed [in] safety although [th]ey [are] [pro]tected [and] [wa]tched [by] [ra]ngers. [A] supply was injected [in]to both [ca]ptive and wild animals.

The capture was [ac]complished swiftly and efficiently. The helicopter set off on a reconnaissance flight. And when the roan were spotted the [ra]dio beam was summoned by radio.

Once the animal had been darted - this time with a different dart containing a tranquillizing drug the helicopter followed it, like a protective bird, until the roan dropped.

The ground team moved in and secured the animal because although it was heavily drugged it was still lively enough to inflict damage with its sharp horns.

The dart was removed, penicillin was applied to the small wound and the roan was later released into the enclosure. There it was tagged for future identification. An antidote was administered and within minutes it was back on its feet. In a day it had recovered.

Meanwhile the fight against the anthrax itself continues. Recently scientists isolated the spores of the bacteria to the Pafuri Forest region on the park's northern borders. They are working on methods to [e]radicate it.

It is almost certain that the disease is spread by animals, mainly the buffalo, thereby [ac]cording to a recent discovery, by vultures.

Vultures are now being caught and tagged to plot their movements. These birds of carrion are blamed for infecting the park's reservoir with the disease.

The research will take two years, but be hold men in Kruger Park are taking a decisive step [to]ward protecting South Africa's rare and beautiful roan antelope.

Early Childhood Services

The School Committee of the County of Beaver does not plan to offer as part of its regular services an Early Childhood Services program for pre-school children.

The School Committee prefers instead that this program be organized and operated by community agencies, parent co-operatives or informal groups of parents or interested persons. Grants of $200 per child for each child who will be 4 years 6 months to 5 years 6 months on or before September 1st, 1974 are available for this program to such groups from the Department of Education.

The School Committee will assist each Early Childhood Services centre established. Assistance will be given with formation, organizing, obtaining staff, advising on supplies and materials, transportation and on any other matters where help can be given.

The Superintendent of Schools will meet with parents interested in exploring the formation of an Early Childhood Services program. In this regard one meeting has already been held with some parents at Viking.

If interested please contact the principal of your school or contact the Superintendent of Schools or Supervisor of Instruction at 853-3720.

Ankerton Gas Co-op to hold annual meeting

The annual meeting of the Ankerton Gas Co-op will be held at the Bawlf High School gymnasium during the week of Mar. 25th. Exact date will be announced next week.

The co-op hopes to have the Honorable Rey Farran, Minister of Telephones and Utilities, or his deputy in attendance at this meeting.

The consulting engineers' design for the system will be finished and presented to the government for grant approval by this time.

Stockpiling of materials will be continuing throughout the next month.

We're sticking to last year's face.

For those of you who own a passenger car, 1974 brings a pleasant change in the matter of license plates. This year you won't have to struggle desperately trying to remove your old license plates and replace them with new ones. Instead this is what will happen: You will receive a renewal form in the mail. After filling it out you take or mail it, along with the license fee to an issuing office or a Treasury Branch office. There you will receive a new vehicle registration and a set of stickers. The stickers then go on the lower right hand corners of your present plates . . . and that's all there is to it.

This revalidation program will apply only to passenger vehicles registered before 1974. If you are registering your car for the first time then you will receive 1973 plates plus the 1974 stickers. Owners of trucks, trailers, motor cycles and other vehicles will receive a new blue and yellow plate for 1974.

Launch student projects

Advanced Education Minister Jim Foster has announced the details of two projects aimed at providing better career information to prospective post-secondary students throughout Alberta.

One of the projects is a computerized system which will provide individualized responses to enquiries about vocational opportunities in the Province. The Vocational Information Service for Albertans, or VISA, will involve the co-operation of both the Department of Education and the Department of Manpower and Labour.

Phase I of the project will include the participation of one or two groups of high school students. This activity is expected to be underway by late Spring, 1974. In September, a considerable expansion of service is anticipated.

It is proposed that through VISA, students will receive answers to questions such as the availability of courses, prerequisites, course content, and tuition costs. Eventually VISA will be capable of relaying to secondary schools, and to other centres, answers to questions concerning career opportunities and labour market conditions.

A booklet describing post secondary educational opportunities in Alberta is also being prepared for distribution to high school students in May of this year. This booklet is intended to be of value to parents and counsellors as well, in understanding career opportunities and helping to guide students in making wise choices about their futures.

Mr. Foster said that the Department, through its newly-created Student Services Division, intends to offer a wide variety of assistance to persons interested in higher and further education. "Both VISA and the forthcoming careers booklet are steps in that direction," he said.

APRIL AID
The income tax help system and how to make it work for you.

As you know by now, we changed a lot of things last year. We gave you a new return, a new Guide, several new deductions and a few new rules. And quite honestly, we were more than a little concerned about your reaction to it all. (And very, very interested in your opinions.)

Well, now that we've had time to really look back at it and assess it honestly, it appears that most taxpayers did not seem to find it too difficult. The error rate did not accelerate greatly or change drastically from former years. Generally, most taxpayers seemed to handle their new returns fairly well.

However, Income Tax will never be the easiest or most enjoyable thing in anyone's life. And it will always present problems in some areas, for some people. That's expected and understandable.

So. What we want to do now is really work on those problem areas. And the best way to do that is to work with you, individually, on whatever part of Income Tax that causes you difficulty.

And that's what April Aid is all about. It's a help system and its primary objective is to ensure that whenever or whatever you need help with, you can get it. And know how to get it.

And this is how it works:
First. Your Guide is always the best answer when you have a problem. Read it. Follow it. It not only gives explanations, but in many cases, examples of just how to figure something out.

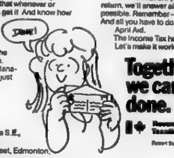
Second. If you're still confused or something just doesn't seem to work, phone. The number of your own District Taxation Office is below and at the end of that number there are people whose only job is to help taxpayers with problems, by telephone. And on Mondays and Tuesdays phone lines are open 'til 8 p.m. So don't hesitate.

If you live outside the office area, call the Operator and ask for Zenith 0-4000. She will automatically connect you to your own District Taxation Office. Remember, all calls are free, all questions are answered, and if you have queries, we want you to call.

Third. Some people prefer to talk things over in person. If you're one of them and have problems, drop by for free help. Anytime. The address of your District Taxation Office is below.

Fourth. Write. To the address below. Explain your problem as clearly as possible and include all information. (And your return address, please.) In return, we'll answer all letters as quickly and clearly as possible. Remember—If you need help, it's there. (And free). And all you have to do is ask.

April Aid.
The Income Tax help system.
Let's make it work for you.



Together, we can get it done.

Rudy Wiebe to present his readings

The CLC Culture Committee will present the well-known Canadian writer Rudy Wiebe in a public reading at the Convocation Centre on Tuesday, March 12th, at 7:30 p.m.

Mr. Wiebe, who was born and raised on the prairies, is recognized as one of Canada's foremost novelists. His reputation began in 1962 with the publication of his first novel, "Peace Shall Destroy Many". He has since published several short stories and short story anthologies as well as five other novels, "First and Vital Candle" (1966), "The Blue Mountains of China" (1970), and "The Temptations of Big Bear" (1973). Besides continuing to write, Mr. Wiebe teaches at the English Department of the University of Alberta.

His presentation on Tuesday night will include both readings and comments. The public is invited to attend.

Save money this winter

Your gas companies are pleased to offer these simple, money-saving hints to help you conserve fuel and keep a check on your natural gas bills this winter.

It takes only a few minutes and a few simple preparations to winterize your home and be sure your furnace is operating properly. And it takes even less effort to keep your home heating system operating efficiently all winter long.

Use nature to its best advantage. Sunshine is free, and it's warm — so, when the sun is shining, open up the window blinds, shades and curtains, and let the sun shine in. When the sun goes down or doesn't shine, keep window coverings closed, and let them form an insulation against the cold air outside.

If you have a fireplace, be sure the damper is closed when it isn't in use.

Try to keep the opening and closing of doors to the outside at a minimum. Each time an outside door opens, heat escapes and your furnace has to work overtime to replace the lost heat.

Keep heaters free from obstructions. If you cover a radiator or block off a heat duct, the heat from that source is cut off and the room temperature will drop.

A great way to waste money is to get into the habit of constantly adjusting the thermostat. Contrary to popular belief, turning up the thermostat doesn't make the furnace produce any more heat - what it does is keep the furnace operating longer and use up more fuel.

Set the thermostat at the temperature you want, and leave it there. If it is operating properly, the thermostat will automatically turn itself on and off.

You can economize while you sleep by turning the thermostat down 5 degrees to 10 degrees. If you do this regularly, you'll save quite a bit on fuel costs.

Experiment for the first few cold days to find the coolest indoor temperature at which your home is comfortable. Heating costs increase about 3 per cent for every degree above 70 degrees that you set your thermostat. So, if you keep your thermostat set at 70 degrees for a month, your heating bill will be around 30 per cent lower than if you kept it set at 80 degrees.

Change your furnace filter several times during the winter. If the filter is dirty, the furnace may operate all day long, especially during very cold weather, and still not be able to work efficiently.

If there are some rooms in your home that are not used in winter, turn off the registers and radiators in these rooms and keep the door closed. There is no need to heat an unused room. And, if your basement, attic or garage isn't heated, keep the door closed so that the heat from the heated part of the house won't escape.

For safety reasons, never use your gas range or oven to heat your kitchen. This can not only be costly, but since you are using your appliance to do something it hasn't been designed to do, it may be unsafe.

Former CLC professor to lecture in Sweden

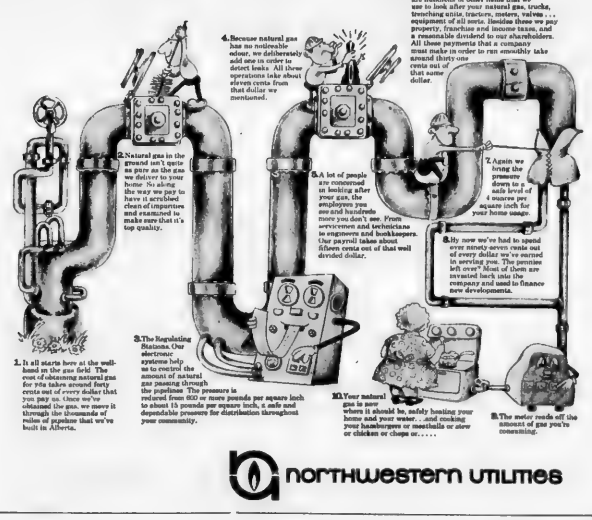
Dr. Donald Pattie, under the sponsorship of the Research Council of Canada will be attending the International Biological Arctic Tundra meetings in Abisko, Sweden, from April 11th to May 3rd.

Dr. Pattie will be going with a group of 14 researchers from Canada. While at the meetings he will present a paper and listen to others. These papers will later be compiled into a book.

Dr. Pattie is well known in Camrose for his work in the Arctic tundra. He has spent three summers there doing research on grants from the government. Some of the monies from these grants have been supplied from private corporations in the north, such as oil companies.

Dr. Pattie's expertise has also been recognized in Russia where he has been asked to give lectures. However, he has not yet given any indica-

We're looking after the gas you need.



1. It all starts here at the wellhead on the gas field. The cost of obtaining natural gas for you takes around forty cents out of every dollar that you pay us. Once we've obtained the gas, we move it through the thousands of miles of pipeline that we've built in Alberta.
2. Natural gas in the ground isn't quite as pure as the gas we deliver to your home. So along the way we pay to have it scrubbed clean of impurities and examined to make sure that it's top quality.
3. The Regulating Stations. Our electronic systems help us to control the amount of natural gas passing through the pipelines. The pressure is reduced from 600 or more pounds per square inch to about 15 pounds per square inch, a safe and dependable pressure for distribution throughout your community.
4. Because natural gas has no noticeable odour, we deliberately add one in order to detect leaks. All three operations take about eleven cents from that dollar we mentioned.
5. A lot of people are concerned in looking after your gas, the employees you see and hundreds more you don't see. From servicemen and technicians to engineers and bookkeepers. Our payroll takes about fifteen cents out of that well divided dollar.
6. You don't see them here, but there are hundreds of other items that we use to look after your natural gas, trucks, trenching units, meters, valves . . . equipment of all sorts. Besides these we pay property, franchise and income taxes, and a reasonable dividend to our shareholders. All these payments that a company must make in order to run smoothly take around thirty-one cents out of that same dollar.
7. Again we bring the pressure down to a safe level of 4 ounces per square inch for your home usage.
8. By now we've had to spend over ninety seven cents out of every dollar we've earned in serving you. The pennies left over? Most of them are invested back into the company and used to finance new developments.
9. The meter reads off the amount of gas you're consuming.
10. Your natural gas is now where it should be, safely heating your home and your water . . . and cooking your hamburgers or meatballs or stew or chicken or chops or . . . .

Rev. Aasen dies Thursday after marking century

Six weeks after hundreds of friends joined in celebrating his 100th birthday, Anders O. Aasen passed away Thursday, February 28th.

Born January 16th, 1874, in Nummedal, Norway, to Ole and Jorand Aasen, he emigrated to America in 1895, and later attended Luther College, Wisconsin University and Luther Seminary.

After ordination, he was an active minister in a variety of locations in the United States, Alaska, British Columbia and other parts of Canada for fully 75 years.

For the past 17 years, since he moved to Bethany Home in Camrose and became its chaplain, he has been familiar to hundreds of citizens. In addition to his duties as chaplain, he added a number of teaching duties at Camrose Lutheran College, where he was much appreciated by staff and students alike.

Even well into his nineties, he was familiar to many residents as "The Walker", turning down countless offers of rides from young people as he maintained his daily stint of three miles or more during the fairest or foulest of weather. Not content with walking just for exercise he also strode out in the Miles for Millions Marches carrying a considerable amount of money for every mile he walked as businessmen helped "sponsor" the popular figure.

On the occasion of his 100th birthday, tributes poured in from many areas he had formerly worked in, as well as from many long term friends while warm recollections were shared over the inspiration and the uplift and drive which had been given to many congregations by the vitality and energy of Mr. Aasen in his work at every [illegible].

Last October he was presented with the Leif Erickson citation by Calgary's Scandinavian community for exemplary [illegible] of a lifetime of service. At the time he was described as a man who lifts the [illegible] above the commonplace", and "is forever looking forward and scanning new horizons". A year earlier, the award had been presented to Chester Ronning, also of Camrose.

He married Marith Xavier in 1899. To this union were born seven children. He is survived by four daughters, Mrs. Fredrik Dagnay Scholtz, Mrs. Herbert Kamilla Hanson, Mrs Russell Beata [illegible], and Mrs. Charles Orla Carleton; 11 grandchildren and ten great grandchildren; predeceased by Mrs. Aasen, a son Paul, two daughters, Froydis and Mrs. Robert Garvin, and two grandchildren.

Funeral services were held on Monday, March 4th, in Messiah Lutheran Church, Camrose.

Farm Credit agency lends $5.5 million in region

The Farm Credit Corporation office in Camrose which is being operated by H.A.M. Humphries, Wm. Verhoeven and M. Tatarnuk report that lending in Alberta for 1973 is up 130 percent over 1972 levels.

In the Counties of Camrose and Flagstaff served by Camrose F.C.C. office located in the Post Office Building, a total of 125 F.C.A. loans in the amount of $5,300,000 were approved. In Farm Syndicate Loans (F.S.C.A.) a total of seven loans in the amount of $175,000 were approved.

Farm Credit Corporation also administers the Vendor grants and Special Credit Assistance sections of the joint Federal-Provincial Small Farm Development program. The Camrose office has approved 70 Vendor grants totalling $220,000 who retired from the operation of uneconomic farms in 1973. Under the same program F.C.C. made 10 special credit agreements totalling $205,000 to young farmers with less than $60,000 total assets in order to let them add to their present farms.

Most F.C.C. lending in 1973 has been for land. Camrose F.C.C. office is anticipating an even heavier demand in 1974.

CHRYSANTHEMUM: The newer varieties available from most good florists will last for weeks after the Christmas season. When the plants are finished flowering cut them back to 3 or 4 inches, continue watering and feeding until all danger of frost is past, then set them in the garden. These will flower naturally in the fall.

Adventurous spirits pursue the dream of success and fulfilment.

Out of town guests were from Bruce, Edmonton, Stony Plain, Viking, Whitecourt, Calgary, Jasper Place, Sherwood Park, Tofield, and Crossfield. They had a phone call from Alice''s brother, Harold McMullen of Fox Creek.

SUNSHINE CLUB

The senior citizens of Ryley have formed a club called "Ryley Sunshine Club."' The initial meeting brought a paid up membership of 31 people. They have the use of the Haight School through the recreation commission. The place is being decorated throughout, and a ramp is being built by the county recreation.

They received an electric coffee pot, tea pot, and other items from the recreation commission. The club meets every Wednesday from 2 to 5 p.m. Many have co-operated by picking up members.

They play games, visit, and once they get into full swing will get on with making rugs, etc. Len Willans is president, Agnes Lundin is vice president, treasurer is Signy Meeruson, Board of Directors are Agnes Manderson and Wm Wiancas.

A surprise party was held for John Knudslien on Saturday evening. Keith Robson served a most delicious supper to about 15 guests. John received gifts and cards, and a birthday cake was served in his honor.

Mrs Nancy James' son, Bob, and wife of Calgary visited her over the weekend.

Mrs Clara Nelson entertained her friends to birthday lunch on Monday afternoon. They all enjoyed the get-together.

Mrs. Peter Jensen was happy to get back home on Friday after spending some time in an Edmonton Hospital.

College looks to expansion

Expansion of the facilities at Camrose Lutheran College was discussed for some time last week-end when the Board of Regents met here for their regular spring session, and approval in principle was given to an overall development scheme. Consisting of several phases, the expansion will benefit college operation at a number of levels.

Basic to the discussion was consideration of the expansion of residence facilities. The proposal for new residence facilities is to serve two purposes, one being to provide better residence accommodation and more space for students in residence, the other being to release additional space for library operations, faculty offices and the music program within existing buildings.

The Board approved in principle the construction of three residences, each housing 24 students. A loan application to Central Mortgage and Housing will have to be approved before the program canstart, and that approval is hoped for by the end of March. The Alumni Association has committed itself to provide the funds for one of the residences.

Erection of the new housing facilities would release part of the northern residence, presently used as the boys' dorm, for library, and faculty offices, so that all of the space in the classroom building can be converted back to classroom use. The entire lower floor in the north (boys) residence will be turned into library space, while the second floor will be developed into offices. The third floor will continue to be used for residence space.

The three new residence units will be located in the wooded area on the eastern portion of the campus, across the ravine which runs alongside Convocation Centre. No vehicles will be permitted in this area, and access will be by footpath only.

No estimate could be given, as to when borrowing approval might be received, and construction start.

The Faculty Handbook, which has been in the process of formulation for the past three years, received final approval of the Board. The Handbook incorporates, among other things, the policies for the continuing operation of the institution which have been approved by the Board.

Professor Vincent Eriksson, the Dean of the College, was granted a sabbatical for the 1974-75 academic year. Professor Eriksson intends to write a number of papers for publication on subjects relating to the philosophy of history.

NEW APPOINTMENTS

The following administrative appointments for 1974-75 received approval: Acting Dean of the College, James Neff; Associate Dean and Registrar, By Reesor; Director of Student Services, Dr. David Larson; High School Principal & Awards Officer, Murray Lauber; Athletic Director, Arne Donovan.

In addition to the administrative appointments, Don Myrehaug was appointed to the full-time teaching staff.

The budget for 1974-75 was neither presented nor approved. No final word had been received by the time of the board meeting from the Department of Advanced Education on the grant structure for either the present or the coming fiscal year. The executive of the board will be responsible for setting the budget which will be reviewed by the board at its June meeting.

As I see it

Walt Buck, MLA, Clover Bar

This week will see the opening of the Spring Sitting of the Legislature.

The opening debate on the Throne Speech will be the first order of business. The Throne Speech is the Government outline of proposed programs for the coming year.

CONCERNS

My primary concern will be the government's handling of our natural gas and oil industry. I did not feel that Premier Lougheed's stand in Ottawa was sufficiently strong. This was Alberta's first chance to have a lever in adjusting Western freight rates in exchange for Western oil and the government did not press the issue strongly enough.

LOWERED GASOLINE PRICES

The past two sessions of the Legislature we have been asking for a reduction in the provincial gasoline tax. It is inconceivable that with rapidly increasing royalties our price of gasoline should have risen 3c per gallon over the last two years.

I will personally be pressing for a reduction of 5-10c per gallon tax reduction.

PHONE BATTLE

The discrimination and unfairness of the extended area phone service will be one of the prime concerns at this sitting. Many people have phoned me of their displeasure and I pledge to do all I can to rectify the situation.

SENIOR CITIZENS HOUSING

Homes are desperately needed in Tofield and Fort Saskatchewan. The government in action in the area of Senior Citizens accommodation is certainly appalling. This topic should certainly receive more attention.

Your concerns will be appreciated and conveyed to the government. Write Walt Buck MLA, c/o the Legislature or phone collect, Fort Saskatchewan 543-3660 or 543-2166.

OPPOSITION WANTS LOWER GAS TAX

The MLA for Clover Bar, Walt Buck, and his colleagues will be pressing for lowered gasoline taxes.

"The increased price of 3c per gallon over the past two years is not an enviable record of the Lougheed Government" stated Walt Buck. It is hurting the small taxpayer and also increasing the farmer's cost of production".

"The fact that the Government has received large amounts of increased royalties should be passed on to Albertans in the form of a 5-10c decrease in gasoline tax. We have pressed for this in the past two sessions and will continue to do so, stated the MLA.

Queen candidates

The Tofield Figure Skating Club is preparing for its annual revue and carnival which will be held on March 30 and 31. Details of the two-day affair will be published next week. Four girls are seeking the title of Carnival Queen. They are now selling tickets. Left to right are Debbie Walker, Tofield 4-H Beef Club; Debbie Kronewitt, Tofield Lions Club; Debbie Miskew, Beaverhill Light Horse Association; and Susan Sorken, Tofield Minor Hockey. The queen will be crowned on March 30, during the intermission in the skating program.

Ryley is in finals

Ryley has gained a berth in the finals of the Beaverhills Hockey League.

Ryley roared from behind a 3-0 deficit to edge Andrew 6-5 to win their semi-final series four games to one.

Oslund led the winners with two goals while singles went to Martin, Shantz, G. Magneson and W. Magneson. Memdiuk and Lukenchuk each scored twice for the losers with the single going to Warenchko.

Ryley will now meet the winner of the Tofield - Lamont series for the league championship.

That series is currently tied at three games each. Lamont won its 3rd game 9-3 only to have Tofield roar back with three straight wins by scores of 8-4, 9-2 and 5-2 to deadlock the series. The three successive losses by Lamont was the team's longest losing streak since they entered the league.

The first game of the finals will be played in Tofield on Saturday.

Ryley senior citizens form a 'Sunshine Club'

by Lena Reil

The new Senior Citizens' organization being formed is called the Ryley Sunshine Club. At the initial meeting, paid-up membership totalled 31.

The group will use the Haight school, arranged through the Recreation Commission. The premises is being re-decorated throughout with the help of four men, under Geo Baker's leadership.

Meetings are held every Wednesday from 2 to 5 p.m. Car owners co-operate by bringing in people who have no other way to come.

They spend the afternoon playing scrabble, cards and other games, and everyone appeared to participate in the games. A very happy time was reported.

The executive of the organization are: president, Len Willans; vice-president Agnes Lundin; treasurer, Signy Neraasen; and board of directors, Agnes Manderson and Bill Winsness.

A 35-cup percolator, tea pot, etc., was received from the Recreation Commission. As time goes on, things will keep on improving.

Tofield cattle selling "high"

Cattle from Tofield did exceedingly well at the annual Alberta Polled Hereford Association's show and sale which was held in Innisfail on Saturday.

Ralph Cossey and Sons exhibited the grand champion female which was sold to Ed Shitska for $2,700 while Howard Brown showed the reserve champion female which was sold to Matt Klaus for $2,550.

Mr Brown sold the animal commanding the highest price in the entire sale, a yearing bull which brought a price of $5,100 from a trio composed of Vic Schneider, O K Schneider and Matt Klaus.

John Moore showed a heifer which was tops in its class and brought a price of $2,000 and, as well, sold another heifer for a similiar amount.

Average price during the sale was $1,100.

Two teams eliminated

Two Tofield teams, entered in the provincial hockey playoffs, have been eliminated from further competition.

The Tofield Satellites were knocked out of intermediate 'A' contention by Sherwood Park and on Sunday, were eliminated from 'C' playoffs when they bowed 8-3 to Camrose on Sunday.

The Tofield Bantams were competing in 'C' competition and, after winning their first two rounds, were ousted by Fort Saskatchewan.

Weatherman isn't nice

The weatherman has not been good to The Mercury this winter.

Due to the storm yesterday (Wednesday) Ms. Thompson was unable to make her appointed rounds to Ryley, Holden and Tofield.

As a result news budgets were not picked up. This likely means a pile-up of news for next week's paper.

Success is also breeding some problems for the paper.

Because of the increase in readership, more advertisers are seeking to use the pages of The Mercury and, as a result, more clubs, organizations and individuals are looking for news space.

Due to a time problem (and lately some mechanical difficulties) it is not always possible to get the news set in time for publication. The Mercury is working on the problem and, hopefully, will soon reach a solution.

In the meantime, our apologies.

Round Hill farmer loses barn by fire

Damage was estimated at around $22,000 when fire completely destroyed a barn on the farm of Leroy Forre on Thursday afternoon.

The Forre Farm is located about twelve miles east and seven miles north of Camrose.

The barn, a wood frame structure, was over forty years old and was only partially covered by insurance.

The fire was discovered by Gordon Innes of UFA Petroleum Products of Camrose who was driving by the farm when he noticed the blaze. Mr Innes immediately drove on the farm and notified the Camrose Fire Department.

Because of the intense heat, he then drove his truck back to the road and returned to the barn where he was able to free twelve head of cattle and six calves from the inferno. Some of the calves suffered burns.

The Camrose Fire Department responded to the alarm but, could do little towards saving the building which ended up as a total loss.

However, they along with neighbours, were able to save nearly 300 bales of hay which had been stacked next to the burning barn. The hay had been a recent purchase by Mr Forre.

Cause of the fire was not known.

Holden Society will conduct 'money' drive

The Holden and District Agricultural Society has been formed and incorporated to promote cultural, recreational, agricultural and educational facilities for the Village of Holden and the surrounding district.

This includes an area, approximately fifteen miles south, fifteen miles north, eight miles east and eight miles west of the Village of Holden. Area 480 sq. miles.

A building approximately 150 feet wide by 218 feet long has been planned, to include a full-sized skating rink and a three-sheet curling rink with restrooms, showers, viewing areas, together with a seating capacity for about 640 people.

This building will cost $180,000 for the initial cost. A contract has been signed for material and construction.

At present the Society has received a Provincial Grant of $50,000 and an L.I.P. Grant of $16,500. It is hoped to get some assistance from the County of Beaver, and the Village of Holden. A canvass of Village and Country is presently in progress with the hope of collecting $40,000 or more.

An appeal is issued to the various businesses, organizations and individuals to help provide funds to complete this building. It is hoped to have the structure ready for use by the autumn of 1974.

Talent Night being planned

The Tofield 4-H Beef Club is making plans for the holding of its annual Talent Night.

Trophies for this year's competition will be donated by the Alberta Wheat Pool.

Anyone interested in entering the contest should contact Randy Jones at 662-2197 or Elsa Heiberg at 662-2222.

Prevention or punishment?

Recent comments over the so-called lack of success attributable to the Stop-Check campaign make one wonder how many people view it as a program to increase punishment for drinking drivers. Statistics published recently by certain metropolitan police forces indicated a feeling that the entire campaign is a waste of time and energy, because so few impaired drivers have been turned up, and so few arrests made.

But surely this is to misread the entire message, and to ignore the message between the lines.

As we understand it, the real idea of the campaign initiated by the Hon. Helen Hunley was to reduce the number of drivers on the roads seriously affected by alcohol, in an effort to reduce the tragic number of accidents. In other words, the Stop-Check program was aimed at prevention of problems, rather than punishing people after the fact.

And several related factors tend to indicate its having a considerable impact on the problem. Many drivers seem to be far more alert, and far more impressed with the danger of being found involved in an accident. And reports from cocktail lounges and drinking establishments generally tend to indicate people are drinking less heavily, and more cautiously, if they intend to be out on the roads after. Or that at least one member of the the party is being kept sober, because he is recognized as the driver.

Far from the program being a failure, we would say all those things tend to indicate it is having a real effect, and working out as a major success. Let's not cut down on the first worthwhile, and imaginative concept for prevention, so we can concentrate on the more deadly business of punishment. The idea is to have fewer culprits, rather than more, and if regular and systematic checks turn up fewer impaired motorists, that's all to the good.

Matching the experts

What must be regarded as one of the most unusual challenges came recently from a small Canadian oil company, which is moving into Texas and Oklahoma in the search for further oil. Not just a Canadian company, but Edmonton based, Chieftain Development Co. Ltd. is a wing of the Chieftain organization built from nothing into a pretty sizeable operation by Stan Milner.

Working through an American subsidiary, Chieftain International, the company isn't tackling the whole problem by itself, but is participating in the drilling of eight wells altogether, varying from five thousand to sixteen thousand feet in depth.

Canadians are used to having American firms up here hunting for our oil, of course, but it must be something of a novelty to see Canadian drillers go looking for oil in the States, especially in such drilled out areas as Texas and Oklahoma. However, there must be a lot of land still open, far in excess of Colorado alone, they'll share a small interest in 360,000 acres.

Carried much further, this could be an entirely new type of answer to the demand for continental energy policy, and one more to Canada's liking than the plan recently urged by Mr. Kahn, whereby Canada would take care of all the producing, and the States would take care of all the consumption.

Canadians will wish Mr. Milner and his Chieftain associates well in trying to build a stronger, and more broadly based, minor oil firm. Impressive as its growth has been already, there's such a huge gap to close that matching the majors seems unlikely, indeed.

Alberta Pool supports Board rapeseed system

The Alberta Wheat Pool supports the principle of orderly marketing of all prairie grains and believes rapeseed should be marketed under the Canadian Wheat Board, Alberta Pool delegates at their annual meetings, have several times stated and re-affirmed their position of support for the orderly marketing system.

Commenting on the forth coming rapeseed poll, Wheat Pool President Gordon Harrold noted that individual farmers are unfairly disadvantaged by the "open" market. Producers generally have not the up-to-date market information, experience, training or time to compete individually with large traders, exporters or other grain interests. The speculation and gambling in farmers' grain products does not enhance a stable economic agricultural base. Mr. Harrold noted that history has shown the open market can merchandise a crop when demand is greater than supply, but under conditions of large supply and declining price pressure, the market does not operate in the interests of highest returns to producers.

The rapeseed plebiscite really boils down to the question of whose interests should be of primary consideration, — the traders who profit from dealing in farm products, or the farm people who produce the grains and oilseeds.

The Alberta Wheat Pool is a farmers' outfit — it does not exist to serve grain trade or any other interests — it exists to serve the farm people who own it. That is why the Alberta Wheat Pool firmly supports the marketing of rapeseed under the Canadian Wheat Board.

Minister told damage slight from New Nerway gas blow-out

Hydrogen sulphide which escaped last October during the ill-well blowout at New Norway does not appear to have injured humans and animals, or caused lasting damage to vegetation.

This was the substance in some of the general observations made in a report to Environment Minister W.J. Yurko early last month from the New Norway Scientific Committee, which investigated the blow-out.

The report pointed out that fourteen persons from the region were examined in hospital from the effects of hydrogen sulphide and two received mild medication. None required follow-up care.

The greatest problems were caused by the mixture of salt water and oil which spewed from the well and rained down on the surrounding area. The report said,

"In total, some 35 acres of aerated to the east of the well were affected by a fine spray of salt water and oil. This entire area has been cleared of vegetation and cultivated."

The oil-water spray onto forage crops created a feed palatability problem. Possible effects on the 1974 crop are unknown.

Plants are most likely to be damaged by hydrogen sulphide when they are growing quickly. The occurrence of the blowout near the end of the growing season and the low concentration of hydrogen sulphide in the area kept damage at a minimum.

Ground inspection showed signs characteristic of hydrogen sulphide burns on a few plants within one-half a mile of the well. Unless heavily damaged, plants normally recover.

Infra-red aerial photography following the blowout showed normal vegetation except for areas affected by the oil fallout.

Had the well burned, and converted the hydrogen sulphide to the more toxic sulphur dioxide, greater damage could have been likely.

No livestock deaths have been linked to the gas, although one herd of cattle suffered from watery eyes and coughs for a few days. A herd of pigs suffered from diarrhea.

Post mortems were conducted on nine animals which died about the time of the blowout and death was attributed in eight cases to other causes. No cause of death was determined in the other case because of decomposition.

Tests of milk showed no hydrogen sulphide present.

Aerial surveys of lakes and larger sloughs during and after the blowout showed no dead or distressed waterfowl, the report said.

"It is noteworthy that all waterfowl have developed to flying size by this time of the year. A similar event during the summer breeding season when young are not flying and the females are reluctant to leave their broods unattended could have serious local effects."

The aerial inspection of draws and valleys where hydrogen sulphide might have concentrated showed no other dead wildlife.

The scientific committee was composed of representatives of the energy resources conservation board and the Departments of Environment, Agriculture, and Health and Social Development.

TOFIELD

150 million bushels by 1978 is call of rapeseed president

"A lot more rapeseed to [illegible] the booming world demand" was called for last week at the annual meeting of the Rapeseed Association of Canada when President [illegible] Banfield told delegates "[illegible] current rate of growth [illegible] we will be able to use [illegible] million bushels by 1978."

[illegible] farmers seeded 5.3 [illegible] bushels and harvested [illegible] million bushels. In 1973, [illegible] million acres were seeded [illegible] 55 million bushels were [illegible] Exports last crop [illegible] totalled 34 million bushels and the domestic crush [illegible] 136 million bushels. The current cash price to growers is about $7.00 a bushel.

Mr. Banfield said Canada's rapeseed crushing industry is "one of the faster growing industries in the country and has achieved an annual rate of growth of 25.2 per cent in each of the last eight years."

He told the delegates that rapeseed had captured 40 per cent of the domestic oil market, mainly at the expense of imported edible oils. Rapeseed oil, also known as Canbra oil, is used mainly in margarine, shortening, and cooking oils.

But despite this achievement, Mr. Banfield said he was worried whether production could keep up with market demand. "We continue to be plagued with the same problems: will producers stay with the crop, what will the acreage be and how much can we produce."

He said one solution would be to find ways to increase the yield per acre of rapeseed "not only to increase growers' net incomes but to reduce to competition of rapeseed acreage with the acreage of other crops."

"For instance, a 150 million bushel target would require 7.5 million acres if the average yield was 20 bushels. But if the yield was 25 bushels an acre we would only need 6 million acres."

The Homemaker

There are three standard responses to a mother's query, "What do you want for dinner?"

a) "I don't care."
b) "It doesn't matter."
c) "Uh h h h." (Translated: I don't care. It doesn't matter")

When a woman hustles no less than 1004 meals a year, getting a happy family around the dinner table can be less fun than the Paris Peace Talks.

Perhaps your solution may be more appealing menus. No matter how nutritious (according to Canada's Food Guide) a meal may be, if not appealing, the food may not be eaten, and all the nutrients wasted.

Flavour, texture, colour, shape and variety all add up to the attractiveness of the food you serve, and the tempting of appetite. Food need not be fancy, and need not be loaded with extra unnecessary calories. Simple foods, well prepared, seasoned and served attractively [illegible] be very tasty. For example:

a) Combine mild and strong flavours in one meal. Never serve cauliflower and cabbage together - not alone are they similar in color, but both are strong in flavour as well. Serve foods with complementary flavours - asparagus with cheese sauce, chicken in an orange sauce.

b) Let colour influence your menu choice. For instance, rather than serving roast pork, mashed potatoes and cauliflower, change your menu to roast pork, baked potatoes and carrots garnished with a parsley variety.

c) Give contrast in texture to the various meal items. Texture refers to the softness, crispness, smoothness, dryness or moistness of foods. Cheese souffle, the mashed potatoes, and chops offer a contrast.

d) Variety of shapes adds interest to meals. A well rounded meal does not refer to hamburger patties, baked potatoes and brussel sprouts but it may mean meat loaf, scalloped potatoes and brussel sprouts.

e) To give interest offer an equal balance between hot and cold dishes.

f) Alternate rich and lighter foods in your menu. If you plan to serve a heavy rich main course such as fried ham steak with pineapple, serve a light dessert such as fruit cup with cookies.

Family taste, customs and traditions will influence your choice of food and sometimes the method of preparation. Experiment a bit. You may some day get an answer to what to serve for dinner.

Tax Tips

For further information, call the District Taxation Office. If you live in a toll area, ask your long-distance operator for ZENITH 0-4000 and your call will be placed without charge.

Q. My employer pays me an allowance to cover my board and room while I am working at distant work sites away from my ordinary place of residence where I support my wife and family. Previously, I was told that this had to be included in income for income tax purposes because I was not a construction worker. I understand that this no longer applies. Is this correct?

A. Yes. This exempting provision now applies to all workers employed to a distant work site providing they meet the other necessary conditions.

Q. I am self-employed and I pay into a registered retirement savings plan with an insurance company. I have no salaried income and understand that I can claim for income tax purposes, a maximum of $4,000 for my retirement savings plan. Is this correct?

A. If you are not covered by an employee pension plan you would be entitled to claim amounts paid into a registered retirement savings plan up to $4,000, or 20 per cent of your earned income for the year, whichever is less.

Peter Ward's Ottawa viewpoint . . .

Keeping inflation at bay

OTTAWA (CEP)

If the issue which dominated that lengthy session of Parliament during 1973 was energy and the international oil crisis, then the issue which will dominate the current session which began in late February is going to be the economy.

There is no doubt the world's energy difficulties with both supply and price will rein in the Canadian economy. Because our trading partners are facing real hardship, they will not have funds for the ever higher amounts of manufactured goods we wish to sell. The U.S. — which buys 80 percent of our manufactured exports - is already showing signs of the economic staggers because of energy trouble.

That much has been said before - as a matter of fact there was a column on that very issue in this space three months ago, before the opinion was in vogue.

But there are now new developments and new questions, which further threaten our economic position. For more than two years the Canadian dollar has been floating on the international market, and staying within a penny and a fraction of the U.S. dollar in value. The opposition has in the past made frequent charges that the Canadian "float" was a "dirty float" - in other words, the government has been buying U.S. dollars to keep demand for Canadian currency at bay, thus holding down the value of Canadian currency.

The Finance Department claims that such action was taken a few times in the past, but only to curb flurries of speculation by gambling investors, not to distort real market forces. Large foreign investment in Canada, for example, tends to drive up the value of the Canadian dollar. Higher interest rates in Canada than in the U.S. help to combat inflation here, but the higher return on investment attracts foreign money to Canada, increasing the value of the dollar. Such things can be rated as natural forces, and thus they do not rate government intervention.

But indications are that the government has been trying unsuccessfully for quite some time to curb the current rise in value of the Canadian dollar. Foreign investors are well aware that Canada alone among industrialized nations has sufficient energy for her own needs, and apparently they are funnelling money into the country. In addition we are faced with at least $50 billion in heavy investment for energy development during the next decade - the Athabaska Tar Sands the Mackenzie Valley Pipeline and the James Bay Project for example.

The trend to a more valuable Canadian dollar is self-reinforcing, because the more energy sources we develop, the better will be the long-term bet on the Canadian future. But a higher-priced Canadian dollar plays the devil with our export prices, making our manufactured goods much more expensive to buy abroad, so from an employment point of view, the development is threatening.

"One of the things that will be vital to the nation's future will be the direction taken by the Trudeau government during the next Parliament. If the civil service is allowed to continue to grow unchecked, if federal spending on welfare and make-work projects continues to be magnified and the real base of the economy will diminish.

The time has arrived for some rational and tough action in the economic field, and one wonders whether the Trudeau government will have the moxy to perform the task.

A lot of parents who carefully shop for flame resistant pajamas and other clothing for their children, are seriously defeating the fabric's finish by improper laundering.

Flame resistant cottons, for example, should be washed with phosphate based detergents. Soaps or non-phosphate detergents build up a film on the fabric that covers the vital chemicals in the material causing it to lose its flame resistancy.

Phosphate detergents are not in favor, however, because of their contribution to water pollution and are not sold in many areas. If they are available where you live, you're faced with either adding to water pollution or jeopardizing your child's safety.

Fortunately, there is a solution to this dilemma — non-phosphate heavy-duty liquid laundry detergent. These detergents are citrate based and protect both your local water supply and flame resistant fabrics.

Be careful when shopping for this detergent, however, just as you have to be when purchasing the flame resistant clothing to begin with. Look for the words "heavy-duty" and "citrate based" to be sure you are getting the right product.

Readers' questions are welcome and should be sent to Box 5875, London, Ontario.

"TO THE PARENTS FROM THE COACH"

Dear Sir

I am your son's hockey coach. I have volunteered to spend my time with your boy. By enrolling your son in hockey, you have given him to me to handle, and I accept the responsibility. But you must know your boy is a normal, active youngster, complete with tantrums, tears, showing off, and complaining. Aren't all boys??

Whatever your son does on my team, affects 5 other players and most times his entire team. If he gets mad or foolish, the penalty leaves the team shorthanded. If he forgets equipment or arrives late, the shifting of other players to fill in, means they play an unfamiliar position, thereby lowering the efficiency of the whole team. If he does not come to practice, he does not know the plays his line-mates have learned and again messes up the team. If he stays up to watch the late show, his tiredness means he can't skate at regular linespeed, so shifts his responsibility onto the other members. None of this is fair to the other 15-20 boys, so he cannot be allowed to do this.

Maybe your son doesn't do these things. But, does he work his very best on the ice, or does he let the other linemates do the work? Or is he the one in the player's box having a tantrum? Again this type of behavior must be disciplined for the sake of the boys who do work and display good sportsmanship.

As this hockey league is divided into 2 year age groups, your boy will always be a younger, weaker player or the older, more experienced in alternate years. The league rule states that each boy must be played once each period. Therefore, your boy is entitled to one whistle per period on the ice. What he actually plays is up to me.

I must take into consideration the size and strength of the opposition and many other strategies of the game. Your son is not being put on the ice because he is either being disciplined for poor behavior, or he is too weak to hold up against the opposing team.

I would like to put these questions to you. Do you want your son to go completely undisciplined? Do you expect other boys to go their own way, regardless of the other team members? Would you enjoy the team losing continually? Would your boy enjoy hockey if his team always lost? Would you appreciate him being injured by boys twice his size? What would his teammate reaction to him be, if he kept letting the opposition score because of inexperience on his part? What would his own reaction be?

All through hockey, your boy will get more ice time alternate years, due to age and experience. You don't expect a 6 year-old to read at a 7 year-old level and you wouldn't expect a grade three-er to compete in a grade 4 exam" And yet you expect your boy to be equal with the larger more experienced boys in hockey.

I try to get the younger boys experience during exhibition games and as much ice time as possible when the score is in our favor. After all, they will be my experienced boys next year" But when the competition is tough and strong -- it is only reasonable from pure safety and logic that the stronger boys are needed.

I enjoy working with your son. We both want him to mature into a responsible person. Accepting discipline and his part on the team and learning good sportsmanship is essential. But it is important for your son to accept his own abilities and adjust accordingly. Please help me to help your boy accept his role on the team, whether large or small. It will be a very good step in helping him accept his role in life, which will always be accorded him through his own abilities. There will always be people stronger or better throughout his whole life, and learning to accept this in hockey is an important step.

Ice Carnival nearly ready

The Tofield Skating Club is combining exertion, enthusiasm, and talent to create their ice carnival with international flavor, "It's a Small World", for March 30 and March 31.

There are 500 advance tickets, for each of two performances, at $1.50 for Adults and 75c for Students, with rush tickets selling at the door for $1.00 and 50c respectively

Tickets are available from Dykeman's Confectionery, Tofield Pharmacy, Robinson's Store and club members.

Candidates are: Debbie Kronewitt, Debbie Miskew, Susan Sorken, and Debbie Walker

The crowning of the queen will be the highlight of intermission during Saturday's evening performance

Lawson is re-elected as Light Horse prexy

The annual meeting of the Beaverhill Light Horse Association was held recently at Lindbrook Hall with President, Dennis Lawson in the chair

The secretary then read the minutes of the last annual meeting. Next, the financial report was given.

Business arising from the minutes was then discussed. The club will try to hold as many gymkanas as possible and at least three trail rides again. The date for the first trail ride will be May 19th (weather permitting) with details to be announced later. The booth will again be in operation for the gymkanas with pop chips, etc., to be offered. The gymkanas will try to feature a few new events such as cattle penning; and events for the Juniors that will provide them with a little more constructive work with their horses.

It was decided that the members would try to build up the loading chute and haul in some more sand for the north-west corner of the corals to try and alleviate the mud problem there. The club will also look into the price of a small P.A. System to be used gymkanas.

The highlight of the afternoon was the introduction of the queen candidates. For the carnival in Tofield, the Club is sponsoring Debbie Miskew and for the Kinsmen Rodeo in Camrose, the candidate is Carolyn Gray. The Rodeo Queen Candidates are judged not only on ticket sales but on riding ability and personality also. However, since we are competing against several large centres such as Camrose and Wetaskiwin, it would be greatly appreciated if the members of the community would get behind our local contestant and give her all the support they can. Tickets may be purchased from any club member.

The final item for the day was the election of officers with the following slate going in:

President, Dennis Lawson; Vice-President, Homer Schmidt; Secretary-Treasurer, Deanna Norton; Official Time Keepers, Helen Gray and Donalda Schmidt; New Board Members, Don Wyllie, Glenn Jones and Heather Ryan; Stop-watch Operators, Alberta Watt, Penny Price, Agnes Rose and Theone Jones.

Ryley leads in finals

The Tofield Satellites made an outstanding comeback to advance to the Beaverhill Hockey League finals.

Tofield won the seventh and deciding game, Saturday, with a 5-2 victory over Lamont. At one point in the series, Tofield were down three games to none.

George Keen was the outstanding player on the ice Saturday, scoring two Satellite goals.

The finals got underway Tuesday with Ryley scoring a 6-2 victory over Tofield.

Don Shantz had a super game for Ryley scoring two goals. Singletons went to Lorne Lehman, Rod Martin, Wade Magneson and playing coach Vern Roth. Doug Appleby and Leo Rurka replied for Tofield.

The series resumes tonight (Thursday).

Crop insurance shows popularity for farmers

When participation in an agricultural program increases by more than 20 per cent in one year, farmers must see something they like.

The federal government's crop insurance program is proving to be popular in Alberta as the number of farmers taking part rose to more than 12,000 in 1973-74 from about 10,000 the previous year.

Insurance coverage doubled jumping to more than $73,000,000 in 1973-74 from about $37,000,000 the year before. Premiums rose to about $8,000,000 from less than $3,000,000 in 1972-73.

This increase in popularity in crop insurance is a reflection of our booming agricultural economy. Stronger markets, higher prices and better farming techniques have helped put more money in the farmer's pocket.

Another reason for this popularity is that the federal government is paying 50 per cent of the premium compared with 25 per cent the year before.

A hail spot loss benefit option in the Alberta plan was added for the first time in 1973 and has received excellent reaction from farmers in the province.

Crop insurance can mean the difference between red and black ink in the accounting ledger. Excessive moisture, hail, frost and drought can rob a farmer of money, ruin well laid plans and sometimes put him out of business.

Crop insurance was first offered in Alberta in 1965 on a limited basis. However, since that time, the plan has been expanded to cover the entire province based upon individualized coverage for specific crops.

To be eligible for crop insurance in Alberta, farmers must cultivate any of the following crops: wheat, oats, barley, mixed grains, flax, rapeseed and processing beans, peas and corn.

In Alberta crop insurance is available through commercial agents scattered throughout the province.

Advertisements are sometimes placed in the local news media to remind farmers of the plan and the options open under the insurance program.

This type of insurance is a self-help plan which removes the concept of government grants in times of disaster and replaces it with a more businesslike and efficient approach.

Farmers thinking of participating in the plan may obtain additional information from their local agent or by writing the Alberta Hail and Crop Insurance Corporation, 1110 First St., S.W., Calgary.

All applications must be in by April 30.

Ryley

Mrs. Harold Vergette is spending a few days with her daughter Annette at Demarais.

If my memory serves me correctly it will be 23 years ago this weekend that we had that horrible blizzard.

Peter Winther of Copenhagen, Denmark is visiting with the Munkedal families.

Mrs. Kurach was the lucky winner of $50.00 worth of merchandise for entering the Westfair Crossword puzzle contest at E. Brown's Lucky Dollar Store.

Friends and relatives around Ryley were sad to hear of the accident of Ronald Koop. He is the 15 year old son of John and Elizabeth Koop of Tofield. He lost the lower part of his left leg in a power take-off accident.

It is nice to see Mrs. Irene Kast is out of hospital and feeling better again.

Mrs Esther Anderson is receiving sympathy following the passing of her mother, Mrs. Ida Jacobs.

Borghild Sundlie was the lucky winner of a coffee percolator in a draw at Ernest Brown's Lucky Dollar store.

Will computors alter educational system?

Mostly, teachers are concerned with teaching kids how to live in the world in which their fathers lived. Little recognition is given to the fact that we are plunging into a world which is as different from the world of our fathers as the world of Buck Rogers is from that of Neanderthal man.

Recently, I bought an electronic calculator small enough to slip into your shirt pocket. For $89.95, you can purchase one and figure out your income tax, calculate a true credit balance, or do a dozen other things. All you do is press a few buttons.

For a few people in specialized professions, arithmetic has been a central part of their adult life. For most of us, however, arithmetic has played a minor role. The time when we do the arithmetic is when we are in school. Once we leave school, we leave almost all algebra and calculus behind us. It follows, then, that those most in need of computer devices are students.

If we are serious about bringing the schools up to date, we should invest money in computers. A single computer in, say Victoria, could be rigged so each school in British Columbia could plug into it. Each student in B.C. would then have access to it. Forcing children to memorize multiplication tables and do arithmetic the slow step-by step old fashioned way is the equivalent of forcing me to understand the internal combustion engine before allowing me to drive. There is no longer any need to "learn" to figure out for yourself that 73,023 times 58 equals 4,234,888 or that 876 subtracted from 78,563 equals 77,687. All the student needs to learn is how to punch the right buttons on a machine.

Are we going to continue pretending in our schools that computers do not exist? Or are we going to tackle maturely the next set of problems, which consist of issues like: how do we integrate these devices into our educational institutions? What do we concentrate on now that the children can be freed from learning math through memorization and rote? And, finally, are we going to free our children or not?

We can do it. Any education minister who continues to pretend that we can't isn't worth his or her weight in decimal points.

"I S'RVIVED"
Tofield, March 18, 1974.
Dear Sir:

"I lived through it", the the snow of 1974. Last week, while shoveling out after the big snow blow, it reminded me of the Certificate that The Journal sent out to 25 montonians for living thru the cold Month of January, 1969.

Now, we the old timers living here in the Tofield Community, I say again, we lived through it.

I can remember many winters with impassible roads and high snow banks with no road equipment and yet, life went on In 1906-1907 we hear the snowfall was 94 inches but, then, we as kids enjoyed it very much, it was great fun tipping out of our sleighs and cutters, basking in the snow, where Hawaians bask in sunshine.

It may even be healthier as we seem to get older and older in our Country too, the snow banks get higher, the traffic a little slower, but, nevertheless Spring is here by the Calender.

Don't know if they made a mistake this year too. It may be a while before we see green grass, but we know it's there and soon the flowers will again shoot forth the beauty of summer, so, don't kid yourself. Patience is a virtue and 1974 will be in the past, and we will face the future, so cheer up.

God is still on the Throne and we are all in His hands. Better days ahead.

Sincerely,
Peter Stauffer

War Amps key service doing a large business

Most people seem to know that if a set of keys with a War Amps key tag attached is found anywhere in Canada it just has to be dropped into a mailbox and it will find its way back to the original owner. The Post Office sends them to the War Amps Key Tag Service in Toronto, who pay the postage due, then look up the number in their lists and return the keys to their owners. Keys with tags attached are received from all over the world.

What is not so widely known is that even many keys lost in Canada without a tag attached also find their way to the War Amps. The service, which has been operated since 1946, is so well known to the Post Office people they don't need the tag and address to know where to send them when they turn up in the mail boxes. Of course, there are no names on file for keys without tags, but of the hundreds of tagless key sets received each year about ten per cent are returned to owners who have got in touch with the key tag service. As with the tagged variety, there is no charge for the service, but owners usually show their appreciation by sending a donation.

Man is capable of landing on the moon and making electrical power from split atoms, but he still cannot duplicate the marvelous abilities of human limbs. The human hand, for example, can execute some 60 different movements. The best artificial hand yet devised cannot perform more than two or three essential functions.

The design of artificial legs, with the complexities of trying to duplicate knee joints and ankle joints, has baffled prosthesis experts since the days of the "peg leg". New European artificial legs give promise of improvement, though not ideal substitution.

Much of the impetus for better limb design and the adoption of improved types is from the War Amputations of Canada. Their funds come mainly from their annual key tag campaign.

Lamco gas has backing

Murray Finnerty, Executive Assistant to Alberta Agriculture Minister Hugh Horner, announces that the Provincial Cabinet has approved a guarantee under the provisions of the Department of Agriculture's Co-operative Marketing Associations Guarantee Act for borrowings of $385,000 by the Lamco Gas Co-op.

The Association is a wholly owned rural gas co-operative Program.

Lamco had the honor of being the first major gas co-op to be 'flared in', when Premier Peter Lougheed performed the ceremony last October 18th.

In commenting on the announcement, Mr Finnerty said, "Lamco Gas Co-op is rural development at its best, people helping themselves and government is always pleased to support such efforts".

APRILAID

The income tax help system and how to make it work for you.

As you know by now, we changed a lot of things last year. We gave you a new return, a new Guide, several new deductions and a few new rules. And quite honestly, we were more than a little concerned about your reaction to it all. (And very, very interested in your opinions.)

Well, now that we've had time to really look back at it and assess it honestly, it appears that most taxpayers did not seem to find it too difficult. The error rate did not accelerate greatly or change drastically from former years. Generally, most taxpayers seemed to handle their new returns fairly well.

However, Income Tax will never be the easiest or most enjoyable thing in anyone's life. And it will always present problems in some areas, for some people. That's expected and understandable.

So, what we want to do now is really work on those problem areas. And the best way to do that is to work with you, individually, on whatever part of Income Tax that causes you difficulty.

And that's what April Aid is all about. It's a help system and its primary objective is to ensure that whenever or whatever you need help with, you can get it. And know how to get it.

And this is how it works:

First. Your Guide is always the best answer when you have a problem. Read it. Follow it. It not only gives explanations, but in many cases, examples of just how to figure something out.

Second. If you're still confused or something just doesn't seem to work, phone. The number of your own District Taxation Office is below and at the end of that number there are people whose only job is to help taxpayers with problems, by telephone. And on Mondays and Tuesdays phone lines are open 'til 6 p.m. So don't hesitate.

If you live outside the office area, call the Operator and ask for Zenith 0-4000. She will automatically connect you to your own District Taxation Office. Remember, all calls are free, all questions are answered, and if you have queries, we want you to call.

Third. Some people prefer to talk things over in person. If you're one of them and have problems, drop by for free help. Anytime. The address of your District Taxation Office is below.

Fourth. Write. To the address below. Explain your problem as clearly as possible and include all information. (And your return address, please.) In return, we'll answer all letters as quickly and clearly as possible. Remember — if you need help, it's there. (And free). And all you have to do is ask.

April Aid.
The Income Tax help system.
Let's make it work for you.

Together, we can get it done.

News from Ministik and district

(Mrs Jan Roddick)

STORM HITS MINISTIK, March 21 — One of the worst storms in the district history swept through this area on Wednesday and Thursday spilling 15 inches of new snow on the already accumulated 63 inches.

Children were bussed home from schools by noon and did not return until Monday due to blocked roads.

Snow plow operators Bill Roddick and Clifford Herricks worked around the clock, with sometimes one foot on their combined shovel as foot, as they could clear it out. However, things are almost back to normal.

As I see it

by Walt Buck, M.L.A.

Throne Debate Closed

The shortest throne debate on record is a matter of concern.

The purpose of the debate, in my opinion, should be an enlargement of the governments outline of its forthcoming programs and the questioning of those programs by the opposition.

The debate was closed after Bob Clarke, Sacred House leader spoke followed by another opposition member, Charles Drain from Pincher Creek-Crowsnest. Two government back benchers followed and then the government acted for the question and it passed.

What Happened?

Our strategy was to have the cabinet ministers report to the Legislature. The Lougheed Government talks about open government. Open to Whom?? After three years in power surely we are entitled to hear from the executive council. The cabinet has increased from 17 up to 23 ministers. What is going on in their departments What are the new directions? Lets look at a couple of Departments.

Solicitor-General

A new department created last year with a minister's salary of $35,000 per year, and, as yet, no deputy minister. Two jails in the province, Spy Hill and Fort Saak. are without Wardens What is going on??

Consumers Affairs

A new department same large $5,000 per year salary for a new minister, a deputy appointed only recently. What has it done?? Nothing.

When Gordon Taylor from Drumheller asked what was being done about the hi cost of antifreeze, the reply was — "It's just some people hoarding the product "

This is not a very convincing reply from a new department, from a new minister

MINISTIK PHONE MEETING

A.G.T. people met with the people of the Ministik area to discuss the extended area phone coverage

People in the area indicated the reasons why they wished to have dare access to Edmonton and Sherwood Park while others wished to confine to Tofield for their central

A.G.T. officials explained why the area was outside the new 30 mile zone and would not be included in extended coverage Since M.L.A. Walt Buck felt that the people in the area should include their preference by ballot M.L.A Buck felt that the wishes of the people were being ignored and the only truly democratic way that preference could be known would be by a vote He stated the people in the area have never been asked what they wanted their wishes should not be ignored

The meeting ended with an indication that the matter will be pursued further

IN MEMORIAM

HJELTER — In loving memory of our son and brother, Harold James Hjelter, who passed away March 22nd, 1967
Twelve long and lonely years have passed,
Since our great sorrow fell.
The shock that we received that day,
No one can ever tell
It's a lonely life without you,
And sad has been the way.
For life without you is not the same;
Since you were called away
It was a sudden ending,
Too sudden to forget
For the ones who loved you dearly,
Are the ones who will never forget
—Lovingly remembered by Dad and Mom, Brothers and Sisters. 70p-30b

OGRODNICK—In loving memory of our mother and grandmother, Michalina Ogrodnick, who passed away March 18th, 1971.
It only takes a little space,
To write how much we miss you;
But it will take the rest of our life,
To forget the day we lost you
The beautiful things you did for us,
Live within our hearts each day;
And keep you near and dear to us,
Though you have passed away.
—Always remembered and sadly missed by Daughters and Sons. 30c-2034

BURKA — In loving memory of husband (sister and grandfather, Bill J. Burka who passed away March 29th, 1967
March comes with sad regrets,
It brings back a day we shall never forget
You were taken from us,
But our dear memories of you shall never die
We miss you more than anyone know,
As each day passes the emptiness grows
The tears we shed we can wipe away,
But the ache in our hearts will forever stay
—Always remembered and sadly missed by wife Anne and daughters, Olga, Susan and Marilyn 29c-301

(Mrs. Jim Roddick)

BURIAL HITS BEDROCK. March 21 — One of the worst storms in the district history swept through this area on Wednesday and Thursday spilling 15 inches of new snow on the already accumulated 63 inches.

Children were banned home from schools by noon and did not return until Monday due to blocked roads.

Snow plow operators Bill Roddick and Clifford Bierwirt worked around the clock, with sometimes snow filling in behind them as fast as they could clear it out. However, things are almost back to normal.

As I see it

Throne Debate Closed

The shortest throne debate on record is a matter of concern.

The purpose of the debate, in my opinion, should be an enlargement of the governments outline of its forthcoming programs and the questioning of those programs by the opposition.

The debate was closed after Bob Clarke, Sacred Heart leader spoke followed by another opposition member, Charles Drain from Fishing Lake Creek-Crowsnest. Two government back benchers following set the pattern the government asked for the question and it passed.

What Happened?

Our strategy was to have the cabinet ministers report to the Legislature. The Lieutenant Government talks about open government. Open to Whom?? After three years in power surely we are entitled to hear from the executive council. The cabinet has increased from 17 up to 22 minister. What is going on in their departments What are the new directions? Lets look at a couple of Departments.

Solicitor-General

A new department created last year with a minister's salary of $35,000 per year, and, as yet, no deputy minister. Two jails in the province, Spy Hill and Fort Saskatchewan without Wardens What is going on??

Consumers Affairs

A new department same large $5,5000 per year salary for a new minister, a deputy appointed only recently. What has it done?? Nothing.

When Gordon Taylor from Drumheller asked what was being done about the hi cost of antifreeze, the reply was — "It's just some people hoarding the product."

This is not a very convincing reply from a new department, from a new minister.

MINISTIK PHONE MEETING

A.G.T. people met with the people of the Ministik area to discuss the extended area phone coverage

People in the area indicated the reasons why they wished to have direct access to Edmonton and Sherwood Park while others wished to continue to have Tofield as their central.

A.G.T. officials explained why the area was outside the new 30 mile zone and would not be included in extended coverage service. M.L.A. Walt Buck felt that the people in the area should indicate their preference by ballot. M.L.A. Buck felt that the wishes of the people were being ignored and the only truly democratic way that preference could be shown would be by a vote. He urged the people in the area to have never been asked what they want and their wishes should not be ignored.

The area people voted with an indication that the matter will be pursued further.

The Ladies Club meeting of March to be held Wednesday was postponed until this Wednesday. As was the Community League meeting, also to be held this Wednesday March 20th.

The St. Patrick's dance was much enjoyed by all who attended Saturday evening at the hall. A buffet supper was served at midnight. Door prize was won by Mrs. Bill Reddick.

Mr. and Mrs. Pat Paterson and Keith Williams curled in the Legion bonspiel, Sunday held in Tofield.

A break on the power line near the Keith Williams home 9½ left power off for 3 and a half hours on Sunday afternoon. Some of the local snowmobilers beat down a path for them on the very deep snow, where they worked. This was one time they could be paid back a little for all the faithfull work they do to keep the power on.

Mr. and Mrs. Bill Reddick saw their daughter, Brenda of Calgary and Theresa Rowland of Tofield, off to Hawaii for a vacation, last Monday morning. They report the temperatures in the 80's and, when it rains, temperatures are still in the

HJELTEN — In loving memory of our son and brother Harold James Hjelter, who passed away March 22nd 1962
Twelve long and lonely years have passed,
Since our great sorrow fell.
The shock that we received that day.
No one can ever tell.
It's a lonely life without you,
And sad has been the way,
For life without you is not the same.
Since you were called away.
It was a sudden ending,
Too sudden to forget.
For the ones who loved you dearly,
Are the ones who will never forget
—Lovingly remembered by Dad and Mom, Brothers and Sisters. 30p-400

OGRODNICK—In loving memory of our mother and grandmother Michaelina Ogrodnick, who passed away March 18th, 1971
It only takes a little space,
To write how much we miss you;
But it will take the rest of our life,
To forget the day we lost you
The beautiful things you did for us,
Live within our hearts each day;
And keep you near and dear to us,
Though you have passed away
—Always remembered and sadly missed by Daughter and Sons. 30c-2024

BURKA — In loving memory of husband, father and grandfather, Bill J. Burka, who passed away March 20th, 1967:
March comes with sad regrets,
It brings back a day we shall never forget
You were taken from us,
But our dear memories of you shall never die
We miss you more than anyone knows,
As each day passes the emptiness grows.
The tears we shed we can wipe away,
But the ache in our hearts will forever stay.
—Always remembered and sadly missed by wife Annie and daughters, Olga, Susan and Marilyn 30c-401

Kinsella School closes and Bruce might follow

A meeting was held last night (Wednesday) in Bruce as the School Committee outlined the possible future of the school to local ratepayers.

Over fifty people turned out for the meeting to hear the suggestion that grades seven and eight should be taken out of the Bruce School and, as well, the possibility exists that the school itself should be closed in the near future

After explaining the facts, ratepayers in the Bruce area were told to think the matter over and send their decision through a delegation, to the next regular meeting of the School Committee

Members of the School Committee will be going to Kinsella on Friday night to pass along information to the ratepayers of that area as to why their school is being closed

The meeting will start at 8:00 p.m. The meeting was originally scheduled to have been held on March 20th but, had to be postponed because of road and weather conditions. As of this weekend, the County of Beaver will not have a superintendent of schools as Martin Bruce's resignation becomes effective Mr Bruce submitted his resignation to become an administration consultation with the Department of Education in Red Deer

Sixteen persons have applied for Mr Bruce's position This total was narrowed to six applicants, all of whom were scheduled for interviews today (Thursday)

Details of the foregoing and other interesting items may be found in the minutes of the School Committee meeting published in this issue

Ice carnival is set to go

There will be two performances of "It's a Small World" with 700 reserved seats for each show to accommodate the expected crowds.

A Carnival Queen will be crowned at the Saturday evening intermission by Andy Hedberg and will be presented to the Sunday afternoon audience during intermission.

Club Instructor, Marilyn Schaffer will be dancing a solo at both performances

Tofield School sets "P-T" day

In the Tofield School Friday, April 5, has been selected as the date of the second Parent-Teacher conference of the 1973-1974 school year. Examinations are now in progress in preparation for the third report cards of the year which will be distributed on Wednesday, April 3.

Except in cases where requests for special times have been received by the school secretary, Mrs. Dodds, the interviews will follow the same schedule as the first interviews in November

Lunch will be served by Mrs Feshaug in the library, so that parents may enjoy a social hour following or between interviews

Parents are urged to take advantage of Parent-Teacher Day to discuss their children's progress and problems with the teachers concerned The attendance rate at Parent-Teacher interviews has always been approximately 80%, and it is hoped that attendance on April 5, will equal or exceed that figure

A tour of the Legislature

Dear Sir:

The Tofield Golden Club had a very enjoyable and educational trip to visit the legislature now in its spring session, on an invitation from our M.L.A., Dr. Walter Buck.

Our very capable driver, Jim Ingram at the wheel of the Lions Club bus, transported 39 passengers of Senior Citizens on the tour along with Mr. and Mrs. Stinson, Don Roth, Lester Severson and Herman Lawson whom motored up in cars.

Arriving there, we were met at the door by a guide and Dr Buck. Then we were lined up for our picture by a photographer and also taken to the cafeteria for a lunch.

On the fifth floor we saw the Centennial Carillon, a gift from the Province to the people of Alberta to mark 1967 Centennial year, it makes the sound of 305 bells a wonderpiece. Afterwards we were taken to the Legislative Assembly chamber, listening in on the business session. This was very enjoyable, from there for an interview with Mr. Kitchen about our Senior Citizens Home, explaining our situation.

We then went on to see the Provincial Library and seeing the beautiful architecture which is a marvelous masterpiece put up in the early 1900's.

Hope this land mark will never be demolished, it surely is the pride of our city of Edmonton.

So again, on behalf of all of us taking the tour, I want to thank Dr Buck for inviting us and the guide for showing us around The safe driving of our driver, Jim

We all enjoyed it, a day well spent

Moved the School Committee direct that staffing for the 1974-75 school year include engaging sufficient teachers of the fine arts so as to offer programs in one of, two of, or all of art, music and dramatics in schools presently not offering such programs.

Moved that instruction in band be offered in schools at the junior high school level on a County-wide basis if interest by the students warrants and if qualified staff can be obtained.

Moved that consideration be given to entering into a contract with the Child Development Centre for the 1974-75 school year on a contract for fee basis for specific, difficult cases and that investigation be conducted into engaging a specialist in Elementary Learning Disabilities who would also have some responsibility for providing counselling services at the elementary school level.

Moved that the Superintendent of Schools carry on discussions with the District Agriculturist, District Home Economist, Medical Officer of Health, Recreation Administrator, Agricultural Fieldman, and other persons involved in adult education programs with a view toward creating a Local Further Education Council to offer adult and extension courses in the County beginning in the fall of 1974.

Moved that community library boards in the County and Town and Village Councils be approached with regard to the possibilities of establishing school-community libraries to be housed in the existing school libraries under a joint-use agreement between library boards or councils and the School Committee.

The question of the continued operation of Kinsel's School came up for discussion. Enrolment projections for September 1, 1974 revealed that Kinsella pupils in Grades 1-6 could be accommodated in Viking School with no increase in staff at Viking. This would result in a net decrease in staff of two teachers who could be used to better advantage in broadening the fine arts programs in other schools. It appeared doubtful that the School Committee could continue to staff Kinsella with two teachers.

It was felt that a public meeting should be held at Kinsella to discuss this matter with the parents and public. For this meeting material should be prepared outlining likely educational benefits for the pupils, possible school bus routes including pick-up and dropoff times, the possible uses for present school plant, the financial implications, and any other pertinent information.

Moved that the School Committee go on record as favouring the closing of Kinsella School at the end of the 1973-74 school year with pupils to be bussed to Viking beginning Sept. 1, 1974; that a public meeting to discuss the closure of Kinsella School be held on March 20th in the Kinsella School gymnasium and that all members of the School Committee and administrative staff attend the meeting.

The present enrolment at Bruce School is 80 pupils with a staff of 8.4 teacher equivalents providing services to these pupils. Projected enrolment for September 1974 is 75 pupils. A reduction in teaching staff for the 1974-75 school year appeared inevitable which raised the matter of the continued operation of the junior high school there. In addition, the number of pre-school age children in the Bruce area was so small that in several years it appeared that it would be extremely difficult to operate at reasonable cost, an adequate program in Grades 1-8.

Moved that a public meeting be held in the Bruce gymnasium on Wednesday, March 27th (yesterday) for the purpose of discussing the removal of grades seven and eight from Bruce School and informing the public on the likely future of Bruce School and, that all members of the School Committee and administrative staff attend the meeting

Moved that the School Committee approve the request of Kissenger Petroleums Ltd. to lease the petroleum and natural gas rights for two years on one acre in the S.E. one quarter 17-40-17-W.4 (Sali Lake School Site) for

1) Initial consideration pay rental of $200.00

2) Annual delay rental pay ment of $25.00

3) A gross royalty of twelve and one half per cent payable in the event commercial production is obtained and sold.

Moved that the School Committee approve the appointment of Mrs. Dorothea Mathews as part-time teacher in the Educational Opportunities Fund program at the Halden School for the period January 30th, to June 28th, 1974; this position is the equivalent of two days per week.

A questionnaire was received from the Alberta School Trustees Association concerning the

Ryley is investigating chance of kindergarten

A meeting was held on March 5nd at 7:30 p.m. in the Ryley School Library. Mr. Bruce and Mr Robson were speaking to a group of parents about the purpose and goals of Early Childhood Services, the help that is available from the school board with busing, the grants that are available from the Government ($200 per child), and the teachers qualifications, etc.

The Department of Education will provide Early Childhood Consultants to assist local operators to plan, implement and evaluate their programs.

The plan is the response of the Government of Alberta to the need to assist parents in improving the quality of life of children and to recognizes that downward extension of schooling to conventional Kindergartens is not the only or best way to meet the needs of preschool children, and that in many cases health and nutritional services must be given priority consideration.

This meeting was held to find out if the parents from Ryley and District are interested in ESC

Lieut. Col. Macleod...
Respected as a Soldier.
Honoured as a Diplomat.
Trusted as a Man.
Lieut. Col. James Farquharson Macleod was left with a small detachment of men on the banks of the Belly River with orders to build a fort, treat with the chiefs of the Blackfoot Nation and stop the whiskey trade. Almost at once he arrested and fined a group of whiskey traders in the vicinity. He told the Indians that the Mounties would protect them providing that they obeyed the Queen's laws. He kept his promise. He told the settlers that the old days were over, that they would have to obey the Queen's Law. He kept his promise. Macleod dealt so fairly with the Indians that Bulls Head of the Peigans honoured him with his own name . . . Stamixotokon. In 1876 Macleod became the Second Commissioner of the Force and one year later, September 22, 1877, was present at the signing of Treaty Number Seven between the Government and the Blackfoot Nation. Lieutenant Colonel Macleod . . . a great man in a history one hundred years proud.
From our proud past, the promise of our future.

School Transportation Study) The questionnaire was completed at this time and it was moved that the completed questionnaire be returned to the Alberta School Trustees Association.

A letter was presented from Mrs. Marvin Lehman requesting that the School Committee reconsider its present policy of having the schools open when school buses do not operate due to poor road conditions.

After considerable discussion it was agreed by the School Committee that the present policy has operated quite effectively and that there appeared to be no compelling reasons to change since all urban pupils could attend and those from the rural areas who could attend had the right to receive the education that could be provided on those days.

After this discussion the Superintendent of Schools read a letter of reply that he had written to Mrs. Lehman in which he had outlined the factors that had been considered with the present policy had been adopted.

Moved that the School Committee receive and file the letter from Mrs. Lehman, concern in the letter of reply written by the Superintendent of Schools, request permission of Mrs. Lehman to publish her letter and the Superintendent's reply in the two local newspapers.

1. The use of MacKenzie School for recreation through the Local Initiatives Program. Funds and possible restoration to be requested of the School Committee.

Hyndman announces new 'school building' rules

New regulations incorporating the "Core School" and "Community School" concepts for school buildings were announced recently by Education Minister, Lou Hyndman.

Among the important changes are:

- 10% increase of approved payments to between $17.50 and $18.50 per square foot depending on building size;
- payment by the province of costs of relocating portables;
- easing of utilization requirements in rapid growth areas to permit better advance planning;
- incentives to school systems to develop innovative ideas for core school design;
- inclusion of children in Early Childhood Services (ECS) programs when determining space requirements;
- provision for a totally relocatable school to serve 75 or more "ECS to Grade IV" students in new subdivisions;
- provision for a permanent core with plug-in portables in new subdivisions to serve 150 or more "ECS to Grade IV" students;
- provision of basic space for school-community libraries and other community use facilities.

"The new regulations accommodate the needs of developing areas where school populations are increasing", Mr. Hyndman commented. "The increased allowances should also permit most boards to build without incurring substantial excess costs to the taxpayers". "We will continue government policy of providing financial support and regulation to ensure quality construction while leaving the critical decisions to be made at the local level by responsible school boards", Mr. Hyndman concluded.

News from Ministik and district

(Mrs. Jim Roddick)

MINISTIK, March 28 — One of our items of conversation these days still is the weather, and it's tricks. Thursday another fall of snow, lashed by strong winds, filled recently opened roads leaving many with no way out. Snow removal machines are finding it a difficult task as there is no room for more snow. A spring thaw is eagerly looked forward to.

To our Ryley correspondent - Yes, your memory serves you right when you mentioned last blizzard took place 23 years ago on March 15 and 16, 1951.

The hockey season is coming to a close for our local coaches and players. The Pee Wee 'C' team which Baden Bowerman coached in the Strathcona County League lost out in the finals by a score of 5 to 3 to the Wye team, after a most successful season. Brent Bowerman played on this team.

Mr. and Mrs. Pat Paterson and Bill Roddick have been busy these last Monday and Wednesday evenings taking a first aid course required by County of Strathcona employees.

Farmers should study management strategies

Agricultural outlook information projects a continuing strong demand and relatively high prices for most agricultural commodities, particularly in the grains sector. It is estimated that two consecutive world-wide record crops are required to restore world grain reserves, says the Extension Division of Alberta Agriculture.

While "King Wheat" has regained the western crop's throne, Alberta farmers should plan their cropping production strategies based on long term stability - - namely on a balanced and diversified crops and livestock program.

The opportunity to increase production and profits need not be passed up in the short term. Consider the following checklist to see if it applies to your particular farming operation and take out the sharp pencil to do some paper farming. It costs much less to lose money on paper.

The Extension Division, suggests farmers consider the following points:

(1) 'Time is Money'

Timing is always important, but is more crucial this year. Check equipment, order repairs now and avoid lost field time when hours count. The same goes for placing orders for seed, seed cleaning, fertilizer supplies, fuel and other inputs. Take delivery NOW if possible. Give suppliers lead time.

(2) 'Your Friendly Banker'

Establish your line of credit for the year's operating expenses. Even with higher costs for all inputs including labour, machinery, fertilizer, seed, etc., higher prices and improved margins in the crops sector, may well justify increased expenditures and investment. On major capital expenditures don't overlook used equipment bargains and where possible, lease land rather than buying it.

(3) 'Wall to Wall Crops'

Seriously consider your cropping and rotation program. In the short run, summerfallow may be drastically reduced. Add crops rather than substituting crops. Maintain existing forage stands and intensify production on all acreage through cultural practices. (i.e.) improved varieties, fertilizer use, weed control, etc. We need to maintain our acreage of rapeseed, barley, forage and vegetable crops.

(4) 'Cows and Sows'

Hang in there with those livestock enterprises. The pendulum is bound to swing back again, and it may be sooner than most predict! Today's arithmetic would have you send them down the road, but consider future years' insurance and stability. Grasser programs and growing one's own feed are part of the answer for some. If the current plateau of feed costs persists, a new and higher plateau for livestock and livestock product prices, is inevitable.

(5) 'Feed and Fodder'

The past fall and winter have left us with some harsh lessons. Every alternative and innovation must be explored to reduce feed costs and preserve hay quality. Silage and high moisture grain programs combine feeding and weed control systems in higher rainfall areas. Processed alfalfa pellets, cubes and grain and straw combinations have a place. In the irrigated areas, corn silage is a must to reduce costs of feedlot grains and wintering rations, says the Division.

Did you know...

Did you know that it costs Alberta farmers in the neighborhood of $4,500,000 annually to transport dockage to terminal elevators and to have this dockage removed from their cereals and oilseeds before they are exported.

According to the Alberta department of agriculture's weed control specialist, Stan Powers, farmers in this province shipped 235,000,000 bushels of cereal grains and 23,500,000 bushels of oilseeds to coastal terminals during the 1970-71 crop year. He reports that the dockage in the cereal grains averaged 2.5 per cent and 13 per cent in the oilseeds.

This means that Alberta farmers shipped 5,500,000 bushels or 136,000 tons of weed seed with their cereals and 3,000,0 0 bushels or 81,000 tons with their oilseeds. To haul this volume of dockage would require 5400 freight cars.

Shipping costs for the 216,000 tons of dockage amounted to $890,000, while the cost of removing it before the cereals and oilseeds were exported amounted to $3,500,000. Apart from these costs, farmers who shipped cereal grains and oilseeds with a high percentage grade losses.

The average annual dockage from cereal grains and oilseeds shipped from the three prairie provinces to terminal elevators at Thunder Bay and the West Coast during the last five years amounted to 487,000 tons. The annual cost is around $2,000,000. To move this volume of dockage alone would require a total of 12,000 freight cars or 33 cars a day for every day of the year.

Recreation facilities are studied for Beaver

During the past three or four years, there has been considerable talk and planning of major capital facility development within the boundaries of the County of Beaver.

To help you all, as citizens, understand what has been taking place, we feel that the following information should be placed before you, by way of the press and during our planned open public meetings. To date, however, only two of these meetings have been held one in Ryley and one in Viking. Othrs have had to be cancelled.

Holden will host one at the Community Hall on Friday, March 29th, at 8:00 p.m. and Kinsella, on Monday, April 1st, at the Community Hall at 8:00 p.m. Bruce and Tofield dates will be announced later.

The following information will be informative and bring you up to date.

1. All authorities participate in the recommended proposal to make it operate for the complete County:

Town of Viking, Town of Tofield, Village of Holden, Village of Ryley, County of Beaver No. 9.

2. Capital Facility Development mill rate be set at three mills both Urban and Rural.

3. For Capital Facility Development, monies be broken down as follows:

90% for Major Facilities, such as Arenas, Swimming Pools, Cultural Centres, etc. and 10% for County Capital Projects, such as School Joint Development of use, and Community Halls, Ball Diamonds, etc., in the Rural Areas.

4. Preamble—

a) To include rural or other groups making applications to the Regional Recreation and Parks Board and how to do so.

b) Major Facilities to be mainly in Towns and Villages, as agreed to by all Governing Authorities in the Agreement.

c) Complete costs and plans of work, construction and type of facilities—their use and costs to be prepared and presented prior to starting on any work of a facility.

d) Perhaps something of an amount or scale (of money) to be included for the Rural Communities, should be laid down (in clear terms).

e) Only one Major Facility be approved in each Governing Authority in any one ten (10) year Development Period

5. Capital Facility Funds should be available to all of the County, but this should cause no alteration to the $20,000.00 allocated to the two Hamlets, Bruce and Kinsella.

6. Limits of Amounts of Loans/Grants.

Limited maximum amount of $70,000.00 be set for each Governing Authority, such as Viking, Holden, Ryley and Tofield, and the Hamlets of Bruce and Kinsella be set at a maximum o f$20,000.00 each for a Facility they may require.

PRIORITIES

The same priority be used and continued on from the 1970 Recreation Development Plan.

(a) Tofield
(b) Viking
(c) Holden
(d) Ryley

AGREEMENT AND TERM

An agreement for ten (10) years on Capital Facility Development be drawn up as a separate agreement, apart from the Recreation and Parks Administration and Program Agreement, with no opting out by any party until a ten (10) year Program of Development has been completed.

RESPONSIBILITY
Funds (Finances)

1. Each Governing Authority, Community Association, Group, Service Clubs, etc., are to be responsible to raise 15% of the total Capital Cost of the Facility or Project. This is to be direct donations, not including grants.

2. Each Authority, Service Club, Association will be responsible for all current operational and maintenance costs of a Facility or Project.

In the past two years, we have introduced Performing Arts Tours of Concerts, Choirs, Choruses, Singers, etc.

A Steering Committee is working on setting up an Arts Committee, as an arm of the Regional Board, to assist with the Arts and Music, so that it may be possible to have an Arts and Music Festival this year.

Hopefully, we can move into an area of setting up an Athletic Committee, as an arm of the Regional Board, as well as a Community Planning Committee.

We ask everyone's help, guidance and suggestions in all County-wide endeavors.

April canvass planned for Ryley's swim pool

A canvass by the Beaver Heritage and Agricultural Society will be conducted sometime in April to raise funds to build a swimming pool complex in Ryley.

The complex will contain a pool 35' wide by 25 metres long completely equipped with racing lanes, two diving boards, ropes, underground and overhead lighting with all approved safety features. The depth of the pool will range from 2' 6" to 11' deep.

The building will be 108' in length and 68' wide. The control section will contain two large dressing rooms, a foyer, office, staffroom, first-aid room and shower facilities. It will also have space for the machine and control rooms with a separate outside room for chemicals

Cost of the project for materials, machinery and lighting - $150,000.00; Labour - $50,000.00.

The Society anticipates grants totaling $160,000.00. The balance is to be raised by donations and contributions

All donations are income tax deductible and anyone wishing to make a donation to this project, may leave their contribution with Ray Charbonneau at the Treasury Branch in Ryley.

Oldtimers' tourney will end hockey year

Hockey action at the Tofield Arena will wind up, this year, with a six team Oldtimers' Hockey tournament.

Action begins Friday night with a double-header, featuring the Tofield Midget team playing a league final with Fort Saskatchewan, at 7:00 p.m. followed by the first tournament game, with Tofield opposing Lamont.

Saturday night's schedule has the two Tofield Pee Wee teams in an exhibition match at 7:30 p.m. Then, at 8:30 p.m. Fort Saskatchewan Oldtimers (Buck's Buckeroos) will play Hat-Trick Harry's St. Albert team.

The winners of the Friday and Saturday games will meet at 1:00 p.m. Sunday afternoon, in a semi-final game. Then the other semi-final match has Daysland up against Ken Macauly and the Ottewell Oldtimers (who expect to have Glenn Hall in goal for part of the game.)

The final game goes at 7:30 p.m. between the winners of the two previous games.

Oldtimer hockey differs from other leagues in that deliberate body contact or a slap shot will earn the offender a penalty.

Players must be 35 or over, except, each team is allowed three players 30 or over, as long as they have been out of organized hockey for at least 5 years.

Standing ovation given at annual ice carnival

by Faye Hulkovich

The youthful performers of Tofield Skating Club's second ice revue, "It's A Small World", were awarded standing ovations by the capacity crowds of both performances March 30th and 31st in the Tofield Arena.

In saluting Alberta's R. C. M. P. Centennial, Corporal Arnold Hildebrand and Constable Dennis Shwaykowski accompanied the presentation of the Canadian Flag and club banner by Lionel Williams, Gary Borton and Dean Wiens

A large backdrop with travel posters depicting various nations gaily introduced the international theme with colorful and appropriate costumes and applicable music for each area represented by the skaters.

Among the presentations by the 156 club members were kangaroos from Australia hopping and skating to "Tie Me Kangaroo Down, Mate", 16 traditionally-clad skaters from China and two Royal Canadian escorts attending the numerous candidates for "Miss Small World". Canada was there also in the form of the power-skating 'All Stars'.

During Saturday's intermission the Princesses, Debbie Miskew, Susan Sorken, Debbie Walker and Debbie Kronewitt, were escorted onto the ice by a representative of their sponsors. Andy Heiberg, President of the Agricultural Society, crowned Queen Kronewitt and presented her with flowers and a suitcase from the Tofield Skating Club. The three Princesses all received corsages and a charm bracelet each from the Skating Club.

Queen Kronewitt made the draw for the silver dollars with E. Sagmoen receiving $15.00, Bob Moos receiving $10.00 and Mrs. M. Astley receiving $5.00. The girls were all presented to the Sunday audience during intermission.

U.S.A. was represented by the square dance group complete with four squares. The Mexican Hat Dance then set the mood for warmer climates, followed by the Arabian belly-dancers and Hawaiian hula-dancers whose costumes effectively depicted those two areas.

The Spanish Matador had many narrow escapes; however, the clowns kept the bull in line with their antics and the Matador came out unscathed

Each of Holland, Ireland and England presented interesting routines followed by the 21-strong Scottish regiment syncopating to the bag pipes.

The performance by guest artist, Wanda Johanson received hearty applause as did Heather William's solo and a duet by Heather Allan and Ed Donnan.

The entire skating group lined the ice to watch and dream while their club instructor Marilyn Schaffler performed her enthusiastically-received solo; and, from there, went into the grand finale

Bob Lysio, commentator for each of the two shows, called Club President, Mrs. Karen Bruce and Club Secretary-Treasurer, Mrs. Yvonne Borton onto the ice to be presented with gifts from the Club by Bonnie Baergen and Sheila Worton. Mrs. Bruce and Mrs Borton planned and organized "It's A Small World" and kept everything running smoothly behind the scenes. Mrs. Bruce also helped with skating lessons, becoming instructor whenever weather conditions kept Marilyn Schaffler away. Marilyn and Wanda were then presented gifts from the Club by Mrs. Bruce and Mrs. Borton. The mothers of the skaters were given and deserve a lot of credit for sewing all of the attractive costumes and also for supervising during the season

This ice revue, as Tofield's second, was a real achievement for the instructors and students backed by exertion, effort and enthusiasm on everyone's part, and was surely the show of the year!

Mielimakas celebrate "golden" anniversary

by Mrs. G. H. Taylor

Saturday, March 23rd, Mr. and Mrs. Lud Mielimaka celebrated their Silver Wedding anniversary, when Rev. J. Ratij celebrated mass and the couple renewed their marriage vows. Greg Mielimaka and Donald Stokowksi served mass. The choir directed by Peter Mielimaka sang the hymn "Come Holy Ghost".

Lud and Olga were married February 20th, 1949 in the Holy Ghost Catholic Church in Holden, and six of their original attendants were present for the occasion. After Mass, a banquet and dance were held in Holden Community Hall for about 275 guests.

The head table was centered with a beautiful decorated three-tiered wedding cake.

Seated at the head table were bridesmaids, Joyce Stokowksi, Helen Budijab, Anne Maze and Carol Makarowski; best-men, Peter Tkachuk, Steven Stokowksi, Joe Mielimaka and Joe Bilyk; Rev. J. Ratij; daughter and son-in-law, Robert and Joyce Wilkinson and two daughters, Sandra and Brenda; parents, Mrs Stanley Mielimaka, Mrs Mary Zuzak; Anne and Pete Mielimaka; Josie and Peter Friend and brother-in-law, Don Collins of Vancouver, B. C.; Mary and Mike Zowtuk and two godmothers, Mrs. Tony Mielimaka and Mrs. T. Chorney.

Grace was offered by Rev. Father Ratij, at the conclusion of supper. Their only daughter, Joyce Wilkinson, extended her thank-you to her parents and welcomed and thanked all the guests.

Mike Zowtuk, M.C. called upon Father Ratij to extend greetings commemorating the occasion, also Matt Helfrich who spoke on behalf of the Parish and Ladies Aid. A toast to the Bride and Groom was proposed by five year old Sandra Ann Wilkinson, grand-daughter of Lud and Olga.

The many beautiful gifts and cards were displayed after opening, and also a wedding photo taken on their wedding day 25 years ago.

The wedding cake was later cut and passed around by Lud and Olga.

Dancing was then enjoyed during the evening and a delicious buffet lunch served by the ladies.

Mr. and Mrs. Lud Mielimaka thanked all their relatives, friends, Father Ratij, all who attended the celebration and who helped in any way to make it such a memorable evening, those who sent cards, flowers and gifts, the kindness and thoughtfulness was greatly appreciated.

Parliament Hill report by Don Mazankowski, MP

The commencement of the second session of Canada's 29th Parliament on February 26th followed the usual tradition of the reading of the Speech from the Throne with Canada's new Governor General Jules Leger presiding.

The Speech from the Throne outlines in a general way the thrust of the Governments legislative program for the coming session and the debate that flows therefrom gives members of Parliament the opportunity to make speeches varying anywhere from fish to grain or from economics to streaking.

As a westerner I was naturally pleased to see a great deal of emphasis placed on agriculture. While some of the goals and objectives may be rather lofty and beyond the scope of reality it is cunning to note that after six years the Trudeau government finally recognized the prominence of the agriculture industry and the fact that as agriculture goes, so goes the Canadian economy generally.

The government stated, "It is clear that this country's production must be increased. Many of us find this statement incredible when we consider that only a few short years ago the same government was paying farmers not to grow wheat, paying egg producers to slaughter their laying hens, penalizing dairy farmers who produced beyond their quota, or produced anything at all. Moreover, it was this same government which developed a policy of encouraging farmers to disengage from farming with little or nothing offered in the way of encouragement to our young people to enter farming or to take over the family enterprise.

Among some of the things designed to assist agriculture we are promised - - —an agricultural stabilization plan to encourage rational production decisions. Guarantees against unduly low prices to producers coupled with guarantees against unduly high prices to consumers, how's that for being all things to all people?

—a prairie grain market insurance plan

—assistance to young farmers to provide sufficient financial incentives to engage in farming

—improvements in Canadian grain rail transportation capabilities

—intentions to increase the production of livestock necessary to provide Canadian and export markets.

One cannot refrain from commenting on the question of grain transportation since it has deteriorated probably to its lowest ebb in Canadian history. During this time the Minister of Transport concedes that transportation is in a mess, that the government has no Transportation Policy, and that he has no control over the railways. He states that even if the railways were paid more to carry wheat, he doubts that they would do it.

This is a very curious admission when one considers the fact that it was a Liberal Government which brought forth the National Transportation Act in 1967, which forms the basis of national policy. It was a Liberal Government which has been charged with the responsibility of administering the Act to this very day and, up until just recently this same Minister ardently defended their so-called policy. So much so that in Calgary, during the Western Economic Conference he proclaimed "Our total system represents perhaps one of the best if not the best in the world". Anyway, Mr Marchand says now we're going to have a new Transportation policy sooner rather than later, he hopes. What this policy will be no one really knows however he does speak of nationalizing the CPR and getting more directly involved in the management of the railways.

Mention is made also of incentives to increase livestock production. Of all the sectors in the agricultural industry, none is more uncertain and chaotic than the beef industry, due mainly to heavy imports from the U.S. As I write this article major stockyards have been forced to suspend trading due to a heavy influx of slaughter cattle at yards and markets. Twelve cents per pound subsidy has been nullified by the diversion of prices and the Government has admitted that its subsidy plan has failed to work. Much of the heavy flow of slaughter cattle has been caused by the termination of A3 and A4 grades of beef on April 1st and April 8 respectively. In order to meet the deadlines for receipt of the subsidy, the market has been overly taxed with these grades, accumulating during the period of depressed prices, causing a burdensome backlog in yards, markets and feedlots.

We have asked that this deadline be extended to ease the situation and that A3 and A4 grades remain eligible until the market returns to a more orderly and profitable level. Hopefully, order and stability and profitability will be restored in the industry soon, since this represents one of the major components of our agriculture industry.

I will report to you again soon on the subject of federal government spending.

County Council briefs

Notice was received from the Alberta Association of Municipal Districts and Counties, advising that the Spring Convention will be held April 3rd and 4th in Edmonton. Moved that the entire Council and the Secretary Treasurer be authorized to attend this convention.

A letter was received from His Harries and Associates Ltd. advising of an increase in staff rates for assessments.

A letter was received from the Department of Highways and Transport regarding the automatic protection of three crossings of Secondary Roads in the County of Beaver. The crossing of Secondary Road No 855 within the Village of Holden will be considered when a letter of agreement is received from the Village. The crossings at Bruce and Kinsella require a letter of agreement from the County of Beaver for the cost of maintenance.

Moved that a letter be sent to the Department of Highways indicating that the County is prepared to assume the maintenance costs on the Bruce and Kinsella crossings and 50 percent of the maintenance costs on the Holden crossing.

Correspondence was received from the Department of Highways and Transport in connection with the closing of road allowance N.W. 23 and S.W. 26-51-20-W4. All requested reports concerning the bylaws for this closure have been received and the following matters are brought to the county's attention a) The Department's Planning Branch Engineers object to the proposed closure and sale of the road allowance until the final alignment for S.R 632 had been determined. This alignment and future access control for Highway No. 14 to Freeway Standard may have some bearing on development of this road allowance.

b) The district engineer has stated it is feasible to construct a roadway within the north-south road allowance, although a 15 foot fill would be necessary on the railway approaches, this would not hinder construction of a higher standard roadway. It is further reported that the east-west road allowance, adjoining the south boundaries of Sections 26 and 27 is not open, and some concern should be given for provision of public access to the north-east portion of the S.E.¼, Section 27, north of the railway tracks.

c) The Fish and Wildlife Division of the Department of Lands and Forests have no objection to the closure providing the road allowance remains in its natural state, no odd corners such as these, especially close to water bodies, quote, "afford excellent cover for many wildlife forms", unquote. Moved that this letter be received and dealt with when more information is available

Vince Mulloy from Torchlight Consulting and Gerald Alliot, Public Works, Paconau, attended the meeting at this time. Mr. Alliot reported on the condition of the Public Works construction equipment. It was pointed out that it will be necessary for all County equipment to have roll-over protection by 1975. Moved that the County of Beaver make provision for an expenditure of $50,000.00 for roll-over equipment in 1974.

The Secretary-Treasurer advised that he had been contacted by Reinjes Engineering Ltd. requesting permission for pipeline crossing municipal roads. A subsequent letter had been sent to Reinjes Engineering Ltd. authorizing those crossings.

Moved that County Council concur in the action taken by the Secretary-Treasurer.

A request for the subdivision of the S. E. 15-49-20-W4 was received. The subdivision called for a total of five parcels to be created.

Moved that this request be refused as it is the County of Beaver's policy not to allow subdivision below 40 acres.

A request for the subdivision of the S. W. 23-48-11-W4 was received. Moved that this application be approved provided the County is not required to provide access roads to the subdivided areas.

A letter was received from the Alberta Department of Environment regarding a flooding problem on the W½ 30-49-15-W4. Moved that this letter be received and tabled for more information.

A letter was received from the Village of Holden inquiring as to the possibility of hiring County equipment for the purpose of grading approximately five blocks on Main Street and applying thereto a three-inch deep coal mix asphalt surface. Moved that this letter be received and referred to Gerald Alliot.

The natural gas Payment Equalization Plan.

Think of it as a savings account.

You know how a savings account works, you save up in order to cover later expenses. Well, that's just how our Payment Equalization Plan works. When you sign up with us for Payment Equalization we estimate your annual natural gas consumption and divide the cost by twelve. Then we bill you an equal amount every month. This way, you build up a reserve in the summer to take care of the higher costs of winter heating. During the year we keep track of your actual consumption and adjust any difference every twelve months.

P.E.P. has another advantage too: every month when you work out your budget you know that at least one bill will be the same every time . . . our bill, the one for the lowest natural gas rates in Canada. Payment Equalization, think of it as your natural gas layaway plan.

Helping you look after your natural gas budget.

Matador on skates

Alberta Hospital gets approved homes program

In March 1973, the Approved Homes Programme, an important addition to the existing treatment and rehabilitation services from Alberta Hospital, Ponoka, became fully operational in the Central Region of Alberta.

The programme is primarily directed towards the provision of homes and a normal family life in the community for those people who are now ready to leave the hospital but who, for various reasons, are unable to return to their own homes or families.

The philosophy of the programme is one whereby the guests placed within the homes, will receive the warmth, understanding and acceptance that is usually afforded to other family members, as well as any required individual personal services indicated. Proprietors are carefully selected from those people in the community who have indicated a desire to participate in the programme and who will be able to provide such an atmosphere as well as room, board and some personal services for their guests, for which they will receive adequate remuneration.

Of vital importance to the programme is the introduction into the community of professional staff, which includes doctors, social workers and community nurses, who will provide needed follow-up services such as ongoing supervision, guidance and support for guests, proprietors and families when required. As more homes become available additional follow-up staff and services will be included according to the need.

Many of the people returning to a normal life in the community will require understanding, acceptance and assistance in relearning social skills, not only from approved home proprietors families and follow-up teams but also from interested, concerned and friendly people within the community who may help them on the path towards an independed and productive life.

Similar programmes have been carried out successfully in other provinces and countries and the Approved Home Programme is now proving successful in the Province of Alberta. However, more involvement from interested people in the community is still required to make our programme the best.

For further information with regard to this programme, call: Ponoka 783-3315 or write to:

Don't put all your eggs in one basket!

Putting All Your Eggs In One Basket or Putting All Your Farm into One Crop can be hazardous.

Western Canadian Seed Processors has been contracting crops with Alberta farmers for fifteen years. The 1974 Rapeseed Contract is a good way to avoid the one crop problem. Used by thousands of Alberta farmers, the Western Canadian Seed Processors' Rapeseed Contract has provided stabilized farm income through a cash crop. Other contract features include pricing in the bin, pooling price if you wish, storage payments, cash advances and freight assistance payments, or localized collecting points.

Rapeseed is Alberta's fourth largest crop . . . it allows early harvesting, works well in rotations and is easily marketed through a Western Canadian Seed Processors' Gower Contract.

FASHIONS AND FABRICS SPRING AND SUMMER 1974

What's new for Spring. The NEW look is again, the look of the 40's and 50's. These fashions were revisited last spring and are back again.

DRESSES are very "in", replacing pants to some extent.

- Wide shoulders, with gathered sleeve cap, wide lapels, short cuffed sleeves.
- Gathers - join bodice to yoke, to finish a V or sweetheart neckline, to join bodice to skirt, on sleeve cap.
- Necklines are scooped, sweetheart, V.
- Waistlines are back
- Peplums or short jackets remind us of the 40's. Short sleeves with flip up cuffs complete the look.
- Skirts are easy fit - gored, gathered, A—line.
- Skirt length is in the knee area for day wear, ankle length for evening.

SKIRTS are very much part of the spring picture.

- "Big skirt" is a fashion favorite - an enlarged A—line, often wrap around style
- Pleated or dirndl skirts - front pleats are very popular. Dirndl skirts gathered to a waistband are back again.

SHIRTS are still a classic in every wardrobe. Shirts are a bit softer than last season with wider collars for a less structural appearance. Wear shirts - patterned or plain - over another vests, jackets, tank tops. Tie the bottom in a knot at your waist and wear as a topper with a dress, skirt or pants and sweater.

The "Big Top" is popular too. A big top is an overblouse, cut wide, often with drop shoulders. Wear as a shirt or jacket.

BLOUSON TOP styles are also on the scene. A draw string tie at the bottom creates gathers.

PANTS are here to stay! Pant styles are straighter, often uncuffed. Some have tucks at the waist.

FABRICS

Reminiscent of the 40's and 50's complete the picture. This time around they are much easier to care for than the "silks" were back when.

Crepe, broadcloth, eyelet, lace all fashion fabrics, all available in easy care polyester and blends.

Feminine colors and prints enhance the "definitely female" fashions. Nosegays sprinkled on a neutral background are everywhere! Perhaps its mauve flowers on a blue background or camel and gold on cream, or forest green on rust.

Pastel colors are very big. Neutral bone white and oatmeal pastel pink, blue, green are seen in every fashion.

DENIMS are even more popular this year. As a contrast to the 40's fashions, denim skirts, dresses, jackets, bathing suits, tote bags — They are all made of denim or look like denim.

Embroidered designs appear on the yoke down the front on the hip pocket on the side of pantlegs.

For fun and fashion inexpensively sew your own! Or look in the back of your closet and let your imagination run wild. Can you add embroidery shorten the sleeves, wear the garment in a different way?

Northern trip has adventure

A visit to Fort Chipewyan by a Tofield family ended with an adventure.

Mr. and Mrs. Emil Halverson and Mark returned home from a six day visit with David and Nancy Halverson, but ran into trouble while on a plane trip.

On Sunday, the entire group paid a visit, by plane, to Uranium City, where they called on Mr. and Mrs. Rex Arnold. The plane ride was a bit rough but uneventually. Not so the return trip.

On returning to Fort Chipewyan, the passengers were notified by the pilot that the guide wire that held the skis in place had snapped.

In order to land the plane without it flipping over and thus causing death or injury, it became necessary for Emil and David to force the plane door open enough to allow David, with the aid of axe handles, to reach the back end of the skis so that he could exert enough pressure to level the skis out and enable the plane to land safely.

Alberta

ADVANCED EDUCATION

As I see it

By Walt Buck, M.L.A.
Clover Bar

The largest budget in Alberta's history was brought into the house last Friday. A budget such as this indicates that Alberta is one of the most fortunate provinces in Confederation. The former government must receive as much credit as the present one for the fine management that their province has received in order to be in the excellent financial position it is in.

THE OIL INDUSTRY

The development and nurturing of our oil industry is now bearing dividends. It was only a short few years ago that Alberta was in the position of having to beg for markets, whereas now it is a matter of not being able to supply the demand. This seller's market is now placing the province in the position of having the money literally "pour in" as the oil is "pouring out." At the same time we must stop and have a look into the future; are we killing the goose that lays the golden egg? Are we exploiting the oil industry for the large short term gain at the expense of not leaving anything for future generations? This is a thought that haunts me and I would welcome your thoughts.

WILL DEMOCRACY SURVIVE IN ALBERTA?

The volume of money pouring into the Provincial Treasury means the government can give just about everyone everything he or she desires. Will this mean that the Opposition will be wiped out by sheer force of dollars"?

Personally I have never considered my role more important than I do at the present time. It requires more time — this I am willing to give — and am giving, but more importantly the necessity of constructive opposition.

I pledge to try to be constructive, inquiring and very watchful of your dollars so that the government will manage the affairs of this province to be best advantage of present and future generations.

Your comments are welcomed.

Wild oats cost you plenty in wheat and barley.

Wild oats can cost you in wheat or barley if left untreated. And less yield can mean less profits at harvest.

This spring apply Avadex* BW herbicide by Monsanto. Avadex BW controls wild oats before they come up. You get early control of wild oats that rob moisture and nutrients from your barley or wheat. Avadex BW application flexibility lets you apply after seeding—you don't have to wait until wild oats come up.

When used as recommended, Avadex BW gives effective wild oat control—without crop injury.

Remember how bad wild oats were last year . . . be ready this year.

Apply Avadex BW in the Wild Oats Action Year . . . to help get a better yield of wheat or barley.

Options for Women in association with the Alberta Womens Bureau, recently received a priority Employment grant to establish a newsletter, SOURCE: Alberta Women's Newsletter. Three women, Susan Thompson, Ann Harvey and Maureen Scobie are working on the project.

They are writing to women throughout the province to inform them about the proposed newsletter, to find women who will contribute information and articles to the newsletter and to find women who will be interested in working on the preparation and publishing of the newsletter and to request the names and addresses of women who will welcome receiving the newsletter.

After the first week on the project they decided to name the newsletter SOURCE: This name reflects the fact that the vital source of the newsletter will be the women of Alberta themselves, that they are the life and force of the newsletter.

They have discussed the aims and values of the newsletter. They think it is important

1) that SOURCE be Alberta based rather than Edmonton or Calgary based;

2) that the primary source of information, opinion, comment, ideas be women living outside the major urban centres of this province;

3) that the newsletter focus on issues of vital importance to women and to the status of women; that the newsletter inform women about the activities and concerns of Alberta women (How do laws affect women's rights? What property rights do married women really have? How are single parent families handling their special problems? Are adequate health care facilities available? Are the needs for education of married women at home with children being met? Is information about the large number of books newspapers and pamphlets about women's issues reaching Alberta women? Do they know what self-educational material is available? Do they know how to apply for government grants for their projects?)

4) that the newsletter reach as many women in Alberta as possible.

5) that the newsletter establish a strong, regular provincial communications network.

6) that the newsletter become a continuing project: that it be prepared by women in a variety of places throughout the province on a volunteer basis: that workshops be held to enable women to prepare the newsletter themselves

They sincerely request your support of this project. Would you let them know what women are doing in your community, how they are tackling problems which they share with women in other communities? Do you know of women who would be interested in working to prepare an issue of the newsletter?

They hope to gather enough information from women throughout Alberta to publish the first newsletter at the beginning of April.

They welcome your comments on this project. They would like to know what kind of newsletter you think Alberta women would find most valuable and informative.

The above is from SOURCE—Alberta Women's Newsletter, 10008 - 107 Street, Edmonton, Alberta T5J 1J2 Phone 424-2202.

The natural gas Payment Equalization Plan.
Think of it as a savings account.
You know how a savings account works, you save up in order to cover later expenses. Well, that's just how our Payment Equalization Plan works. When you sign up with us for Payment Equalization we estimate your annual natural gas consumption and divide the cost by twelve. Then we bill you an equal amount every month. This way, you build up a reserve in the summer to take care of the higher costs of winter heating. During the year we keep track of your actual consumption and adjust any difference every twelve months.
P.E.P. has another advantage too; every month when you work out your budget you know that at least one bill will be the same every time . . . our bill, the one for the lowest natural gas rates in Canada.
Payment Equalization, think of it as your natural gas layaway plan.
Helping you look after your natural gas budget.

Don't put all your eggs in one basket! FARM

Every farmer knows that relying too heavily on one crop can lead to cash income problems. He has learned not to Put All His Eggs In One Basket.

Rapeseed has been, and still is, the stabilizing crop that provides ready cash.

Rapeseed growers have consistently, for fifteen years, signed Western Canadian Seed Processors' Grower Contracts and assured themselves of a guaranteed market.

This year is no exception . . . Rapeseed markets are still strong. Rapeseed provides the diversity. Rapeseed is great for rotations and Rapeseed can be seeded late and harvested early.

A Western Canadian Seed Processors' Grower Contract offers cash advances, daily pricing when your crop is in the bin, pooling, on-the-farm storage payments, and, this year, freight assistance and/or local delivery points.

Sign a Western Canadian Seed Processors' Contract today . . . thousands of Alberta farmers do every year.

Serious tragedy averted

What might have been a far more serious accident was averted last Thursday morning, although Mrs. Harold Leicht of Hay Lakes received serious injuries when the car she was driving was in collision with a gas tanker. Mrs. Leicht's daughter and mother were also taken to St. Mary's Hospital in the ambulance. At the intersection about half a mile south, and east, of Hay Lakes, the big Inter-City tanker, which was empty, crashed into the rear end of the car as it crossed the highway. he bumper of the truck bent into the wheel, and threw the northbound truck out of control, so that it careened a short distance down and across the highway, fishtailing as it went, and throwing the big tank trailer around in a wide arc until it plowed into the snow on the west side of the road, facing south. Although trapped temporarily by the huge amount of snow scooped into the cab as it plowed into the ditch, the driver, Ray Barkman was protected by the sleeper unit behind the cab and managed to climb out with only superficial injuries. RCMP investigated.

Tofield Library news

by Dorothea Freebury

The celebration of Canada Book Week is planned for the evening of May 1st this year, at the Community Hall.

Our theme is Alberta R.C.M.P. history, through audio-visual and reading displays.

We have a speaker of authority on this theme, in the person of Dr. J. MacGregor the author, who is also the Chairman of the Alberta RCMP Century Celebrations.

We also have obtained a print of the film "The Birds in Winter", an excellent half hour of history, attractively presented, and narrated by the actor Leslie Nielsen.

The Tofield Detachment of the RCMP is mounting a display in the foyer, and there is also a poster competition on the same theme, open to all students. More about this later

The Library Board hopes you will plan to attend this open house for what promises to be a most entertaining evening on May 1st at 8:00 p.m

The annual grant from the Provincial Government has been received by the Tofield Library. It amounts to $808.50 this year, on a per capita basis. This money, together with the grant from the Town of Tofield, is our main source of revenue, to keep the library supplied with as interesting and varied selection of books as possible.

If you have suggestions or requirements in a particular subject, don't forget to ask at the Library. If we don't have the exact book on our shelves, the Librarian can usually get it for you through the inter-library loan.

Farmer will seek the Tory nomination

Murray Finnerty of R.R. 2, Ardrossan, has announced his intention to seek the Progressive Conservative nomination in the Provincial Constituency of Clover Bar.

In making the announcement, Mr. Finnerty says he feels it is very important to elect a strong government representative in the next Provincial Election, "particularly from the standpoint of solving local problems, but, also to give us a voice in implementing present government policies and designing new ones."

Born and raised in a farming community in East Central Alberta Mr Finnerty came to Edmonton in 1965 to attend the University of Alberta. Prior to and since graduation, he has been involved in community recreation, taught high school and in early 1972, was appointed Executive Assistant to the Alberta Minister of Agriculture

Mr Finnerty and his wife, Andrea, have a small farm on the north-west corner of Elk Island Park and are very much involved in the local community activities in their area.

A nominating convention is expected in June

Saved by the anchovy?

Will the reappearance of anchovies off the coast of Peru have any marked effect on Canadian inflation? Scoffed at by some, other experts point to the fact that the biggest ten-day drop in the price of soybeans since 1964 occurred a week ago, just after the announcement that a million tons of the little fish had been harvested this year.

Rich in protein, the anchovy has for years been a staple ingredient of many high protein feed supplements in the livestock business. When the catch mysteriously fell off to almost nothing a couple of years ago, there was sudden, drastic pressure on any alternative, and the most popular alternative, soybean, experienced phenomenal surges in price as buyers scampered to gain adequate stocks.

Hard on the heels of the rise in soybean prices, came almost equally dramatic increases in the cost of feed supplements, followed by grain price increases, followed by meat prices. Grain is still riding high, for many reasons but maybe re-appearance of the anchovy, even in limited quantities, will slow down the spiral, even if it doesn't reverse the trend completely.

Even with prices as high as they are, cattle and hog breeders aren't a bit happy, because their own costs are so unexpectedly high. And even though milk has increased twenty-nine percent in the past fifteen months, there is still a question mark in the minds of many dairymen as to whether they should continue or get out before they lose out.

To the person paying the price, it doesn't seem to make sense; but to the person getting it, it's far from adequate. And Canada's Minister of Agriculture Eugene F. Whelan recently came out with proof of the bargains Canadian consumers are getting, by comparing the prices we pay for a number of food products with the prices paid in even the United States. And it's a bit of a shocker to see how well off we are, here.

Problems, problems!

Surely the height of irresponsibility is being shown in the action of Montreal postal workers walking out in a wildcat strike over something that isn't even remotely affecting them yet, and that's the possible loss of jobs due to greater efficiency of mechanical mail sorting with the introduction of the new postal code.

The action seems even more ill-considered when it is considered that not one worker has been dismissed so far in the two centers where the sorters have been functioning for some time.

Technically it's not quite correct to say they walked out over the possible job loss ahead. In point of fact, they walked out over the suspension of a number of employees who came to work agitating against introduction of the machinery . . . which isn't even planned yet for Montreal for many months to come.

We warmly agree with Postmaster Ouellette in his complaints over their action. We were lucky enough to have lunch with him about a month ago during a newspaper executive meeting with some of the cabinet. Highly knowledgeable about his job, he's just as well informed about the problems, and just as interested in doing something to solve them. But bucking up against obstinate [illegible] ted obstructionist tactics can be highly demoralizing to the whole postal force, Mr. Ouellette pointed out, and it's a full time job just trying to keep level . . . . all the while he has some really imaginative plans under consideration for dramatically improving the capacity of the Post Office to operate and serve the people of Canada.

Sooner or later [illegible] to have its rights [illegible] can't be too far off when the public generally is going to insist on compliance with the [illegible] also complete [illegible] breached.

NDP pushes quick vote

At the end of last week's column there was a teaser line about the New Democratic Party deciding that an election in June would be desirable. Since then the desires of the New Democrats have been explored in a little more depth, and I can report that there has indeed been a decision of sorts reached in the NDP caucus.

If the right opportunity arises, the NDP will defeat the Trudeau government, I'm told. The New Democrats would prefer to move a motion of no confidence in the government themselves and have the Conservative Party join them in a defeating vote, but they would be willing to join the Tories and vote in favor of a reasonable Conservative motion of no confidence.

Part of the problem in months past has been that the Tory motions have been couched in terms which offended NDP sensibilities and were designed rather to embarrass the NDP, rather than win support. Besides, until the last month or so, the NDP really felt it was bringing the government along down the road of leftish legislation.

Several things have changed. First, the NDP is suffering from the growing public conviction that the bed-and-wed situation with the Liberals has not been entirely for the sake of bending government legislation. Many NDPers will now admit in private that their party is being too frequently identified as a Liberal [illegible].

Second there was that recent Conservative policy convention in Ottawa which demonstrated that the Tories are moving very [illegible] the centre of the political spectrum. That, I might add, is something pointed out to me by friend and colleague Doug Fisher.

"It doesn't look like we're [illegible] of the Liberals," one NDP member [illegible] to me recently. "Maybe [illegible] could bend a few Tory pro[illegible]"

What the NDP would like [illegible] the [illegible] which [illegible] Minister John Turner [illegible] bring down fairly soon. The central issue as far as the NDP is concerned is the steep [illegible] far far steeper rates of profit increases for the large corporations - particulary food processors. Unless the Turner budget takes the unlikely step of a meaningful excess profits tax, then the NDP could make a real issue of it, and vote the government down, with Tory help.

Trouble with that scenario is that the Liberals intend to delay presentation of that budget as long as possible. A June election would only be possible if the budget is presented before late April, debated, and voted on within a week. From what I can gather, the Liberals aren't figuring on a budget until May, and if they can stall that long, a defeat in the Budget debate would mean a July election—hardly ideal timing for either the country or the NDP.

So if you're making any bets about an election this June, don't plunge too heavily. On the other hand, if you'd like to hazard a sou or two on an election before the end of the year, I think it might even be safe to give away some odds.

Farmers get alternative delivery points

Farmers in the Round Hill, Kingman Dodds area were included among a number of others for whom temporary suspension of grain delivery regulations was provided last Friday. The suspension is for the balance of the crop year.

Minister Responsible for the Canadian Wheat Board, Hon. Otto Lang said the suspension was invoked to enable producers [illegible] railways [illegible] deliver wheat, oats and [illegible] to any elevator point receiving railway service.

Despite the suspension [illegible] way service will be re[illegible] those areas as soon [illegible] practical to do so, the [illegible] said.

Four more unit trains

operating from the Alberta and Red Deer subdivisions are expected to load at the country elevators throughout the subdivisions, thereby avoiding the added expense involved in the unit train movement from the Lethbridge inland terminal. In that operation grain is trucked from country elevators to the Lethbridge terminal before loading the rail cars. The additional cost to producers has been estimated at between 12 and 17 cents a bushel. It is expected that the unit train from Lethbridge to Vancouver will [illegible] operation.

Producers outside the [illegible] and Red Deer subdivisions will depend on the [illegible] shipping system [illegible] living within the [illegible] for the shipment [illegible] grains. Some [illegible] of equalized rail car [illegible] tion throughout the province [illegible] available and presumably [illegible] later date in the crop year [illegible] specific arrangements [illegible] will be arranged.

Acreage restrictions changed on utility wheat contracts

Changes in the acreage restrictions on contracts for the production of Glenlea and Pitic 62, the new utility wheat varieties, have been announced by the Canadian Wheat Board.

Effective March 18, grain producers in most areas of Alberta and Saskatchewan may apply to grow Glenlea and Pitic 62 under contract in any amount of 60-acre multiples. Previously, not more than 150 acres could be grown under contract by any producer.

In Manitoba, contracts for Glenlea wheat will be available in amounts up to 350 acres for each producer taking part in the contract program. Pitic contracts are not being offered in Manitoba, where growing conditions are less favorable for this wheat.

The changes in acreage restrictions are designed to encourage production of as much Glenlea and Pitic 62 as possible this spring for sale during the 1974-75 crop year. Acreage limits were completely removed in Alberta and Saskatchewan in order to obtain a more even distribution of production across the Prairies. This would enable the Wheat Board to take advantage of marketing opportunities from both eastern and western export positions.

Under a limited marketing program, both utility wheats are currently being offered for export as food wheat at over $5 a bushel.

Under the contract program, producers are guaranteed delivery of 2,500 bushels of Glenlea and Pitic 62 for every 60 acres under contract. The yield potential of both utility wheats is about 25 percent greater than traditional varieties of hard red spring wheats. Grown under a 1973 marketing program, the new wheats yielded an average of 40 bushels per acre.

Preliminary tests have shown that Glenlea and Pitic 62 are acceptable to overseas buyers for both food and feed use. The Canadian Wheat Board's contract program is designed to encourage production of sufficient supplies to enable the Board to begin marketing the new wheats on a commercial basis.

Glenlea and Pitic 62 offer alternatives to grain producers in Western Canada, and can help diversify cropping patterns and future sales programs of the Canadian Wheat Board.

Contracts are available in regions of the Prairies most agronomically suited to the production of the utility wheats. Glenlea contracts are available in all areas of the Prairies except south-western Saskatchewan, southeastern Alberta and the northern areas of the three provinces. Pitic 62 contracts are available in Saskatchewan and Alberta, except in the Peace River district.

Producers in areas where contracts for both Glenlea and Pitic are available should consult their local agricultural representative or district agriculturalist to determine which utility wheat is better suited to local conditions.

First nursing refresher course offered at CLC

The first nursing refresher course for Camrose will be offered at Camrose Lutheran College, beginning on April 22nd. The program will aid nurses presently inactive who wish to go back to work.

To complete the course, each student will be required to attend full-time for five weeks. Facilities at St. Mary's Hospital in Camrose and possibly Daysland General Hospital will be used for the nurses' practical experience.

Jointly sponsored by Manpower and CLC, the course tuition fees for nurses who want to renew their certificates will be funded by Manpower while working nurses who wish to take the refresher course are sponsored by CLC. Several local people will be instructing in the program, as well as some resource people from the Charles Camsell and University hospitals in Edmonton.

For further information, contact the co-ordinator, Mrs. Rose Begalke, at 672-5460.

Mirror Lake seems to live up to its name, and the swans appear to be looking at their own reflections, as they swim in the waters again, after being cooped up for several months in barnyard pens. The swans, with ducks and geese added, have been a feature of Mirror Lake for a number of years.

MORE BEEF FROM SEEDED PASTURES

Experiments conducted at Agriculture Canada's Lethbridge Research Station indicate that beef production per acre can be increased three to six times by seeding Russian wild ryegrass or crested wheatgrass.

Greater production can be attained if seeded pastures are used to complement native range. Crested wheatgrass can be used for spring pasture and the Russian wild ryegrass can be used mainly for fall grazing.

Sees fertilizer in critical supply

Western Canada faces a critical shortage of fertilizer this year, Dr. K.F. Nielsen, chief executive officer of Western Co-operative Fertilizers Ltd., told the annual meeting of Federated Co-operatives and Westland Co-operatives.

"Although Mr. Whelan (federal agriculture minister Eugene Whelan) says there is no shortage, I'm convinced there is," Dr. Nielsen said.

Western Co-operative Fertilizers is owned jointly by Federated Co-operatives and the three wheat pools. It has plants at Calgary and Medicine Hat, and is to be a partner in an $80,000,000 anhydrous ammonia fertilizer plant to be built at Medicine Hat.

Dr. Nielsen said he estimates that co-operatives in Western Canada will be short 100,000 tons of fertilizer this year, in spite of an increase in production at Calgary, and purchase of the Medicine Hat plant of Northwest Nitro Chemicals Ltd.

He said the total production of fertilizer in Western Canada is ample, but much of it is exported.

In the West, 2,500,000 tons of fertilizer were produced last year, and 1,500,000 tons were exported.

"Our competitors are satisfying the U.S. Market," he said. "Prices there are 30 p.c. higher than in Canada. As for WCFL, our two plants will produce about 450,000 tons this year and we will have to buy some 80,000 tons. One problem with Northwest Nitro is that we inherited contracts worth 110,000 tons, which this year are destined for Pakistan and a U.S. Co-op." The capacity of Northwest Nitro Chemicals is 235,000 tons, he said.

Dr. Neilsen said there is a "realistic possibility" that Western Canadian farmers might need 1,500,000 tons of fertilizer this year, compared to slightly more than 1,000,000 tons in 1973.

"Presently, one to two bushels of grain will pay for an acre's worth of fertilizer," he said. "The only reason farmers won't use it is because they can't get it."

He called phosphate rock the "Achilles heel" of Canadian fertilizer production, since 80 p.c. of it is supplied by the United States, where there are "many billions of tons" of accessible rock, in contrast to Canada's supply, which is "extremely hard" to get at.

The $80,000,000 Co-op fertilizer plant planned for Medicine Hat will ease the supply situation of ammonia and urea-based fertilizers, he said, but by the time it's in operation (1976) "who knows what the demand will be?" The plant will be built with provisions for a doubling in size. It will be owned by WCFL, United Co-operatives of Ontario and CF Industries Inc., a U.S. co-operative.

Food expected to take more of family income

Consumers may have to pay 22 to 23 per cent of their total expenditures for food. This is the opinion of Dr. G.R. Purnell, Deputy Minister of Agriculture for Alberta. Dr. Purnell was being interviewed regarding a "Challenges in Food Marketing" Conference.

He said, "this is just one of the many challenges facing the consumer and the food industry. Consumers can no longer expect food to be provided for 18 percent of their total expenditures, or 19 percent as we've had in recent years."

"This means that consumers will have to transfer some of their expenditures from non-food products to food products, if they are going to maintain an adequate nutritional level."

"Adequate nutrition is very important and the Department of Agriculture and Consumer's Affairs are working together to take in the nutritional needs of area of concern, along with economics, and efficiencies in production and processing that we can focus on during the upcoming conference", said the Deputy Minister.

Agricultural productivity is one of the highest areas of productivity in the Canadian economy. Output per unit of input in Agriculture is running about 7.5 units of output per one unit of input. In the non-agricultural sector, we have about 2.5 units of output per unit of input as reported by the Economics Council of Canada. This is in terms of primary agricultural producers which means we have a long way to go in closing the gap for the non-agricultural side areas which are involved in the food industry", said Dr. Purnell.

"Whether it is fuel, fertilizer, bailer twine or honey bees, we have to be concerned about the efficiency and productivity of all these areas: as well as the distribution process, transportation handling, brokerage work, and retailing, in order to improve efficiencies and cut costs", Dr. Purnell stated.

MAKE YOUR DRYER CARRY A FULL LOAD.
It takes the same amount of electricity to dry a partial load as a full load. As long as clothes can tumble freely, your dryer is not overloaded and you get full value from every kilowatt of electricity.
To prevent wrinkling and the need for ironing, remove the clothes from the dryer as soon as the tumbling stops. If ironing is necessary, remember that is it more economical to turn the iron on and off each time you use it than to leave the iron in the on position for extended periods of time. It is also a lot safer!

AECL's enchanted wood

OTTAWA (CP)—For a break from politics one day last week, I accepted an invitation to tour the facilities of Atomic Energy of Canada Ltd., about 15 miles north of here. The plant, on the outskirts of Ottawa, isn't the one dedicated to reactor-building and commercially oriented, and it makes money.

Before making the visit, I was well aware of Canada's pioneer role in design and building of cobalt bomb units for the treatment of cancer. There at the Ottawa plant was on assembly line of cobalt bomb units. Parts, worn being fabricated from raw metal onward to the finished product. Only sophisticated electronic gear had been manufactured elsewhere, and some assembly work was being done on that.

There was much more, past that is where the surprise came. The actual transition, shaping and packaging of the radioactive material which forms the heart of the equipment under manufacture at AECL takes up a relatively small space in the complex. There are several radioactive-proof vaults with mechanical hands inside so technicians can handle "hot" material through several feet of shielding glass. There are also two deep pools of water with "hot" material stored at the bottom giving off a beautiful ultra-violet glow.

In one section of the factory, AECL technicians design, build, and assemble surgical sterilizing units which vary in size from something which would fit into a reverse stand room, to a unit half the size of a football field.

Surgical equipment which is already packaged for customers can be sterilized by radioactivity in one of these units by exposure to cobalt rods, which are raised and lowered from pools of water as they are needed. The sterilization units are disassembled once they have been put together at the AECL plant, then shipped to buyers all over the world, accompanied by AECL employees, who supervise on site assembly of the units in customer factories.

At one end of the main AECL factory building, scientists are doing amazing things with wood. Several flooring companies in the Ottawa area are already doing business with AECL, and as the new process being used should find increasing use it becomes more widely known, it supplied by flooring companies construction.

AECL technicians are supplied by flooring companies with bins filled with pieces of hardwood the semi-finished pieces which will eventually become in laid hardwood floors.

These bits of wood are placed in a vacuum cylinder, and then, with all air removed, soaked in a type of polyester liquid. Once all the natural air cavities of the wood have been replaced with the liquid plastic, the wood is exposed to radioactivity, and a structural change takes place in the polyester molecules.

The result is a piece of wood with a built in shine that would shame any television commercial product - and one which will wear almost forever. One of the technicians told me that the only maintenance such floors require is the occasional damp mopping.

I came home from the tour of AECL amazed at the things which are being done, and shedding my head because the work there is so little known. Already there's a movement in the Ward household for the installation of worry-free nuclear floors.

Man was made to move

A world-wide assult on laziness should result in fewer heart attacks, according to the Alberta Heart Foundation. Programs similar to Canada's "Participaction" are being launched in the Scandanavian counties, Australia, and Great Britian.

The International Cardiology Federation says that "a number of surveys in Great Britian have revealed that a fatal heart attack is more likely to affect people engaged in sedentary work than people with physically demanding work. An examination of staff operating London's double-decker buses showed that conductors, constantly on the move, are only half as likely to fall victim to heart attack as drivers, who spend their working lives sitting still behind the wheel. In the postal service, too, it was found that postmen are not nearly so prone to heart disease as office personnel. Another important aspect of these investigations was that when a physically active person is hit by a coronary thrombosis, he or she usually recovers from the disease more rapidly than people whose jobs require them to sit still most of the time."

Similar studies in other countries have almost without exception demonstrated that people in sedentary work are 2 to 6 times more likely to be hit by heart attack than people with physically active jobs

Broadly speaking, people who play sports in their youth will not live any longer than people who have never participated in them. However, a Finnish study of cross-country skiers has revealed that these sportsmen live on the average seven years longer than the rest of the male population. A possible explanation is that these skiers pursue their sport well through their later years.

"Over the past decades, and even in the last few years, there have been important changes in emphasis within the field of physical education," according to the Heart Foundation of Australia. "This emphasis has fallen at different times on the two different types of muscle contraction — isotonic and isometric — and now has gone away from both."

In ISOTONIC exercise the muscle is shortened during contraction — basically it is any exercise that brings about movement at a joint. If you do pushups, or lift a barbell, you are doing an isotonic exercise.

ISOMETRIC contraction involves the tensing of the muscle without movement — like squeezing a ball or pushing on a wall.

Although most physical activities require both types of contraction, the isotonic type of exercise was originally preferred in programmes aimed at improving strength and athletic ability. At this time, strength was considered by strength was considered by most to be the important element thus strength activities received the most emphasis.

About 20 years ago however, two German scientists completed a study which seemed to show rapid gains in strength from isometric contractions and there was a world wide swing to this type of exercise

But since then, many similar studies have not verified such gains in strength. In addition, it was found that isometric contractions had a marked effect on the cardiovascular system, causing a rapid rise in blood pressure. Scientists realised that isometric exercise was very unwise for those recovering from heart attack or those who were coronary-prone.

There was a short-lived shift in emphasis back to isotonic exercise, short-lived because the extent of the coronary heart disease problem in affluent societies and its relationship to lack of physical fitness was rapidly becoming apparent. Scientists and physical educators learned that in fact the efficiency of the heart-lung system was the most important element of physical fitness, not the strength of the muscles that show.

The type of exercise which is best for the heart-lung or cardiorespiratory system is one which puts this system under some degree of stress. You must puff and pant under the exercise load, using activities like fast walking, running, swimming and cycling, the so-call "aerobic" or "with oxygen" exercises. The measure of fitness in these terms is the amount of oxygen which can be taken into the body and delivered to the working muscles.

Aerobic capacity now assumes central place in physical fitness programs. The heart and lungs of a truly fit man will be able to deliver more blood — and the oxygen it contains — to the tissues. The cardiorespiratory system of a fit man will be able to perform this work with less fuss and exertion than his unfit neighbour.

This means that programmes which concentrate on isometric or isotonic exercises are of little use because they contribute little to aerobic capacity. There is no doubt that barbells, chest expanders and push-ups can strengthen and improve the tone of the muscles that show, but they do not significantly increase the ability of the lungs to absorb oxygen from the air quickly or the capacity of the heart and blood vessels to get this oxygen to the tissues.

This does not mean that isometric and body building exercises should be avoided — if the body-beautiful is your aim, by all means go ahead — but remember that if you want to achieve true physical fitness, the Alberta Heart Foundation recommends that you combine your body-building exercises with activities that increase your intake of oxygen, like running, swimming and cycling. It is no mere coincidence that muscle represents 40% of our body weight — MAN WAS MADE TO MOVE!

Power plant at Dodds seen as possibility

The probability of an electrical generating plant in the Dodds-Round Hill area was seen this week by two officials contacted by The Canadian. The two men are in entirely different lines of work.

Under consideration is a steam-powered plant, using coal recovered by stripmining in the area. One of the problems being studied is how to supply sufficient water for the project, although the company feels there is an excellent supply of coal.

Calgary Power, which is a member of the Electrical Utilities Co-ordinating Council in Alberta, has been coring and testing all over the area, reaching well south of Camrose in their search for information. The company plans to present a report on its findings, including a study of environmental impact, to the Board of Public Utilities Commissioners, early this summer, but feels it must have as complete knowledge as possible before it goes to the board.

There's no way even the first unit of the plant could be on stream before 1980, one official told The Canadian, even though a good deal of equipment has already been ordered for it. Far ahead of this unit, in Calgary Power's projections, are completion of the Sundance plant, while construction of the Number Five unit at Forestburg on the Battle River Plant is also programmed well ahead of Dodds in the integrated planning of the committee.

Six to seven years of lead time is required on a project as large as this, said a spokesman who declined to be identified, and supply problems, occasioned by steel shortages, could pose even further delays. On the other hand, indications of Calgary Power in the company's annual report, are for a continuing increase in the demand for more and more power.

Estimates of between 400 and 500 men have been used in guessing at the size of the construction crew, although no confirmation can be gained as to this figure.

Because of the leverage the assessment on such a plant as this could have, and the resultant taxes, a member of the government forecast there might be a good deal of jockeying for position between the Counties of Beaver and Camrose. However, it is far too early to know yet what is being contemplated in the way of location.

K. Gerber again heads gas co-op

Ken Gerber has been re-elected as president of the Ankerton Natural Gas Co-op following a meeting of the executive in Bawlf last night (Tuesday).

Re-elected as 1st vice-president was John Davis of Daysland while Morris Leiren of Bawlf was again named as 2nd vice-president. Returned as secretary-treasurer was Lil Bohmer of Bawlf.

Last night's meeting was told that governmental approval had been given for the gas installation design plan but complete approval for the plan had to be held back until financing of the system had been completed.

Directors will conduct a membership drive to try and get all people in the area served by the co-op to take gas. Government regulations insist that gas must be made available to everyone in the area. This has caused an increase in the estimated costs and makes full membership a necessity. As well, directors are seeking additional government grants to help offset the additional costs.

Wild oats cost you plenty in wheat and barley.

Wild oats can cost you in wheat or barley—if left untreated. And less yield can mean less profits at harvest

This spring apply Avadex* BW herbicide by Monsanto. Avadex BW controls wild oats before they come up. You get early control of wild oats that rob moisture and nutrients from your barley or wheat. Avadex BW application flexibility lets you apply after seeding you don't have to wait until wild oats come up

When used as recommended Avadex BW gives effective wild oat control—without crop injury

Remember how bad wild oats were last year . . . be ready this year.

Apply Avadex BW in the Wild Oats Action Year . . . to help get a better yield of wheat or barley.

Hot water treatment is used for rapeseed

Hot water seed treatment has been suggested as a possible method of reducing losses from rape diseases.

In making this suggestion, Dr A.W. Henry of the Alberta Plant Industry Laboratory explained that rape is closely related to cruciferous vegetables such as cabbage, cauliflower and brussels sprouts. He points out that it is subject to similar diseases, caused by seed-borne pathogens, as these vegetables are, and that the hot water treatment has been used to control them in vegetables for half a century. This treatment is especially effective against the bacterial disease known as black rot and has also proved valuable in reducing losses from blackleg and black spot. It is still widely recommended for cruciferous vegetable seed treatment.

Dr Henry believes that seed treatment with hot water might well find a place in rapeseed production for small seed lots such as a breeders' seed of new varieties like Torch. He also believes that disease damage to rape could, undoubtedly, be greatly reduced if the hot water seed treatment method was used in conjunction with other control practices like crop rotation, weed control and the limiting of seed production to dry areas of the province.

The hot water seed treatment method recommended for cruciferous vegetables entails soaking the seed for 30 minutes in water at a temperature of 122 degrees F and then drying it slowly with as little disturbance as possible so that the seed coats remain attached.

Dr Henry reports that rapeseed has withstood this treatment with no apparent injury when the above procedure has been followed. The main thing to watch is that the recommended water temperature of 122 degree F. is maintained and that the thermometer is accurate.

The hairy mammoth, a beast about one-third larger than a modern elephant, lived in the Canadian Arctic before the last ice age. A mammoth tusk eight feet long and 180 pounds in weight was discovered on the Kugaluk River in 1971.

The present Eskimo culture dates from the 18th century when the previous Thule Eskimo culture evolved into that of the Canadian Eskimos found by 19th century explorers. Canadian Eskimo origins can be traced back to about 3,000 B.C. when the first people from Asia drifted across the unoccupied Canadian Arctic from Alaska to Greenland.

Early child training might start in Ryley

by Harriet K. Ruddy

A number of Ryley parents who have pre-school children have met three times in the Ryley School Library to discuss the feasibility of implementing the Early Childhood Services Program for children of the district who are 4½ to 5½ years of age.

The philosophy behind this program is aimed at strengthening the sense of dignity and self worth of the child and the child's family by meeting the physical, nutritional and dental needs of the children; by strengthening the social and emotional development through encouraging self-confidence spontaneity, curiosity and self-discipline; by increasing the child's capacity to relate positively to family and community while at the same time strengthening the family's capacity to contribute to the child's development; and by fostering in the child and his family a responsible attitude toward society,' while stimulating constructive opportunities for people to work together on a personal and community basis toward a solution to their problem.

The government has established an Early Childhood Services Fund for this program of $280 per child in attendance. However, certain regulations must be followed in order to receive these monies. To administer this program a Board must be elected and incorporated as a society under the Attorney General's Department. This Board, among other duties, will be responsible for hiring a certified teacher with an Early Childhood Major and an understanding of the development and growth of young children; for developing an acceptable program based on the needs of the community; and for portioning throughout the year the 420 hours of child and parent involvement necessary to obtain this grant.

The organization of this program may take many forms and many ideas emanated from the discussions at the meetings. Children may attend some months and not others, half days or whole days, or a combination of both. There are many possibilities, but should the hours coincide with existing bus schedules, school buses may be made available for at least one way, in which event parents would be expected to provide the transportation one way, too. With full days, buses might be used both ways. Some of the 420 hours are to be allocated to parents for discussion of topics of interest to them and for individual parent-teacher conferences. For example, ninety sessions of three hours each could be expended on pupil activity under the direction of the teacher with the re-

Colorful history in weights, measures

Some Catch!

Not surprisingly, the earliest forms of measurement were derived from parts of the human body (e.g., the length of the foot, width of the hand and length of the forearm). Uniformity was provided by the imposition of a tribal chieftain's measurements throughout the extent of his realm. These rather arbitrary units were sanctified by having prototype standards produced and placed in temples or other places where they would be secure. Perhaps the most famous unit of length from biblical times was the cubit, originally defined as the distance from the point of the elbow to the end of the middle finger. Early units of weight included those derived from seasonal kernels of grain or other seeds. Units of volume or capacity were derived from such diverse forms as goat skins, baskets, and the like.

The British Imperial System has evolved as a hybrid of many earlier systems. The Romans, for example, introduced the foot into England where it was integrated with the Anglo-Saxon inch. The inch was originally the breadth of a thumb and remains close to that mark today — of the average Canadian's thumb is an inch. The imperial may [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] "nose to thumb" basis of measurement began to retreat into the realm of quaint folklore.

Other metric units included the gram, the unit of mass, which equalled the mass of a cubic centimetre of pure water at the temperature of its maximum density (4 degree C). The litre was defined as the volume equivalent to the volume of a cube, each side of which had a length of one decimetre.

Since the metric system provided a much firmer scientific rationale for measurement than the Imperial System and as the need for exact measurement increased, the scientific community gradually adopted the metric system. This boosted its prestige and an international treaty was signed in 1875 providing for an International Bureau of Weights and Measures to promote the international standardization and improvement of the metric system. There has been slow but steady progress towards world metric conversion ever since and before the end of this decade another important step will have been taken, that of converting Canada to the metric system. Tax Tips

For further information, call the District Taxation Office. If you live in a toll area, ask your long-distance operator for ZENITH 0-4000 and your call will be placed without charge.

Q. I operate a restaurant and buy fish directly from the fisherman. Am I required to deduct and remit Unemployment Insurance premiums on his behalf?

A. A fisherman is not insurable for any sales of fish he sells direct to restaurants. Therefore, no employee and employer premiums are required.

Q. How do you determine the earnings from which the fish buyer will establish the insurable earnings of a captain owner for purposes of calculating his Unemployment Insurance premiums?

A. The earnings of the fisherman who owns the boat and, or gear used in making the catch, and who is a member of the crew, is for any week considered to be the greater of

(1) Gross returns of the catch Less (A) Amounts paid to other members of the crew
(B) 25 percent of gross catch or
(2) $50.00.

Q. I know this is a contradiction in terms, but in connection with deductions for Unemployment Insurance premiums who is the "designated employer" of self-employed fisherman?

A. Any of the following persons under specific conditions could be the "designated employer" of a fisherman in the following order:

(A) Buyer
(B) Head Fisherman of the crew
(C) Agent for selling the catch of the crew
(D) Common Agent
(E) Member of crew.

In other words, in the case of a self-employed fisherman the first buyer or acquirer of the catch is the "designated employer" provided the catch is delivered in Canada in a "face to face" transaction by a member of the crew who made the catch.

Q. On occasion fish is bought from boats where boat expenses are not know until the boat returns to home port. How should we as the buyer handle this situation?

A. Generally, before you can determine the insurable earnings and the premium deduction required for members of a crew the declaration made to you as the buyer must include boat expenses. The Income Tax Department recognizes the problems created when the boat expenses are not available at the time the catch is sold and under these circumstances it is prepared to accept estimates of the boat expenses.

Q. My wife sahres in the catch as a member of the crew. Can she be insured? I am also a crew member.

A. The wife of a fisherman is not insurable for a catch by a crew of which her husband is a member. The wife's share must be added to the husband's earnings for purposes of calculating his insurable earnings.

Q. I am a self-employed fisherman operating my own boat without help. Can I declare my actual expenses to the buyer of my fish or must he use the 25 percent assumed operating costs?

A. The 25 percent assumed operating costs must be used. Unemployment Insurance Regulations require that this amount must be deducted regardless of the actual operating costs.

Q. What is the responsibility of the fish buyer where no declaration is made?

A. Under these circumstance the buyer has no responsibility. However, some other person will most likely be the "designated employer".

Q. Last year I paid my brother's university tuition fees. Can I claim any of these when I am filing my income tax return?

A. No. Only the student may claim tuition fees against his own income.

Graduation exercises mark term end for CLBI

April 19-21 marked the consummation and climax of the 73-74 school year at the Canadian Lutheran Bible Institute. A banquet was held on Friday evening in Messiah Lutheran Church, and the Commencement Exercises on Sunday afternoon at 2:30 p.m., also in Messiah Church.

The theme of Graduation Weekend this year, chosen by the graduating class was "Looking Unto Jesus". Speaker for the occasion was the Rev. Carl Johansson of Trinity Lutheran Church, Minneapolis, Minnesota, who in addition to his parish ministry is chairman of the World Mission Prayer League, the Lutheran Evangelistic Movement and the Affiliation of Lutheran Movements. He is also the father of one of the graduates, class president, Paul Johansson. Pastor Johansson challenged the graduates and all present to look to Jesus and not let any weights or sins detract from this goal, in order to run the race of life fruitfully and be a witness for the Savior.

The Commencement Exercises featured musical selections by the choir, directed by Pastor Bloomquist, and a number from each of the Ambassador Teams: Resurrection, Renewal, Redemption and Reflection. The graduating class of 19 members sang their class song, composed by one of its members, Cheryl Tastad of Loreburn, Saskatchewan, "Looking unto Jesus", based directly on the words of Hebrews 12:1-2. At this Service, there were 17 diplomas of graduation given, 2 two year certificates and 61 one year certificates. Four scholarship-bursaries were presented, to Hugh Hedlin of Winnipeg, John Loose of Seaford, New York, Jane Colpitts of Red Deer, and Dorothy Heaje of Crooked River, Sask.

After the program on Sunday, at 8 p.m. the Resurrection Ambassadors that have travelled during the entire school year presented their home program for the Camrose area. This marked the close of their ministry that has taken them throughout Canada and the Central and Eastern parts of the more northerly States of the U.S.A.

This week, summer Ambassador teams of the school begin their ministry in congregations of Western Canada. Two of them are presently travelling in the area, and the other will travel in July and August: Reflection will be in the Peace River area, and west to Prince Rupert; Renewal will be in Alberta and Saskatchewan; Redemption will go through Calgary to Vancouver Island, into Washington, to be in attendance at the Youth Congress at the World's Fair in Spokane, Youth and Women's of the Church Conventions in Vancouver, and also will be the team for the Deeper Life Conferences of the Lutheran Evangelistic Movement in Mission City, B.C., and in Camrose.

In preparation for the new school year and what is anticipated will be an increased enrollment over the 101 of this year, the building program is in full swing. The footings are poured at this stage with the forms for the basement being set in place. This new building is to be finished by September 1st, and the opening of the new school year.

Wild oats cost you plenty in wheat and barley.

Wild oats can cost you in wheat or barley - if left untreated. And less yield can mean less profits at harvest.

This spring apply Avadex* BW herbicide by Montsanto. Avadex BW controls wild oats before they come up. You get early control of wild oats that rob moisture and nutrients from your barley or wheat. Avadex BW application flexibility lets you apply after seeding—you don't have to wait until wild oats come up.

When used as recommended, Avadex BW gives effective wild oat control—without crop injury.

Remember how bad wild oats were last year . . . be ready this year.

Apply Avadex BW in the Wild Oats Action Year . . . to help get a better yield of wheat or barley.

Dancing waters Dancing waters are often beautiful to watch, but the shimmering spectacle of water cascading over Highway 13 about two miles west of Bawlf wasn't pretty to anyone as they considered the damage that could be done. In spite of the large culverts seen in the picture, waters from melting snow mounted so rapidly that they poured over this whole section of the road, and a few hours later it was completely impassable and closed to traffic. —Camrose Canadian Newsphoto.

Ryley news items

By Lena Reel

Mrs. Doris Gardeski received the sad news that her sister, Mrs. Pearl Bunak passed away in Edmonton at the age of 69 years. Mrs. Gardeski attended the funeral on Monday.

Our "spring thaw," after such a heavy snow fall during the winter," is really playing havoc with roads. One place, three culverts could not take it which made an odd scene for awhile with one standing upward. Children love looking at the whirlpools but, they are dangerous, boys and girls, if you try to get too close. Washouts under edge of roads can cave in under their weight. Many places the roads are covered with water, culverts out and wash outs

Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Lehman celebrated their 40th wedding anniversary in the Ryley Community Hall. A large crowd turned out to help them make this day a memorable occasion.

The table looked lovely with candles and a lovely cake decorated by Evelyn Stauffer. Seated at the table, to left of Alvin, were his brothers and their wives. To Goldie's right, were Martha Stromberg, Mr. and Mrs. Arnt Skoglund, Inez Wideman and Velma Lehman

The emcee was Lara Rude. Introduction of the head table was done by Raymond Zook.

The three Stutzman sisters rendered a couple of songs. Oliver Lehman had a little talk on Alvin days when he farmed with horses. Another speech by Boyd Stauffer.

A mixed quartette sang a few songs which everyone enjoyed.

Vernon Roth presented the honored couple with a purse of money. Mr. Skoglund presented them with a gift from Goldie's relatives. John Lehman presented his folks with a gift from him and his five sisters.

Before lunch was served, Wilbur Stauffer said grace. Alvin thanked everyone for a lovely afternoon

Everyone enjoyed a most delicious lunch served by the ladies.

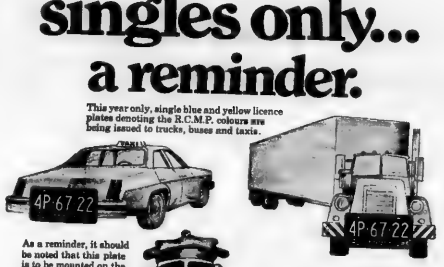
For singles only... a reminder.

This year only, single blue and yellow licence plates denoting the R.C.M.P. colours are being issued to trucks, buses and taxis.



As a reminder, it should be noted that this plate is to be mounted on the rear of a bus, taxi or truck if the vehicle is not designed for the normal use of pulling a trailer.

However, in the case of trucks which are designed for or generally used for the towing of trailers, the single plate is to be mounted on the front of the vehicle.

And that's all there is to it for 1974.

loan. Moved that this letter be received and filed and that the action taken by the Secretary Treasurer in reply to this letter be concurred in.

A report was received from the Vegreville Health Unit on the Bruce Well. The report indicated that the standard plate count is high.

A letter was received from the Department of Highways and Transport informing that funds are being made available by the Department for all treatment of an eight mile section of S.H. 824. The Department does not have the oiling crew to do this type of work and it is their preference that the County complete the work with their own forces. There was some question as to the number of miles involved in this project. Moved that this letter be received and tabled until more information is received.

Moved that the Boy Scouts be leased Pt N.E. 35-47-12-W4 for twenty-five years at a cost of $1.00

Correspondence was received from the Alberta Department of Environment regarding the Drainage Project on Section 31-47-12-W4. This project will be investigated upon request by the County of Beaver No. 9 Moved that the County of Beaver request this project be scheduled for investigation.

A letter was received from the Alberta Department of Environment indicating that Sections 4, 5 and 6-48-13-W4 and Section 1-49-13-W4 have been scheduled for investigation during spring.

The following policy regarding subdivisions was presented.

POLICY REGARDING SUBDIVISION APPROVALS

The County Council believes that people move to rural areas from urban to improve their quality of life and not for economic reasons. We do not believe their quality of life will be improved if we allow the creation of too small parcels.

Without adequate sewage and water supply systems, which the County cannot afford, pollution problems would soon develop. By approval of the creation of small parcels the County could be required to supply solutions to the problems that would develop.

Developers will stress the opinion that the County will benefit by increased assessment. However the amount of money raised by taxation for municipal purposes is small compared to the total tax. On an assessment of $5,000.00 the tax for municipal purposes in 1973 was $162.36 out of a total of $395.00. This is for administration, fire protection, public works, recreation, welfare, debt charges and the purchase of capital equipment.

The County Council does not wish to restrict the development of rural areas on land that is submarginal for agricultural use, for rural residential purposes. However they do not want these areas to become overpopulated to the point where the quality of life for the residents deteriorates to the point that either the County will have to provide large investments in water and sewer programs or the rurality becomes vacant

It is therefore in the best interests of the County and the residents of the subdivisions that new regulations be adopted to carry out the objectives of this policy.

REGULATIONS REGARDING SUBDIVISIONS

1. (a) Subdivided parcels on submarginal agricultural land must contain not less than 10 acres.

(b) Subdivision requests on improved agricultural land will be considered on an individual basis.

2. All approaches to each parcel must be installed or a payment of $400.00 per approach plus the cost of culverts must be deposited with the County Secretary Treasurer.

3. Required service roads must be completed.

4. Approaches or service roads to or within the subdivision must be built to the following standards:

(a) Approaches must be at least 24 feet wide and adequate culverts installed.

(b) Service roads must be constructed on a 75 foot road allowance and have at least a 24 foot top.

(c) Adequate drainage must be provided including culverts as required.

(d) Approaches and service roads must be gravelled with five-eighths or three-quarter inch crushed gravel at the rate of at least 300 cubic yards per mile.

5. All taxes including those of the year in which the subdivision is registered must be paid in full.

Moved that the Court of Revision be held April 29th and 30th, 1974.

A request was received from the Department of Municipal Affairs for the subdivision of the N. E. 36-49-17-W4. Moved that we have no objection to this subdivision provided that County is not required to provide access roads to the subdivided areas

Several roads are impassible due to the spring run off, causing flooding and culverts washed out. With the continued warm weather, most of the snow has gone excepting where severe drifting had been. Crops that couldn't be harvested last fall are mostly ruined due to an increase in the mice and rabbits, also to the grain sprouting in the fields. It will be some time yet before the farmers will get on most of the fields.

Glenlea wheat growers should sign contracts

WINNIPEG — The Canadian Wheat Board today asked producers interested in growing Glenlea wheat under contract this year to apply for their contracts as soon as possible.

It was pointed out that the current export embargo on Glenlea seed will be lifted by the federal government, effective April 1. This will permit the sale outside Canada of Glenlea seed not required under the Canadian Wheat Board's contract program.

The embargo was originally set to ensure that seed supplies would be adequate to meet the needs of all producers taking part in the contract program After April 1, Prairie producers cannot be certain that Glenlea seed will be available in the required amounts. The Glenlea contracts are part of the Canadian Wheat Board's marketing development program for the new utility wheat varieties. Glenlea contracts have been available since early December throughout the Prairies, except in southeastern Saskatchewan, southeastern Alberta and the northern areas of the three provinces, where growing conditions are less favorable for Glenlea.

Glenlea contracts are not available in Saskatchewan and Alberta in any amount of 50 acre multiples In Manitoba, contracts for Glenlea wheat are available in amounts up to 350 acres for each producer

Producers are guaranteed delivery of 2,500 bushels for every 50 acres seeded under contract. Applications for contracts and additional information are available through local elevator agents making hours for parents and conferences. Some of the agencies that have offered their services include the Vegreville Health Unit, Department of Social Development, Guidance, Speech, and Hearing Clinics Home Economics, etc. Since the funds are limited, money will not be available for the hiring of extra teaching personnel, so parents will be expected to provide assistance under the direction of the teacher a few times a year.

The Early Childhood Services kindergarten is definitely not an extension of grade one to younger children. It is designed to prepare children for school experience by providing development and constructive play experiences in a learning atmosphere where a child can participate in group and individual activities such as music, painting, rythmical activities, games, dramatizations, and role playing. Hopefully the program will develop the child's ability to get along with other children, to communicate self-confidently, to become more creative and more co-ordinated.

The next meeting is set for April 29th, in the Ryley School Library at 8:00 p.m. for the purpose of deciding definitely whether plans for an Early Childhood Services Program can be implemented this year. All parents of pre-school children are urged to attend this meeting and give their views and opinions.

Government orders study of Cooking Lake water system

Four contracts, involving 10 consulting firms and special consultants, have been awarded as part of the study into environmental management of the COOKING LAKE MORAINE, W. J. Yurko, Minister of the Environment, announced today.

The contracts, worth a total of $206,000, at, with Stanley Associates Engineering Ltd., G. R. Shelley and Associated Ltd., Eper Consulting Ltd., and cor...Hant J. O. Park, all of Edmonton. The other consultants involved have been engaged by the principal consultants.

The overall objective of the study, as previously stated by Mr. Yurko, is "to develop a proposal for the conservation and enchancement of the resources of this area for the enjoyment and benefit of the general public."

"However, one essential ingredient to achieving this goal is the availability of water."

The work now being undertaken is to determine how best to deal with declining lake levels in the area, 25 miles southeast of Edmonton, and to determine the best means for importing water directly to Cooking Lake.

Local residents and others, who use the area mostly for recreational purposes, have expressed concern over the decline.

The consultants will work as a consortium with technical advisory committees that were established by the study's management committee. The management committee is composed of representatives of several federal and provincial government agencies, local authorities, planning commissions and other interests.

All the studies have some overlap, but general areas of responsibility have been assigned to each of the principals.

Stanley Associates Engineering Ltd. is to study hydrological considerations, including sources of water which could be used to raise lake levels.

G. R. Shelley and Associates Ltd. is to study present recreational use and potential recreation demand. It will also identify areas suitable for future recreational development.

Mr. Park is to interpret aerial photographs and prepare base maps which show present land use vegetation and wetlands.

After the flood wiped out part of Highway 13, just west of Ryley, highway engineers got on the job and put up a temporary steel bridge which allows one lane of traffic. The culvert that couldn't handle the flow is still in place. After the flooding stops, the road will be repaired.

Buck asks amendment

Clover Bar M. L. A. Dr. Walter Buck introduced a Bill into the Alberta Legislature on Friday to amend The Wildlife Act.

The proposed legislation would give hunters with a physical disability who could not otherwise hunt, permission to discharge a firearm from a boat or vehicle, provided written consent is obtained from the Director of Fish and Wildlife.

Buck noted that many handicapped hunters are presently forced to either break the law or refrain from hunting.

He added "If society is to attempt to treat the physically disabled fairly, then all existing legislation should be designed to take into account special circumstances such as this, wherever possible".

Mr. Farran reports plans are very much in the design stage, the Electric Utility Planning Council reports that design is well along for the plant, and that an application to proceed with it will be made to the provincial approving authority, the Energy Resources Conservation Board by midyear.

According to present planning the Dodds-Round Hill unit will be built in three stages, two being 375 megawatts, and the third rated at 500 megawatts. The first, proposed for 1980, is estimated to cost $180.1 million, the second $119.5 million, and the third reported the province's largest, would be in service in 1982 at a cost of $158.9 million.

Power company to apply for Dodds-Round Hill site

The Dodds-Round Hill power plant is still very much in the design stage, reports the Hon. Roy Farran, Alberta Minister of Telephones and Utilities. Contacted by The Canadian through MLA Gordon Stromberg, Mr. Farran added that very few firm decisions have been made regarding it with the exception that some five additional power units will be required in the Alberta system to meet load forecasts of the power utility firms operating in the province. Some additional capacity will be needed each year from 1980 to 1983.

Deadlines extended

Miss mailing your income tax by last night? Or mounting a new license plate sticker?

Cheer up . . . you've not going to worry about. Both the deadlines on government and the provincial government have decided to allow an extension on the deadlines and both for the same reasons . . . the mail airlift all over the country, and the serious flood conditions in many parts

The income tax deadline has been extended three weeks, to May 21, while the provincial auto licence deadline is extended to the end of the month. As far as is known it's the first time it is that the income tax deadline has been extended by Ottawa and while Alberta customarily allows one month's grace in the mounting of licenses, this is thought to be the first time an extra month has been allowed.

Spring Clean Up

The farmer loses again

Three weeks ago today at the national transportation conference, the chairman of the Canadian Wheat Board, G. Vogel told the gathering that Canada is rapidly losing its reputation as a dependable grain shipper, in addition to losing potential sales of millions of bushels of wheat.

The problem hinges basically around the railways, Mr. Vogel pointed out, in urging that drastic steps are needed to correct it. There were [illegible] vessels waiting in port right at the time of the meeting, said Mr. Vogel, with eleven more expected to arrive during the week. All wanted to load wheat, but even if the targets set by the railways were met starting immediately, the West Coast backlog wouldn't be cleared away until the end of July.

What causes all this problem . . . in a country that has proved repeatedly it can produce - and deliver - fantastic quantities of grain?

Well, for one thing the railway strike of last fall. While the railway workers were out looking for higher wages, some 45,000 boxcars of grain were missed, and that represents about ninety-five million bushels of grain. And you know what the price of wheat is today?

On top of that, and not including the cars lost in the strike, the railways are more than 26,500 cars behind their own minimum targets, even since January. And that represents another fifty-six million bushels.

Mr. Vogel points out that in March, The Toronto Globe and Mail reported the railways had shown major increases in freight handled, according to Statistics Canada, representing a 12.5 percent increase overall. Iron ore and concentrates were up more than 52 percent. Sand, gravel and sulphur were up 31 percent, piggyback and container traffic up 25 percent.

But grain? It fell off by 16 percent, and car loadings were off 20 percent. That's a full fifth off on loadings, or only four cars for every five loaded a year earlier. Where there were 25,000 cars in grain service last year, there were only 22,000 this year, but that's not a drop of a fifth.

Not only does the farmer get stuck with the loss of revenue from wheat sales missed, but he also gets stuck with the demurrage bill for ships riding at anchor unable to load. And to make matters worse still, if the sales commitments, which are actual contracts, cannot be met, the farmers, (through the Wheat Board) must face all the costs and charges of contractual default.

Conservative Member of Parliament for Vegreville riding, Don Mazankowski, sought relief for some of these charges on the farmer in the House of Commons. But members in other parties refused Mr. Mazankowski the unanimous consent needed to debate the issue of charges he [illegible] others than [illegible]

So what happens in the end? You guessed it. The farmer gets stuck with the [illegible] load once again.

Rehabilitating Canadian rehabilitation

Everyone agrees that Canadian prisons do not reform nor do they rehabilitate Those who do benefit from the present system are judges, lawyers, wardens, guards, civil servants working the departments of correction, th epolice and the plethora of social workers in and out of the jailhouse walls

It is time we quite sending our lawbreakers to a finishing school for criminals which our prisons have proven themselves time and time again to be. Let's keep them in the community

Surely the real function of judges, lawyers and police should be to save people from jail. Maybe we should depend less on the adversary system and experiment, except in cases of violence, with a procedure similar to the one successfully applied in family courts.

The only way to teach anyone to behave as a responsible member of the group is to keep him in the group. Supervision for varying periods of time, according to the nature of the crime, would allow a more wholesome adjustment to society than a session behind bars.

Such a scheme would make greater demands on the community and could not succeed without the support and help of all citizens and institutions.

It is time to recognize that the wrongdoer has needs which are not being met. Rather than jail — which tends to worsen his maladjustment — he needs to feel that he is respected. He should be forced to take a trade for which he is suited, given psychiatric help where it is warranted, and guided to a more interesting and rewarding life.

Society wants to be protected against violence. But the truly violent make up only a fraction of those serving jail sentences. The really dangerous ones could be held in about two good sized prisons — one in the east and one in the west. Highly trained professionals could staff these institutions where inmates would stay for as long as it takes for them to change.

Let's keep our problem people at home with their families. Let's help them to work out their problems just as Children's Aid Societies help families with their problems.

Let's see that we provide creative work for them to do so that they can pay taxes and generally become good citizens. With supportive help they will realize that it is easier to conform than to swim against the current. The medieval system of jails has failed. So let's try something else.

Oil: The slippery issue

By Peter Ward

OTTAWA (CEP)

Since the October 1972 election which left the Trudeau Liberals with a minority in the house of commons, there has not been an election atmosphere in the capital to match the mood of April

The Tories have been eager for election ever since the results came in from the 1972 contest, and been checked continually by the Liberal NDP alliance. But in late March the NDP began putting out the story that they were ready and willing to defeat the government.

Now that suggestion, if true does not necessarily mean there will be a government defeat in Parliament. The NDP, if they have their [illegible] would like to see the government [illegible] on the issue of continued concessions [illegible] corporations [illegible] the tax field. The Tories are understandably [illegible] that issue because they [illegible] that if they combine with the NDP the government [illegible] would shrug, [illegible] majority, and change the [illegible] concessions [illegible] the Tories without [illegible] and without [illegible] the corporate [illegible]

The Tories would sooner [illegible] government [illegible] then vote [illegible] that the NDP [illegible] for a [illegible] unless the Liberals [illegible] step of [illegible] profits tax.

So far the scenario [illegible] ed is conventional wisdom in the Press Gallery. [illegible] so sure that the budget is in fact going to cause the defeat of the Government, because the Trudeau government as a minority has shown a remarkable ability to circumvent the expected when it comes to political crises. For that talent the government can largely thank President of the Privy Council Allan MacEachen. No other man on the front benches has contributed so much to the tactics which have avoided election

But there is an issue which has put the government ranks into disarray: oil. First there was the question of high priced heating oil bought at tremendously high prices by the government in early winter as insurance against an oil-short winter.

No one would argue about the prudence of ensuring adequate oil supplies for Canada in a shortage situation, but the explanations on price and quality offered in early April have left little doubt that the politicians didn't know what they were doing, and the advice they received was bad.

Add to that incompetence the mess created by the crisis bargaining with the Provinces for a national oil policy. We've been told first that the new price will mean only seven to eight cents a gallon more in the west, one to one-and-a-half cents in the east. Then that estimate was revised as the government discovered a few items it hadn't considered. Then the estimate was hiked again as even more factors which had been missed by Ottawa came to light

There is just reason for the government to be in disarray on oil. The potential is there for the opposition to create such a stink over the mistakes which have been made that the government will be defeated. Whether or not that will happen remains to be seen

The Editor,
The Mercury,
5211 - 50th Street,
Tofield, Alberta.

Dear Sir,

To the letter signed "Yours For Fair Play", R.R 2, Tofield

I would like to ask the kindness of The Mercury to clarify some points that were brought to my attention as the result of a recent telephone meeting in Ministik.

First, I would like to indicate that it is my conviction that the people of the area should decide what is best for them rather than the M.L.A. The point I tried to make is that the community has never been given the opportunity of indicating to the Alberta Government Telephones exactly which direction they would like to have as its Extended Area Service for toll free telephoning

It seems to me that the responsible position to take is that it is my duty as an M.L.A. to represent the desires of the area rather than influencing them, which I believe to be a very basic principle of democracy and one that I personally have held

The second point I think it is important to clarify that A G T officials have indicated to me that or at least led me to believe if Extended Area Service from the Ministik area was extended to Edmonton the service to Tofield would still remain as it presently is

In conclusion, may I express my appreciation that the people of the Ministik area have indicated sufficient confidence in me as their representative to invite me to sit in on their meeting

Common sense suggestions from constituents are always appreciated and I would look forward to discussing this again with the community at the earliest opportunity

Cordially,
Dr Walt Buck M.L.A.,

Find Alberta in Germany

Some Canadian soldier is proud enough of being from Alberta that he mounted a permanent metal bracket on his car emblazoned with the Alberta rose, and the inscription "Alberta is Wild Rose Country". Chuck MacLean of The Camrose Canadian, left, and Peter Pickersgill of Vulcan were delighted to see it in the parking lot of the Canadian Forces base at Lahr, Germany, recently while they were part of a group of 18 Canadian newspapermen who spent several days visiting Canadian NATO troops in Germany, and Canadian UNFICYP troops in Cyprus. Lakeshore - McKenzie news items

Mrs. Ellen Eaton

The Lakeshore U. C. W. will hold their May meeting at the home of Mrs. Barb (Ronnie) Gorglem on Wednesday afternoon May 8th at 2 p.m., if the weather and roads permit.

George and Ida Niemetz were Saturday evening visitors at the home of George's brother, Charlie and Mickey Niemetz.

Howard and Mae Ferguson and granddaughter, Wanda Weir were Monday evening visitors at the home of Howard's sister, Mickey and Charlie Niemetz.

Dede and Robert Goubault of Drayton Valley and Judy and Dennis Elford, their daughter and son-in-law, of Edmonton were weekend visitors at the home of Dede's parents, John and Mary Wood.

Rollie Schacker and Keith Francis were Sunday visitors at the home of John and Mary Wood.

Mrs. Carol Derksen left for her home in Prince George, B. C. on Saturday after spending a few days at the home of her brother, Arnold and Deanna Nelson.

Mrs. Lillian Nelson, assistant matron at the Ottewell Nursing Home in Edmonton, spent Friday and Saturday at the home of her son, Arnold and Deanna Nelson.

Mrs. Mae Ferguson motored to Edmonton on Monday taking her daughter, Mrs. Loretta Weir and Mrs. Mary Jackson up with her. Loretta went to have her foot checked before having surgery.

Mrs. Ellen Eaton accompanied friends to Edmonton on Monday to pick up new glasses, but, on arrival, found they were held up in the Edmonton Post Office due to the strike. This means another trip to the city and shows what inconveniences such strikes cause the public and often at a great expense to those who can least afford it.

While in Edmonton, Ellen called on Mrs. Ruth Wickenberg who is recuperating after having surgery. Ruth was feeling much better and getting around again. Ellen also spent part of the afternoon with her granddaughter, Linda Niemetz at her suite on the University campus.

Rain and fine snow hit the district Monday overnight, continuing through Tuesday. Although not too much moisture fell so far, the forecast is for colder weather and more snow. Farmers were just beginning to hope they could get started with their combining and save at least a little of their grain from mice, rabbits and birds. Mice have really destroyed at least one half of the crop where there are stooks. Farmers have said they haven't seen so many mice for several years. This destruction of the grain leaves it hardly worth combining and threshing with the high cost of labour and gas and oil, as the farmer won't get enough out of the grain to pay the expenses already encountered in harvesting.

College gives summer classes

Dean Vincent Erikson of Camrose Lutheran College announced last Thursday, that the College will offer courses in a spring session and a summer session, 1974. Enrollment to date indicates enough interest that it is expected additional persons will enroll by the time courses begin.

The courses in question are Biology 298, in Ecology, and Physical Education 280 or 382, in Outdoor Education, to be offered May 26 to June 15; and English 398, children's Literature, and Music 210, to be offered July 2 to August 9.

The spring session of three weeks, which is to be mainly of a field-trip nature, is being taught by Dr. David G. Larson and Professor Garry Gibson.

The summer session courses, designed mainly for Kindergarten and Elementary teachers, are to be taught by Professors Ed Friesen (English), and James Neff (Music).

Enrollment will be taken in the summer session courses up to June 24. Enrollment in the outdoor courses may still be possible as well.

Decision to confirm the offering of two additional Physical Education courses, in aquatics and basketball, for July 29 to August 16, will be made in July.

Though one spring session course was given in 1972, the offering of these courses marks the first time the College has offered summer session courses for university academic credit.

IT'S MOTHER'S DAY

It's the time of the year when we honour one of my favourite people - Mother! The following was written by Sharon Stredwick. I think our Mom's must have gone to the same school. My Mom was just as mean to me!

I HAD THE MEANEST MOTHER IN THE WORLD

I had the meanest mother in the world. While other kids got candy for breakfast, I had to have eggs, cereal or toast. When others had soft drinks and chips for lunch, I had to eat a sandwich. As you can guess, my supper was also different from other kids !

My mean mother insisted on knowing where I was at all times. You'd think I was at work on a chain gang. She had to know my friends and what we were doing. She insisted if we said we'd be home in an hour, that it be one hour, not longer. I am nearly ashamed to admit it, but she acutally struck me, not once, but each time I disobeyed. Now you can begin to see how mean she really was.

The worst is yet to come. I had to be in bed each night by nine and up early in the morning. On Saturday, I could not sleep until noon like my friends. So while my friends slept, my mother actually had the nerve to break the child labour law and make me work.

I had to wash dishes, make beds, learn to cook and all sorts of cruel things. She always insisted on me telling the whole truth and nothing but the truth, even if it killed me, which it nearly did.

By the time I was a teenager, she was much wiser and my life became even more unbearable. None of this tooting the horn of the car for me to come running. She embarrassed me - had to know who my date was and he had to come to the door to get me.

I forgot to mention that while my friends were dating at the mature age of 12 and 13, my old fashioned mother refused to let me date until the age of 15 and 16. At 15 it was only school function dates and that was maybe twice a year.

My mother was a complete failure as a mother. I have never been arrested or beaten by my mate. And whom do I have to blame for the terrible way I turned out. You are right my mean mother! Look at all the things I missed: never got to march in a protest or take in a riot; and a million other things some of my friends did. She forced me to grow up into a God-fearing, honest, educated adult.

Using this background, I am trying to raise my family. I stand a little taller and am filled with pride when my children call me mean. Because, you see, I thank God he gave me the meanest mother in the world.

NEWSLETTERS

Our first newsletter from the Ryley Office is in the mail. I hope you will enjoy it. You will find the format different from the one Mrs. Durie used. I hope to have a newsletter out every couple of months. If you are not on the mailing list phone or write the office. We will be glad to include your name. It's free!

The existance of oil North of the 60th parallel has been known since 1789 when Alexander Mackenzie found oil seeps along the Mackenzie River near Norman Wells.

As I see it

Walt Buck, M.L.A. Clover Bar

PROVINCIAL PARK FOR EDMONTON

The Provincial Government has announced a 35 million dollar park for the City of Edmonton. This park will extend from the High Level Bridge to the Clover Bar bridges, using both sides of the river. A special weir (dam) close to the Clover Bar bridge will create a lake 9 miles long which can be used for boating and canoeing, however, all motorized vehicles boats and snow machines will be banned.

PARK IN CLOVER BAR

A large portion of the proposed park will be in my constituency. This gives me a great deal of satisfaction in that I have been pressing for a park in the Clover Bar—Bremner area for the past 6 years and look forward to seeing the park develop.

LAND FREEZE

The land along the river from Clover Bar bridge to Fort Sask. will be "frozen" to development. The minister, when I asked the question in the House, stated that this will include the river and areas suitable for park land. People owning land located between Clover Bar and Fort Sask. will want to know the status of their property as to what development can take place. This matter I pledge to pursue in future days. ....

COSTS

I am in favor of the City Provincial Park, however I am concerned at the cost being unrealistic. The Government has not indicated to the House its feasibility study on cost. The cost of 35 million dollars may escalate and end up being 50-75 million dollars. It is our responsibility as an opposition to question and probe to make sure that the tax payers dollars are wisely spent.

Your questions and comments are welcome.

They say time heals all sorrow,
And helps us to forget;
But time has only proven,
How much we miss him yet.
A happy home we once enjoyed
How sweet the memory still;
But death has left a loneliness
The world can never fill
Someday we hope to meet again
Someday we know not when,
To clasp his hand in a
a better land
Never to part again

Two years ago, on Sunday April 28, it was 80 above. Last year we had a heavy wet snow fall with some wind.

Ray Scabar, who lives at Fraser, B.C., had the misfortune of falling into the river and, to date, they have not found his body. He worked as boiler man on a dredge. Ray worked at the cheese factory in Ryley for a few years and is a brother of Art Scabar.

Today we woke up to a thick white covering on ground and trees and 31 above (May 1st) after lightning and thunder during the night.

CLBI Resurrection Ambassadors return after months of travelling

The Resurrection Ambassadors, a versatile team of Gospel singers and christian dramatists, have returned from seven months of travelling over 22,000 miles, under the auspices of the Canadian Lutheran Bible Institute. Five of the six members are graduates of the school.

Their tour began in September and concluded on April 21st when they presented their homecoming concert at Menaah Lutheran in Camrose. Before Christmas their tour extended from Alberta to the Niagara Peninsula in Ontario. After spending Christmas with their families, Resurrection travelled in Minnesota, Wisconsin, Pennsylvania, New York, Maine, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, Quebec, Ontario and Michigan. They found many opportunities to minister in churches, schools, senior citizen homes, and penitentiaries.

In view of the enthusiastic response, Resurrection believes that this ministry has been a success and a similar version is expected to continue next year with the complete support of the CLBI. Resurrection's record, "Alive in Jesus" will be available in August.

Beaver students will hold Model Parliment

By Lena Bell

County of Beaver High school students went to the polls on April 10, to elect 31 representatives to their first Model Parliament scheduled for Ryley School on May 10.

The Progressive Conservative Party was the single most successful organization capturing 23 of 31 seats. The Liberals won 15, the New Democratic Party 10, the Social Credit Party 2 and the New Communist Party 2.

A Conservative minority government has been formed under the leadership of Prime Minister Wendy Kryzanowski of Viking. The Liberal forces will be led by Francis Dansberger of Tofield, the New Democratic Party by Brian Lyons of Ryley.

On May 10, the parties will caucus from 1:05 p.m. to 2:30 p.m. and assemble in the House immediately afterwards. The usual formalities and rituals associated with the opening of Parliament will be observed. Governor General, Bonnie Tesker will read the speech from the throne before the Honorable Members take on the matters of state in the House. The order of the Day include the presentation of legislation on Taxation of corporate profits, a guaranteed annual wage, education and foreign aid.

Donald Mazankoski, federal transportation critic and Member of Parliament for Vegreville will occupy the Position of Speaker. Among the other prominent personalities who will lend a hand are John Bazuk MLA, Vegreville and Werner Schmidt leader of the Provincial Social Credit Party.

The sitting promises to be both interesting and educational. The general public is invited to attend the afternoon session from 2:30 to 5:30 and the evening session from 7:00 to 9:00.

Participants will break for a supper banquet in the Ryley Community Hall beginning at 5:45.

Flyers honored

By Lena Bell

A very successful and much appreciated banquet and dance was held in honor of the Ryley Flyer's on Friday, May 3rd at the Ryley Community Hall.

The head table included Vera Lukaess, Vera Bath, Henry Van Herkel, Lorne Booth, Lorne Lehman, Bob Dueck, Don Shands, Rodney Martin, Elston Solberg, Ken Boettger, Delbert Boettger, Doug Lehman, and Roger Copland, Danny O'Brien, Wade Magnuson and Glen Magnuson.

Absent were Dale Milan and Rick Dueck.

Master of ceremonies was Darryl Albrecht who gave a few words about each player. Following the banquet was a dance with music supplied by "The Sherwoods". All proceeds were directed to the swimming pool project.

ENERGY COMPANY DEBATE

The highlight of last week's action in the House was the debate on the Energy Compact.

The bill will provide the opportunity for Albertans to participate in the development of the Oil Sands. I certainly support the concept of citizen participation in projects such as this. It gives the people an opportunity to become more involved in resource development.

There are however some sections of the Bill that bother me.

WILL SMALL INVESTOR BENEFIT??

The small investor must be given more of a chance to buy stocks. The present set up may frighten the ordinary citizen from investing in that the money required may seem beyond his ability to borrow. This would mean that people would give up their rights to someone else to buy shares.

Our party has asked that a portion of the shares be held so that people could buy small amounts of shares over a longer period of time.

I had the privilege of attending Mr. and Mrs. Bachelder's 50th anniversary on Sunday, May 5th. The long time residents of the Minnehik District are a credit to the area and to Alberta and our congratulations go out to them.

On the way home, I dropped in to visit with the people in the Cooking Lake District on the occasion of a "going away" party for several families who are leaving the district. Our best wishes to the people in their new homes.

Any problems, concerns, please write Box 1030, Fort Saskatchewan or phone collect to 513-3660 or 225-3801, Legislative Building.

Ryley Mayor resigns and Cross takes over

At the last regular meeting of the Village of Ryley Council, A. R. 'Bob' Cross was appointed as the village's mayor.

Mr. Cross, who had been deputy mayor, will replace E. H. Albrecht whose resignation had been submitted for health reasons.

Three readings were given to a by-law which would authorize the use of the 1974 assessment roll in 1975.

It was decided that St Avenue, up to 50 Street and, starting at the corner of 52 Avenue up to 49 Street and 56 Avenue would be oiled this year.

The Town Foreman was authorized to proceed with the conversion of the village's one-half ton truck to use as a garbage truck. Cost of the conversion is estimated to be between $500 and $600.

A grant of $250 is to be given to the Lions Club for work done in the Community Hall. The issue of the Public Library, presently housed in the Ryley School, was tabled until a Library Board has been established.

Council agreed to forward unapproved minutes of each regular meeting to The Mercury for publication

Newly appointed Mayor Cross chaired the meeting with Councillors Dawson, Robson and Ruddy in attendance.

Watson (Tofield) Ltd. has contract

Watson (Tofield) Ltd. was awarded the contract for the poultry barn for Alberta Department of Agriculture to be built at Oliver, Alberta, for the sum of $153,414, announced recently by W. O. Backus, minister of public works.

Other prices were received from M and M Construction at $113,865, Binder Construction with $117,785, Carmode and Dickson Construction at $126,000 Orlando Construction with $126,240, Pentagon Industries at $132,636, G and D Construction at $123,814, and H.D.C. Construction with $131,975.

Obstacle Course!

Law of the marketplace

Sooner or later, history shows, the consumer sets the price for commodities in the market place by indicating through his actions what price he's willing to pay for any particular item. Over a period of time, consumers will give in to rising prices, but eventually the time comes when, in effect, they rise up and say, collectively, "This is all we're willing to pay. If the price goes higher, we'll do without." And even if it's a necessity, they manage to find some substitute, or find ways to reduce the importance of the item until lack of sales brings the price into line again.

Similarly, it seems to us, the federal government finds itself in this sort of marketplace, in connection with the airport firemen across the country who are demanding parity pay with the wages of firemen in the communities in which they work. Bargaining with any government can be a pretty arduous assignment, we know, but given the situation which prevails, it seems to us the time has come for the federal government to simply say to the firemen "We don't care what the municipal firemen in your city are paid . . . are all we're willing to pay for this job is the rate established. If you want more, then go to work for the city fire department."

In 1974 it may sound heretical. But it didn't sound any more heretical in 1944 than the sky-high wage-price settlement back in the 30's was. It wasn't heretical in the depression days of 1921, either, or most any other decade in history. Nor is it today.

Lost in the shuffle

With all the pressure over budgets, and beating the government, and election ammunition let's hope that Mr. Trudeau can find the time to forget the excuse for changing the name of Canada's Capital City, from just plain Ottawa, which it has been for more than a hundred years, to Ottawa-Hull. It may be that the Capital is spreading out across Hull's creek, going to other municipalities over some of those bridges, and it may be that there's going to be many thousands more [illegible] record of the fact. It will not [illegible] Ottawa, for instance, to provide the [illegible] Hull, or Hull to provide the [illegible] Ottawa. It just seems to us that the Capital is spreading out across Hull's creek, going to other municipalities over some of those bridges, and it may be that there's going to be many thousands more [illegible]

The Canadian Pyramids

OTTAWA — (Can) — A young couple we know has been transferred to Ottawa and after two days of house-hunting they arrived at our place glassy-eyed over the prices being asked for the most modest of homes.

These days in the capital you can't get much of a roof for less than $50,000, and mortgage rates have gone through the sky. Ottawa certainly isn't unique, either, because the dizzy real estate spiral has been taking place right across the country. The price boom has brought cheers from those who already own homes, despair to those who still dream of owning one someday.

The people who are really winning, of course, are the lawyers who charge a percentage fee for every sale, from both seller and buyer, and the real estate brokers, whose percentage commissions mean soaring revenue.

But people are still buying at unreal prices, and for unreal rates of interest on gigantic mortgages. Every customer for a new house, every large credit buyer, means another person who will oppose any halt to the escalating inflationary tragedy of the economy.

It might conceivably be possible to halt inflation, with tough, tough medicine, but there will be no rolling prices back — not ever. How would you like to be in the spot where you've just signed up for a $40,000 mortgage, and suddenly some government, provincial or federal, does something about housing prices which chops the market value of your $40,000 beauty down to say $30,000?

What's happening is that there is an increasing portion of society with a vested interest in continuing inflation - including the government, which still collects more taxes in real terms, despite indexing of tax decisions, when inflation takes place.

The issue of the economy is growing in importance to the country's future. About the same rate as inflation, and yet nothing is really being done to cool things down. The budget isn't out yet, but you can bet that it will predict a deficit, and we'll be off on another round.

Prime Minister Trudeau warns us from time to time that it is folly to try and take more out of society than you put into it, and however sound his philosophy, his government continues to ignore that advice, perhaps because when translated into practical measures, the theory becomes much less palatable.

But surely there is no excuse for government spending doubling in six years. Surely there is no excuse for continuing to spend, spend, spend, and when you run short of revenue, print more money and leave the deficit budget route.

Like the old pyramid club routine, the dizzy house of blocks we're building is going to collapse someday, unless we perform some nasty belt-tightening.

Solve-a-crime

You and Curtis Randolph are conversing in the yard of his beautiful suburban home when an expensive little sports car roars into the driveway, skids to a stop, and Randolph's son, Tom, climbs out.

"Where were you this morning at the time the robbery took place?" you ask him.

Tom Randolph looks fixedly at you. "I've been out for at least three hours — giving my car a workout. I'm entered in the big sports car rally this coming weekend."

You turn back to the father. "Mr. Randolph, would you mind going over your story again?"

"As I've already told you," says Randolph, "after my morning shower and shave in the upstairs bathroom, I came down to my study and found the wall safe wide open and more than $3,000 in cash gone — also all my wife's jewels worth another $50,000. Of course I'm covered by insurance and don't stand to lose much — but I'd still like to catch up with the thief!"

"Guess I'll have to wait a little longer for that money I asked you for last night," mutters Tom.

His father darts an impatient look at him.

"How about our household staff?" you ask.

"Well, my housekeeper has been away since early last night, and today's her day off. My yard man left for town early this morning to pick up some supplies. I gave him some money from the safe this morning, so I know the money was still in there at that time."

"You haven't much to go on, have you?" Tom remarks to you.

"On the contrary," you reply "I have enough to take you in with me for further questioning. You're my No. 1 suspect!"

SOLUTION

Because of Tom's failure to show any surprise or ask any questions when you asked him where he was at the time of the robbery. If he had been out in his sports car, as he claimed he would have known nothing about the robbery.

Liberals cut Mazankowski bid to aid wheat farmers

The Chairman of the Canadian Wheat Board, Mr. G. Vogel, has said that the Board faces the prospect of contractural default in meeting its sales commitments of grain due to a breakdown in Canada's transportation system. If this occurs, all such charges and costs will be borne by the producers of Canada. In addition, he stated that vessel demurrage charges continue to climb and will cost producers millions of dollars until the situation is rectified.

Presently, some twenty vessels are awaiting grain in Vancouver with more arriving each day. Throughout this fiasco, Canada is rapidly losing its reputation as a dependable grain shipper.

In the House of Commons, on April 11th, Don Mazankowski Member of Parliament for Vegreville, moved a motion urging the government to take immediate steps to ensure that Canada's grain producers be relieved of all costs and charges caused by contractural default and, further, that all abnormal vessel demurrage charges be paid for out of the federal treasury.

The motion which requires unanimous consent of the House in order to be debated, was refused by some Liberal members of the Commons.

Hydroponic gardening

The Alberta Horticultural Research Center at Brooks started a hydroponic trial last summer to find answers to the many questions that people are asking about this type of greenhouse vegetable production in Alberta.

Hydroponic gardening is growing plants in water to which a combination of fertilizers are added to provide the nutrients. In most cases a sterile media like sand or gravel is used in the growing bed.

Gordon Crane, horticultural technician at the research center, says the aim of hydroponic gardening is to gain complete control of the fertilizer feeding program and to get away from soil-borne diseases. This type of gardening is very popular today, particularly in the southern United States where there are some very big operations. The reasons for its popularity are not very clear, but they could be related to the fact that good soil is becoming expensive and hard to get or to the fact that hydroponic gardening is reported to give increased production.

Probably the main advantages claimed by proponents of hydroponic gardening are higher production, better quality produce and less disease. The Alberta Horticultural Research Center is conducting trials to find out whether these claims are true.

Disadvantages to hydroponic gardening appear to be the high initial capital outlay for the extra equipment, and that, in the final analysis, there is no substitute for good soil. Good soil is plentiful in this province.

According to Mr. Crane, tomato plants are being used in the trial being carried out at the center. They are grown in a greenhouse and fed plant nutrients through the watering system. If this small-scale trial shows promise of producing worthwhile results, it will be enlarged to provide more reliable data for a commercial operation, Mr. Crane says.

At the present time there are three hydroponic growers in Alberta who are having moderate success growing vegetables by this method.

Further information on hydroponic gardening can be obtained from the Alberta Horticultural Research Station, Brooks.

This is the way you apply CARBYNE when it's windy

Floodjet tips spray a wide (40°) band so you can set them closer to the ground where spraying is comparatively unaffected by wind. This means you can use Carbyne almost any time your wild oats reach the 2-leaf stage. You don't have to wait until the wind calms down, and so miss the perfect application time for wild oat control.

See us for Carbyne, the wild oat fighter, and Floodjet tips, the great wind cheaters. They're the ideal pair for wild oat control.

The significance of co-operatives

Co-operatives offer a highly desirable means of developing business enterprises under the continuing widespread ownership and democratic control of their users.

They provide millions of consumers and primary producers with a stake in the economy; with an ensurance of value in business services.

Eighty per cent of the great grain crop of western Canada flows through co-operative elevators. In many provinces most of the dairy products are handled through producer co-operatives. In each province the farmers own and operate a significant and leading program in providing themselves with feed, seed, fertilizer and other farm supplies. Co-operatives for savings and credit known as credit unions or caisses populaires, serve six million members, including many government employees, industrial employees, farmers and people of various other occupations.

Co-operatives for insurance on fire, auto, life and other coverages set commendable standards. Co-operatives are moving rapidly into the challenge of housing. In all provinces some co-operatives are giving better value in food and other consumer goods. They make significant contributions in numerous other fields. Organizations range from small intimate groups for community self-help to powerful enterprises on a regional or national scale, all dedicated to the service of their patrons.

Many co-operatives have tended to expect and to use less assistance from government than have other forms of business. The role of co-operatives, as well as governments has changed. Co-operatives now should engage in joint planning with governments in achieving national and regional objectives. Governments should see in co-operatives an importance force for viable projects in Canadian economic development, a medium for constructive social participation by millions of citizens. —Statement by the Executive of Co-operative Union of Canada.

Annual flowers

Now is the time to consider the annual flowers that you will need for your garden this spring.

The easiest way of obtaining bedding plants is from the specialized growers. These plants have been started under ideal conditions and are usually in bloom. The plants should be free from insects and diseases and have a deep green color, be well branched and be grown in sterilized soil. Do not buy stunted plants which often have difficulty making growth later. Small healthy looking plants are usually the best buy. Blooms in the containers are nice but not necessary as most growers put in stakes showing color and suggesting spacing, approximate height and some cultural information.

STARTING PLANTS FROM SEED

Annual flowers can be grown from seed relatively easily if you have a small greenhouse or a special light set-up in the basement. Plants grown on windows sills or poorly lighted areas are weak and do not thrive properly when planted out.

Buy only good seed, and be sure it is fresh. Seed saved from previous years usually loses its vitality under household conditions. When sown it tends to germinate slowly and gives poor seedlings. Keep the seed dry and cool until sown, or follow special instructions if given on the package. When buying seed, look for the new varieties listed under F1 hybrids. Although they cost more than the seed of the inbred varieties, their superiority makes them well worth the extra price.

Follow the recommendation in the Alberta Horticultural Guide for the date to start the seeds. Before sowing the seed, collect the containers, wash and sterilize with a solution of one part of chlorine bleach to ten parts water. The soil media should also be sterilized by baking in the oven.

Place the moist soil in a container, either a pan or metal tray and bury a raw potato in the soil bake in a medium oven until the potato is cooked, at which time the soil will be sterile. Sterilization of the soil and containers helps to prevent "Damping Off," a disease of seedlings so it is also a good idea to treat the tools used as well. Damping off causes the seeds to rot and seedlings to collapse and die. If it occurs, it is best to discard the soil and containers and start over again.

Seedlings should be started in loose, well drained, fine textured and low nutrient media. The media most often used is a 1:1 mixture of fine sand and peat moss.

Fill the container about two-thirds full, level and soak thoroughly, then sift more media on top till almost full. Sow the seeds either in a shallow furrow or, if larger amounts of seedlings are needed, evenly over the container. Sift a fine layer of sand over the seeds, then water with a fine mist and cover the container with a sheet of plastic, holding it above the surface with stakes. Do not forget to put a marker in the container to remind you what you sowed. Wooden pot labels can be written on with a laundry pen while pencil works well on plastic labels.

The instructions on the seed package should be followed for best germination. For example, petunias germinate fastest and more evenly at 80 degree F. with some light, while pansies germinate best at 80 degree F. in total darkness.

The containers should not need to be watered until after the seedlings have emerged. Do not put the containers in direct sun as heat build-up under the plastic can kill the germinating seedlings. Once the seedlings have germinated remove the plastic and allow them as much light as possible.

TRANSPLANTING

When the seedlings have developed two true leaves, they should be transplanted into individual growing-on containers. These can be commercially available peat pots, jiffy strips or plastic trays, or such things as plastic and paper cups, and egg trays with holes punched in the bottom. They should be filled with a potting soil mix having good drainage and water holding properties. A sterilized mixture of three parts garden soil, one part sand and two parts peat moss is good for most transplants.

Use a knife or a wooden pot label to dig under the seedlings to separate them. Pick up the seedlings gently by one of the cotyledons. Do not lift them by the stem as it bruises easily. Make a hole with a dibble and press the soil in from the sides. Try not to plant seedlings any deeper than they were growing in the seed container. Water the container thoroughly and place on the greenhouse bench or about 6 inches away from the flourescent lights. Fertilize the plants about every two weeks using a solution of one tablespoon of soluble fertilizer, such as 20:20:20, to one gallon of water.

SETTING OUT

Prepare the beds ahead of time by spading deeply and adding compost, manure or peat moss. Do not be in too much of a hurry to set the plants out. Late spring frosts can kill or severely reduce the vigor of the plants. Lift out each plant from its container or separate them if grown in a block and set them in the holes. If the plants are in fiber pots remove the paper. Peat pots can be placed in the hole as they will rot quite easily. After setting out, water the plants with starter solution, using about one cup per plant of a solution of one tablespoon of 10-52-10 to one gallon of water.

SOME SUGGESTED VARIETIES

The Alberta Horticultural Research Center [illegible] had [illegible] flowers trials for a number of years. In the last two years we have had an All-American Annual Flower trial ground. In it we compare new (unnamed) varieties against standard accepted varieties. The reports on these are forwarded to the All-American Selection Committee who tabulate the results from all the trial grounds in North America. If a variety has new characteristics and is outstanding it can be awarded a gold medal. The gold [illegible] [illegible] 1974 has been awarded to the Zinnia "Scarlet Ruffles." This was on display at Brooks in 1973. At the end of the season the plants were 24 inches tall, had a spread of 20 inches and produced many dark scarlet 3 inch blooms on long stems.

Mineral production in the Northwest Territories for 1972 is valued at $124,149,000, a nine per cent increase from the 1971 production of $114,228,949. This increase in value was partly due to higher metal prices. There also was increased production of silver from 1,711,000 ounces in 1971 to 4,399,000 ounces in 1972. There was a slight decrease in the value of gold production.

Last week we honored mothers. This week let's remember mothers who are perhaps a bit older - grandmothers.

WHAT A GRANDMOTHER IS

A grandmother is a lady who has no children of her own, so she likes other peoples little girls and boys. A grandfather is a man grandmother. He goes for walks with boys and they talk about fishing and tractors and other things like that.

Grandmothers dont have to do anything except be there. They're old so they shouldn't play hard or run. It is enough if they drive us to the market where the pretend horse is and have lots of dimes ready. Or, if they take us for walks they should slow down past things like pretty leaves or caterpillars. They should never say "Hurry up."

Usually they are fat but not too fat to tie shoes. They wear glasses and funny underwear. They can take their teeth out and gums off.

It is better if they don't typewrite or play cards except with us. They don't have to be smart, only answer questions like why dogs hate cats and how come God isn't married. They don't talk baby talk like visitors do because it is hard to understand. When they read to us, they dont skip or mind if it is the same story again.

Everybody should try to have one, especially if you don't have television, because Grandmas are the only grownups who have got time.

Our heritage . . .

By Sybil Fennell

"I told them, it's not like this in MY COUNTRY!" My old neighbour was pouring out his impressions of his recent trip to the land of his birth.

"For 15 years," I responded "when I've heard you talk about MY COUNTRY you've always meant Poland. Now after a six-week trip you say MY COUNTRY and you mean Canada. How do you account for that?"

The question caught him by surprise. He hadn't realized it himself and he puffed away on his pipe to consider the implications.

In the silence my eyes wandered over the backyards around the block. Twenty years before, this had been a golf course and we were a motley bunch that had chosen to settle on this block in Edmonton, Alberta, Canada. There had been three or four changes only. It was a stable unspectacular block. What had we achieved in 20 years? What small part of the fabric of the city — or the country had we woven? We consisted of a couple from Yugoslavia, two from the Ukraine, two Alberta-Scottish couples, one Polish, two French-Canadian, one English and one family who arrived as refugees from the Hungarian Revolution.

We quickly learned of our common humanity. Helped each other with fences and lawns, basements, children and sickness. We built a community centre, petitioned for better street lighting and all had our vote come election time, be it city, provincial or federal. Children were trained from basic ideals that were remarkably similar. It was a quiet neighborhood, and safe. Our children were taught to respect other people's property — and their own.

We gradually became more aware of each other's patterns of thought. Mary, from the Ukraine, who understood the soil so well, sometimes dug in her bare feet, so she could get the feel of it. She smelt it, fingered it, treated it with respect and annually produced abundant crops of every kind. Our bright and cheerful Yugoslavian neighbor who had never received schooling and could neither read nor write, was a constant reminder that intelligence has nothing to do with education. Her powers of observation and her memory were incredibly developed, making us realize that in the days of old when history was passed on by word of mouth it may very well have been most accurately transmitted from generation to generation.

When our Hungarian Freedom Fighter, a huge, hearty hard worker, told us that on climbing to the top of a mountain in Banff he had felt as though he could stretch up and "tickle the toes of the angels," I was enchanted by his audacious sense of familiarity with angels! No dyed -in-the-wool Anglican he! And the French Canadian children, so effortlessly bilingual, in speech, writing and reading—perhaps the true Canadian of the future?

Blurring and blending had occured to some degree. We were not producing dances, or music or songs or poets for the future. What sort of heritage had we been producing? What overriding common purpose could be defined?

The old man spoke again. "I think the pain has gone now. Yes I'm sure of it. That's what makes me feel so different."

The pain of relinquishment. It had accompanied us all. For each the people and the objects left behind had been different but the pain was the same. It came unbidden yet powerful. The longing for the salty spray of the sea, the uplifting sight of a magnificent building, or the desire to share an experience with someone far away.

"Sometimes I've wondered if I'd done the right thing. Now I know I did. I have compared the lives of my brothers and their children with the life I have here and I know I've gained more than I gave up. That's why the pain has gone. They had the security of the known and of each other, and I missed that over here — sometimes very much — but my children have had the freedom to become whatever they wanted to become and I have had comfortable results from my labors. I'm not considered rich here — but beside my brother I live like a king. I'm a Canadian and I'm glad." The old man smiled.

This was our common bond. The intense desire to be free to become what we felt we were. Somehow most of us had not achieved this aim completely for ourselves, but it was showing up as an accomplished fact in all the children. We, the people, had felt education to be a vital tool in the growth of an individual. This belief united us with those on the next block and every block throughout this city and across the nation. This was the piece of the fabric we had been weaving. We had been the ones who urged and pushed the development of education, who demanded better pay for teachers, vocational training as well as academic, the availability of university education to all who visited to achieve it, the institution of low interest student loans to make this possible. And we had paid the taxes to support it all.

This was the heritage we had struggled to open up for our children because such opportunities had not been available where we had come from and in many cases was still not available to the present generation living in those countries. The freedom to become whatever they chose and the right to a fair return for their labors. Perhaps not an obvious heritage, like dancing and singing, but a vital one in the development of a child — a Canadian child.

PC's plan nomination

Parties in the Vegreville riding are just getting organized, and as of Wednesday only the Progressive Conservatives have set a nomination day.

The P.C.'s will meet in Vermilion on June 4, and it is expected incumbent Don Mazankowski will again take the nomination. Whether his nomination will be contested is not as yet known.

The Social Credit party is expected to nominate Abe Goerzen, who carried the party's banner in the last election, while the Liberals are talking to Virgil Moshansky, Mayor of Vegreville, who also was a candidate in the last election.

So far as this paper could learn on Wednesday, the NDP have not yet found any name to advance.

In the last election, Don Mazankowski picked up 72 % of the total vote as 19,571 ballots were cast in his favour. Other results were Moshansky (L) 3 771; Jonson (NDP) 2,644; Goerzen (SC) 647; and Stanberg (C) 206

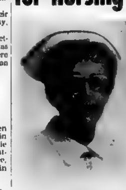
Long history of work for nursing director



Mrs. Mary Erickson was honored at an open house on April 24th when the administration and staff of Bethany Home and Hospital presented her with gifts and a program in appreciation of her 11 years of service at the home. Mrs. Erickson has retired after eight years as director of nursing at Bethany Nursing Home.

On April 18th, the administration and board of directors of the Bethany complex held a retirement banquet for Mrs. Erickson, and presented her with an engraved silver plate.

Mrs. Erickson, daughter of pioneer farmers of Holden district, the late Mr. and Mrs. Henry Sorenson, graduated from Edmonton General Hospital in 1931. Following graduation she took a post-graduate course at Ponoka in psychiatric nursing

Mrs. Erickson then did home nursing in the Holden and Tofield districts. After her marriage in 1935 she was absent from nursing for 18 years, then returned to general duty nursing at Tofield Hospital until 1955.

After spending a year in public health in the Vegreville district, Mrs. Erickson worked at the Smith Clinic in Camrose as a nurse from 1957 to 1963. In that year she went to Bethany Home and Hospital.

When the Bethany Nursing Home was opened in 1965, Mrs Erickson was made director of nursing, a position she held until her retirement. She is still active in Bethany work, as she volunteers her time as replacement staff when extra help is needed.

Peter Ward's Ottawa viewpoint . . .

Beware of 'Swifties' . . .

By Peter Ward

OTTAWA (CEP) — By the third week in April, the entire press gallery buzzed with election speculation. And most of us were convinced we'd get an election campaign within a week of the budget presentation May 6th.

David Lewis and his New Democrats have made it plain would no longer offer support to this government that plays games with the people — like football — while the cost of living is soaring out of sight.

"We've got everything we can get from this government," Lewis told us — and although we've all heard that song before most of us believed him this time.

By the time this column is read we could indeed be into an election campaign. If I were forced to pick a date, I would name sometime in the first two weeks in July, because I'm one of those who believe David Lewis — this time.

But on April 24, Prime Minister Trudeau demonstrated that there is considerable political fight left in his party by announcing the fact that the government had readied a bill to curb excess profits and stop the gouging of consumers. There were even rumors that the bill had been shown in advance to the NDP on approval.

One is forced to conclude that the excess profits law was presented far more for political reasons than from a pure desire to curb rip-offs. There is considerable doubt that the Federal government has the constitutional jurisdiction to enforce pricing edicts set out in that bill.

But supposing the constitutional hurdles can be lasped. Then one is entitled to ask why it took the government roughly one year of watching price spirals to discover not all the markups were legitimate?

The clincher, of course, is that the rough, tough, keep-the-prices-down bill, was served up to defuse a political crisis. One government assistant said to me moments after the P.M. had announced the bill, that we in the press gallery had been foolish to think the government didn't have a few political gimmicks to offer.

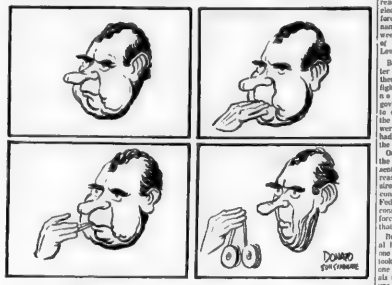
It had indeed been a clever move, but naming it as such certainly diminished the effect of the tactic.

Now supposing that the government does fall on the budget John Turner offers on May 6, as predicted. Trudeau and company will then be in a position to take their case to the voters, claiming that the opposition defeated them and prevented the government from protecting Canadian consumers from the ravages of inflation.

We can, in fact, expect several more pieces of popular legislation to be presented in Parliament within the next week. Those new offered measures, plus the anti-profiteering law, will constitute the first part of the Liberal election campaign.

If there is no ouzoul of the government, then the new laws can be shuffled lower down on the legislative priority list — or not proclaimed when they are passed until the government in its wisdom, thinks they are needed.

Tactics, m'friends, has been the name of the game in Ottawa since October 1972 — not the design and operation of efficient government.



Whelan on food prices

Let me take you on a meat and potatoes tour on the basis of prices of mid-January of this year as collected by the United States Department of Agriculture. While paying 27 cents for a pound of apples in Ottawa, the Americans in Washington, D.C. were paying 35 cents and the Swedes were paying 37 cents. Nineteen cents for yellow onions in Ottawa, 41 cents in Stockholm and 42 cents per pound in Canberra. A pound of tomatoes: 39 cents in Ottawa, 86 cents in Brussels, and 82 cents in Copenhagen. For a dozen eggs: 80 cents in Ottawa, $1.34 in Brussels, $1.24 in Copenhagen and $1.14 in Stockholm. For broilers: 74 cents a pound in Ottawa, $1.10 in Stockholm and $1.35 a pound in Rome. Butter in Ottawa 76 cents a pound, $1.22 in Rome, $1.29 in Paris and Brussels, $1.11 in Holland and $1.25 in Bonn. A pound of cheese: $1.11 in Ottawa, $1.31 in Bonn, $1.55 in Stockholm, $1.35 in Washington, D.C.

What about pork chops? $1.55 in Ottawa, $2.09 in Bonn, $1.90 in Stockholm, $1.80 in the Hague. And what about beef? Sirloin steak in Ottawa per pound $1.81 but twice as much in Bonn, Germany, $3.60; and in Stockholm, even more $3.73 a pound; in Holland $2.95 a pound and in Belgium $2.76 a pound. Need I say more?

But there is another point to be made. In this same list of prices, Canadians and Danes are the ones that pay the highest price for oranges. In fact, Canadians pay twice as much for oranges as do Americans in Washington, D.C. Now you will have noted that oranges are not produced in Canada and importers charge what they like. Therein lies the very reason why I am telling consumers in Canada now to support producers of farm products, as many products as we possibly can, for as large a share of our home market as we possibly can, so that we will not be at the mercy of food importers. That's a point worth thinking about before we jump into an argument about food prices.

...Hon. Eugene F. Whelan

What's wrong now?

Now that the Postal Strike is over, the airport firemen are back on the job, the air traffic controllers agreed not to go out, the dock handler's strike is averted, the bus drivers are back on the job, and the liquor store clerks have broken up their strike, who are we going to blame everything on?

After all, when a job wasn't done on time, we used to be able to blame it on the mail strike, or the airlines strike, or the supply house that was being picketed, or anyway, somebody else. If everybody's back to work again, who can we blame it on now when things aren't done on time, or aren't even done at all? Surely there's someone we can shift the blame to. Isn't there?

Did you say plastic cigarettes?

NEW YORK — Man has always smoked something. He has filled his lungs with coltsfoot, clover, watercress, raspberry and chrysanthemum leaves, peanuts, and even a cigarette known as the dandelion gasper.

Now, through the wonder of science we are offered something else.

Celanese Corporation, known for its chemical products, is working on a nicotine-free smoking product called cytrel. Others are working on similar nonTobacco smoking ingredients.

Cytrel is made of a cellulose church in a plastic it is designed to lower the tar and nicotine yield of cigarettes. The product can be made in shades of color similar to natural tobacco.

Cytrel is meant to be blended with tobacco. It has approximately one-third to one-seventh the [illegible] tobacco in [illegible] cigarettes and when blended with tobacco, presumably reduces [illegible] it contains [illegible] nothing [illegible] it contains [illegible] it can reduce the [illegible] tity of tars [illegible] aints and also [illegible] ditments such as carbon mo- [illegible]

What does [illegible] te like, you ask? According [illegible] ver who's tried it [illegible] a distinct [illegible] ugh, [illegible] different [illegible] ugh [illegible] tobacco [illegible] it [illegible] with [illegible] smell [illegible] no taste pres [illegible] and [illegible] tobacco taste [illegible] cigarette.

Cytrel has been in the [illegible] for 10 years. Virtually all [illegible] research has been done [illegible] land, in conjunction with two major British cigarette manufacturers, Carreras, Rothmans, Ltd., and Gallaher Ltd.

The three companies are now funding a $6 million smoking product research and development program in the United Kingdom. Their findings will be monitored by an independent group created last year by the British government to consider the testing of new smoking materials.

Celanese has five-year supply contracts with the two tobacco companies for the man-made material by 1975, it will have a U.S. production plant in operation that will be able to produce nine million pounds of the stuff annually.

Actually, cigarettes containing cytrel were tested in the U.S. last year. According to Celanese, about 1,000 American smokers are involved in the tests. They smoked cigarettes containing up to 60 per cent of the product. The results, showed, says Celanese that more than 72 per cent preferred the version of 100 per cent tobacco cigarettes. The company also claims that not a single person showed any hesitation about smoking a cigarette containing a synthetic ingredient.

It would appear that manmade materials for smoking have a definite future, at least in Britain. In addition to Celanese Corp.'s tests marketed a 50-50 tobacco supplement last year. And Imperial Tobacco announced its intention to produce cigarettes with a cellulose substitute. It is building a plant in Scotland for that purpose.

The surgeon general's office in Washington has only sketchy information of the cellulose tobacco substitutes and is not in a position to comment at this time.

But anything has got to be better than those lettuce cigarettes

DOLLARS & GOOD SENSE

by WILLIAM J. MARTIN

Today's consumer is leaving no stone unturned in the battle to lower costs, including funeral expenses. This previously seldom discussed expense is being considered by more and more people in terms of preplanning and budgeting.

In many areas, memorial societies and cooperative funeral associations have sprung up to try to beat the high cost of death.

With the average funeral costing about $1,000, not including burial plot or grave marker, many families are either unable or unwilling to pay.

Many feel that the cooperative approach of high volume, low cost funerals will become more popular. Tom Weber, head of one California cooperative, says that Canada and the U.S. are the only two countries in the world that still go for the "archaic" ritual.

Most non-profit societies contract with a local mortician. Members pay a small one-time fee and stipulate the type of arrangements desired, including price payable at death.

Too often, of course, funerals are "purchased" without much thought to cost and without planning or comparison shopping. Such pre-planning, either on your own or through a cooperative society, can ease the burden, both emotional and financial, on survivors.

Readers' questions are welcome and should be sent to Box 5875, London, Ontario.

REDUCING PESTICIDE USE

Agriculture Canada scientists are working towards a reduction in the pesticide used in orchards by relying on the predators of insect pests to help keep tree and fruit damage within economically acceptable limits.

Solve a Crime

BY A.C. GORDON

YOU ARE THE DETECTIVE

The neat, gold letters on the frosted glass of the office door confront you: "RAY HARDING REALTOR." You open the door and walk in, and your attention is immediately caught by the litter of papers on the floor, also the small metal box lying amid the papers.

You turn to the two men who are seated near the desk. "How much money did the box contain?"

Ray Harding answers: "Close to $700 in cash."

The other man, George Loomis, breaks in: "Don't you think you should be out looking for the man who broke into the office here last night, instead of hanging around here asking questions?"

You shake your head at Loomis and say, "The police are already alerted and looking for a man answering the description you turned in. I came here to get a firsthand account from you of what you saw."

"Well," begins Loomis, "I was walking along the street at about 7:30 last night, passed this building and saw a light in Ray's office. Thinking, of course that Ray was doing some overtime work, I decided to drop in for a few words. I was walking down the corridor toward the office here and was just about to open the door, when through the glass I saw this fellow I described earlier to the police. He was working on that metal box with a screwdriver and hammer. I was so startled I couldn't move. I just stood there watching him pry the box open, then stuff his pockets with money. Then I ran across the hall and hid in the broom closet, and from there I heard him come out into the corridor and hurry out of the building."

"And you made no attempt at all to stop him?" you ask.

"I distinctly saw a gun protruding from his hip pocket as he was working on the box here in the office, and I had no intentions of making myself a dead hero!"

Ray Harding now speaks up. "Of course I'm insured against this kind of loss, but all the same I hope you can nail the fellow George described to you."

"I don't know about the man he described," you answer. "But I think I'll take Mr. Loomis to headquarters with me - - on suspicion of having taken the money himself!"

Why do you suspect George Loomis?

SOLUTION

Your suspicions were aroused when Loomis gave a detailed description of the "thief" and of his actions in the office. However, the glass of the office door through which Loomis claimed to have witnessed all this action was FROSTED!

The bride entered the church on the arm of her father, wearing a beautiful gown of white lagoda with full-length sleeves and a high collar. Alcenon lace accented the neckline, bodice and cuffs and the top of the full train. She carried a bouquet of yellow roses.

Attending the bride were her two sisters, Fern and Janet, attired in identical floor length gowns of mint green. They also wore white wide-brimmed hats trimmed with matching green bands and carried bouquets of yellow mums and white daisies.

Attending the groom were his two brothers, Howard and Bill Hammer, both of Edmonton.

The mother of the bride chose a turquoise dress trimmed in white lace and a corsage of red roses. The groom's mother wore a two piece navy and white suit and a corsage of yellow roses.

Rev. Art Dahlen of Faith Lutheran Fellowship Church in Camrose conducted the double ring ceremony. Ushers were Larry Knutson of Edmonton and Rick Hammer of Red Deer. Miss Arlene Dahlen played the wedding music and Mrs. Gladys Dahlen sang "O Perfect Love."

A wedding reception was held for 80 guests at the Rose Grill banquet room. Rev. A. Dahlen acted as master of ceremonies. During the reception musical numbers were given by the Dahlens and also by Fern and Janet Bjorgum. Olaf Anderson and the fathers of the bride and groom gave greetings.

Mrs. Carol Banack of Red Deer was in charge of the guest book. Mrs. Anne Knutson, sister of the bride, assisted with the opening of the many lovely gifts.

For her going away outfit, the bride wore a soft pink fortrel suit. The happy couple left on a ten-day honeymoon to Kelowna, B.C., and other points and are now making their home in Edmonton.

Rain delays seeding plans

With rain falling in all areas again last week, seeding operations have continued to be delayed. No estimates are available as to when farmers might get out on the land.

The situation in Daysland and Hay Lakes is unchanged over that reported last week by the Alberta Wheat Pool.

Estimates of intended acreages in both Meeting Creek and New Norway have been revised slightly.

In Meeting Creek, barley acreage is expected to increase by 30% while rapeseed is to increase 10% with oats remaining about the same and wheat dropping 30%.

Rapeseed and barley are expected to be increased 35% and 25% respectively in New Norway with oats dropping slightly. Wheat and rye acreages will drop about 30% with flax expected to be cut in half.

A report from Tofield indicates that rapeseed will increase slightly with barley dropping a bit while oats and wheat remain unchanged. About 80% of the wheat crop from last year is still unharvested while some barley and oats are still on the ground.

BAD LEGISLATION

Bill 35 to create both a North East Alberta Region and an all powerfull commissioner to oversee it during development of the oil sands and the measure to press it into law, saw a battle in the Legislature.

TOO POWERFUL

Giving so much power to any individual not directly answerable to the elected representatives of the people is so fraught with hazards that the Government's determination to have its own way is difficult to comprehend.

GOVERNMENT USE OF POWER

Of all people, Premier Lougheed has particular reason to tread warily here, rather than storm ahead with no regard for the danger signs. He has already been embarrassed twice by the questionable use of power in the Attorney-General's Department, in the Craig case and Slave Lake Affair. But, obviously the lesson of these two cases has not been grasped.

QUOTES FROM EDMONTON JOURNAL

The above statements came from a portion of an editorial from a paper that hardly ever criticized the present government. This convinces me of how bad the legislation is.

BUSY WEEK

A tree planting ceremony in Fort Sask. on Monday led off a busy week in addition to my Legislative duties.

Friday saw the introduction of a group of Ardrossan High School students to the Legislature Friday night my wife and I were guests of the South Cooking Lake Lions Club at their anniversary night.

Saturday morning was meeting morning in Edmonton followed by "fun and games" in the rain" with the Fire fighters from Sherwood Park Cooking Lake and Ardrossan. Keep up the good work gang!

Saturday nite, off, to a ballet concert and the Fort Ski Club dance. Sunday was Mother's Day breakfast at the Fort Legion followed by the 79th Anniversary church service at Bruderheim Moravian Church. My congratulations to all of our hosts for a very hospitable time.

Comments, problems, questions please phone collect 229-3801, 513-3660 or write to Box 1030, Fort Sask., Alta.

Bacheldors celebrate golden anniversary

An open house was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Bacheldor on May 5th, in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Bacheldor's Golden Wedding Anniversary.

Mr. and Mrs. Bacheoor are long time residents of the New Sarepta-Ministik districts.

Mr Bacheldor came to this part of the country in 1906 with his parents who settled in the Ministik district.

He bought his own farm in 1920 and, on May 3rd, 1924 he married Mary Foley who had come over from Ireland in 1913 with her parents.

The couple farmed until a few years ago when they retired, but, they still live on the same farm.

Mr and Mrs Bacheldor have four children, one daughter and three sons, Molly of Campbell River, B.C., Thomas of Calgary, Robert and Arthur of New Sarepta. They also have 9 grandchildren and 3 great-grandchildren.

Short Week

Monday being an official holiday the Legislature did not sit. Other commitments in the constituency kept me out of the session part of Wed. and Thurs. The Parliamentary Association meeting also took some of the Houses time Thursday evening. The remainder of the time was spent on study of the estimates with fair progress being made.

Farmers Unhappy

Many farmers have phoned me and indicated their displeasure at the assistance given to help out with crops that were left out over the winter. Some people have complained that where 80 acres of crop was left out only 8 acres were given to receive compensation. Another farmer indicated rather jokingly that he was afraid, under the formula used he would end up OWING the Government money. Many farmers, however, indicated that the assistance has helped out with a rather disastrous crop year. I would appreciate more feed back on this matter.

Other Happenings

Wednesday afternoon I had the pleasure of welcoming school students from Brantford on the occasion of their tour of parts of the province. Mrs. Rebecca Coulter of the Rudolph Hennig School and principal Art Carnahan were responsible for a very fine program in honor of the visiting students.

Wed. evening the choral group and stage band presented a very enjoyable concert in the Fort Jr. Hi School.

Town Development

Later Wed. night I attended a public meeting dealing with the future growth of Fort Sask. The developers of the property west of the pineview sub division was discussed as well as the Shopping Centre extension in the downtown area.

Sea Cadet Parade

The Fort Sask. Sea Cadet Corp. put on the best display of seamanship I have ever seen in Fort Sask. on Thursday night. As a past officer of the Corp. I would like to congratulate Lieut. Brooks, Lieut. Lloyd, their officers, cadets, Navy League and Wrenettes on an excellent show.

South Cooking Lake Parade

Saturday morning I had the pleasure of participating in the parade. It is very encouraging to see the return of the "old community spirit" in events just as this. It's a great way for all people to get to know each other just a bit better.

Your comments and problems welcomed. Write c/o the Legislature or Box 1030, Fort Sask. or phone collect 229-3801 or 543-3660, Fort Sask.

"SATAN IN THE SANCTUARY"
Until recently the clear, biblical prediction of the Temple standing in Jerusalem during the final chapters in history seemed an impossibility. But now, since Israel gained control of the Temple right in the 1967 war, the possibility is not nearly so remote. In this explosive, controversial book the author carefully examines the prophecies of the rebuilding of the Temple and the events that will focus on the Temple in the days ahead.

Two candidates seek nomination

Two candidates have been declared to seek nominations in the Vegreville Constituency in the forthcoming Federal election.

Don Mazankowski, the incumbent MP will once again try for the Tory nomination at a convention in Vermillion on June 4th at which George Hees will be the guest speaker.

Mr. Mazankowski is not expected to be opposed.

Ronald C. Harris of Lloydminster has announced that he will seek to become the Liberal candidate. Mr. Harris operates a business in Lloydminster, is married, has 11 children, some of whom are married.

The Liberal nominating convention will be held in Lloydminster on Wednesday, May 29th in the Walker Memorial Hall.

No candidates have been declared by either the Social Credit or NDP parties.

A chance to regroup

The Canadian system of government probably has many faults, and many of our politicians take pains to point them out to us from time to time, but surely one of its virtues is that by no stretch of the imagination could it tolerate for long such a situation as the Watergate seems unfolding in the United States. While the American elected representatives fume and pontificate, and while the public is filled with revulsion at the revelations of the way the American way of life has been subverted, the system nonetheless carries on, and even extraordinary efforts are impotent to arrest the course . . . clearly it will take practically superhuman effort to change things before the statutory four-year election.

By contrast, a Canadian prime minister would find it absolutely impossible to carry on in the face of such a situation, and in point of fact, it was far less dissatisfaction that led to the present election.

Whether we'll come out of the election with much of a change in the actual picture is hard to guess at this time, but the point is, the situation was interrupted, and the common people are being given a chance to get their voice in, and say whether they like the way things were being done.

It's devoutly to be hoped we'll never go through the experience of a Watergate, but should such a development occur here, it's incomprehensible that the government would stand for almost any period at all, after it was found out.

Biculturalism: learn French

The Bourassa government in Quebec seems to have developed a new definition or interpretation of biculturalism, which translated simply mean "Learn French".

Not only does the proposed new languages act in that province suggest French as the official language in the province, but it would insist that the language of schools, both for children of French-speaking AND English-speaking homes, must be French.

The official language may annoy some of us, who are used to being English-speaking in an English-speaking world, but it doesn't seem too unreasonable . . . after all, English is the official language in Alberta. At least, we think it is, and certainly, this is the practice.

That doesn't mean, however, that Alberta insists the only language of instruction must be English. Indeed, French has been the language in one school in Edmonton for many years, and there are several others, north of Edmonton, where French becomes the norm rather than the exception.

Bicultural must be just as misunderstood in Quebec as is neutral, where Mr. Bourassa promised to be neutral in the federal election, then turned around and warmly, pointedly, and meaningfully endorsed the Trudeau administration. That's neutralism for you. It's also biculturalism for you: on the basis of two languages everywhere else, but French alone in Quebec.

How can Mr. Trudeau (or anyone else) wonder at what they say is growing alienation in the West, and other parts of Canada. Don't talk to the older generation, rather, talk to the young. Idealists as they often are, they're seriously disenchanted with this display of one-sided-[illegible]

Bill No. 55 Battle

The battle over Bill No. 55, The North East Alberta Region Commission Act was again the highlight of this week's sitting of the Legislature

Three days were spent on debate on the setting up of a Commissioner to oversee a large portion of the province. The wide ranging powers given to the government appointed commissioner are the main bone of contention

Legislature By-passed

The Commissioner, who will be appointed by the Premier and the Cabinet, will not have to answer to the Legislature but only to the Cabinet. Our contention is that any one individual given such wide ranging power should be made to answer to the entire Legislature. Any one given the power to completely by-pass 12 Acts of the Legislature must be made answerable to the whole Legislature, or else why is a democratic system required?

I will not support their bad legislation. Many Amendments were brought in by our side of the House but, absolutely none were accepted.

Flood Aid Extended

Early last week I asked to have an extension to the May 15 deadline for the application for assistance for crop damage. The Minister assured the House that there was no such deadline, but I wish he would tell his Department that this is so, because the farmers felt that there was a deadline as indicated by the Department staff

FOR YOUR INFORMATION

Some ladies asked me recently if it is still less costly to bake your own bread rather than buy it. I checked with our food specialists. They suggest that it is still cheaper to bake your own provided you don't count labor. They feel that the increase in ingredients (flour, lard, etc.) has been balanced by a similar increase in the price of bread.

IN MEMORIAM

BILYK — In loving memory of husband, father, Zane Bilyk, who passed away May 26, 1973.

The blow was great, the shock severe little thought his death so near
The wound is deep, it will not heal
Only God knows how to feel
You shared my love, my hopes, my tears
Thank you dear for the happy years
I laugh, I cry, I play my part
But behind it all, lies a broken heart.

—Forever loved and sadly missed by your wife Helen and children. 39c2113

The Mock Parliament got underway at one o'clock with each party having a caucus. The afternoon sitting was then held, followed by a banquet in the Ryley Community Hall and then, an evening session was held

Plans for holding the Mock Parliament have been made for some time, although the elections we e rather hastily held. Since the first ever such attempt was considered a big success, students are planning on making it an annual affair.

Mennonites celebrate century mark in Canada

The year 1974 is a year of celebration for Mennonites in Canada. Just one hundred years ago the first pioneer Mennonites entered this land of opportunities to establish homes for themselves and their families and to make productive the virgin prairie and bushlands of the country.

The Mennonites of Tofield and district will be conducting a special celebration service in the Community Hall in the afternoon of June 9th beginning at 2:00 p.m. remembering the various waves of Mennonite migration to this country, and celebrating one hundred years of life and opportunities in the wonderful land of Canada.

The service will include hearty singing in the spirit of Thanksgiving, well prepared historical information, a cautious look into the future; and, the celebration will conclude with a coffee fellowship, giving opportunity for visiting and reminiscing.

An open invitation is extended to all to attend this celebration.
